Senior Class of 1967

Herbert Hoover High School

4474 El Cajon Blvd.

San Diego 15, California

June, 1967

Hoover's student body moved with the lively beat of life. There were over two thousand people always in a hurry from one place to another. Two thousand people jammed the halls in the morning, two thousand people jammed the grounds at lunch, and two thousand people jammed the busses and parking lots at 2:30.

Two thousand people claimed Hoover as their school. They attended dances, assemblies, football games and rallies, and finished their homework at eleven o'clock on Sunday nights.

Two thousand people opened two thousand lockers and caught eight thousand falling books, four thousand pencils, eight thousand loose papers, two thousand notebooks, and one thousand sack lunches.

Two thousand seven hundred students hailed Hoover High—a school full of life and proud of its people.

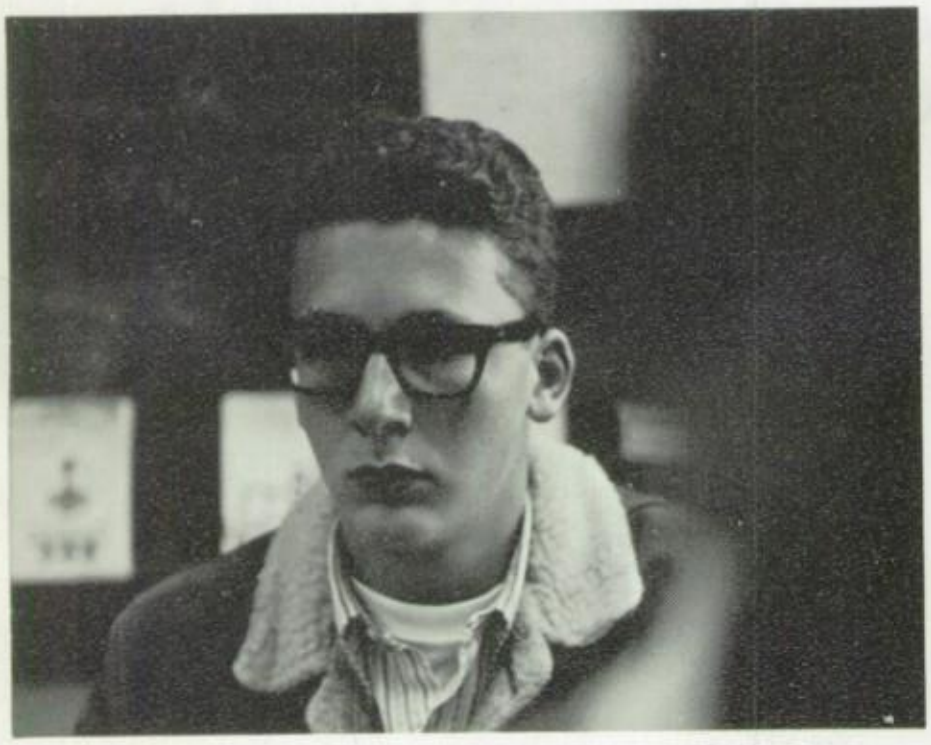
Pulsated With the Beat of Life

Hard Study Reduced Loud

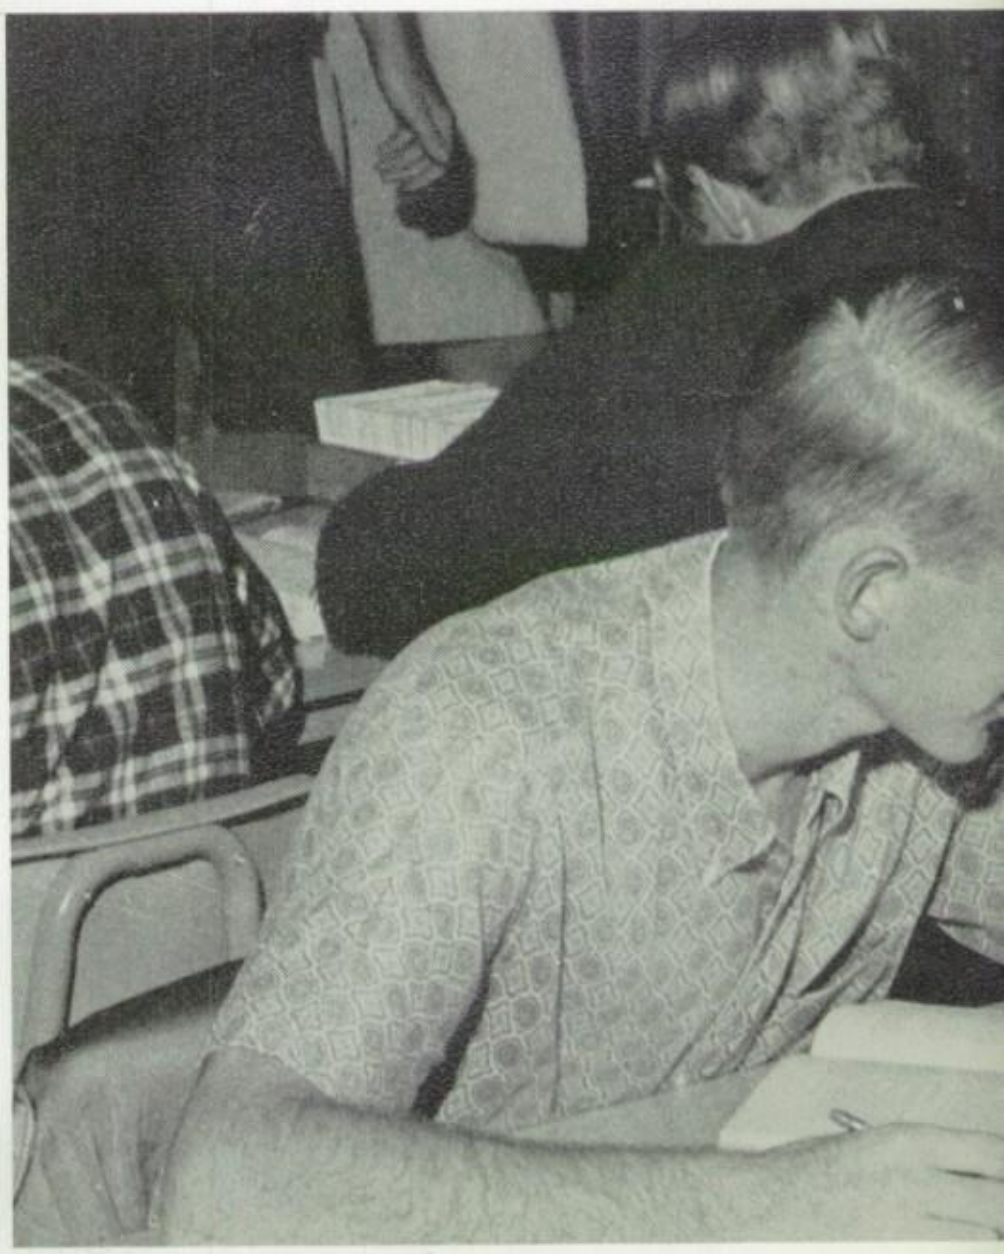


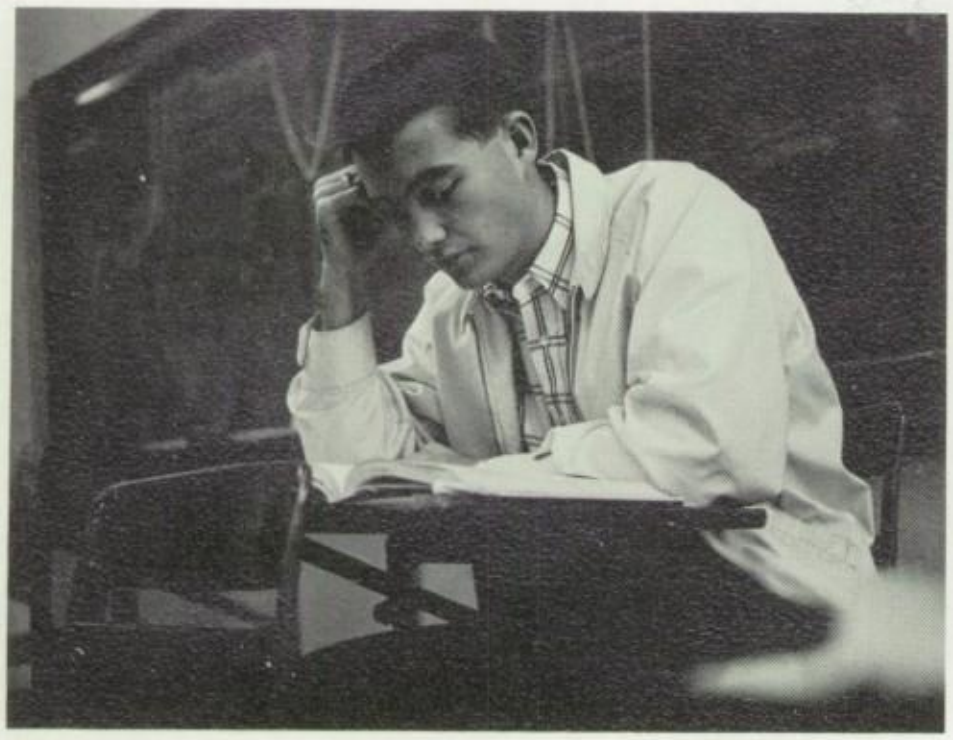
Despite the widespread belief among parents, school wasn't all fun. In fact, for some it wasn't fun at all, especially when homework wasn't done or tests weren't expected. Oftentimes pop quizzes darkened many students doorways, not to mention the grade books, and there was nearly always some inconvenience cropping up, such as having read the wrong chapter in biology.

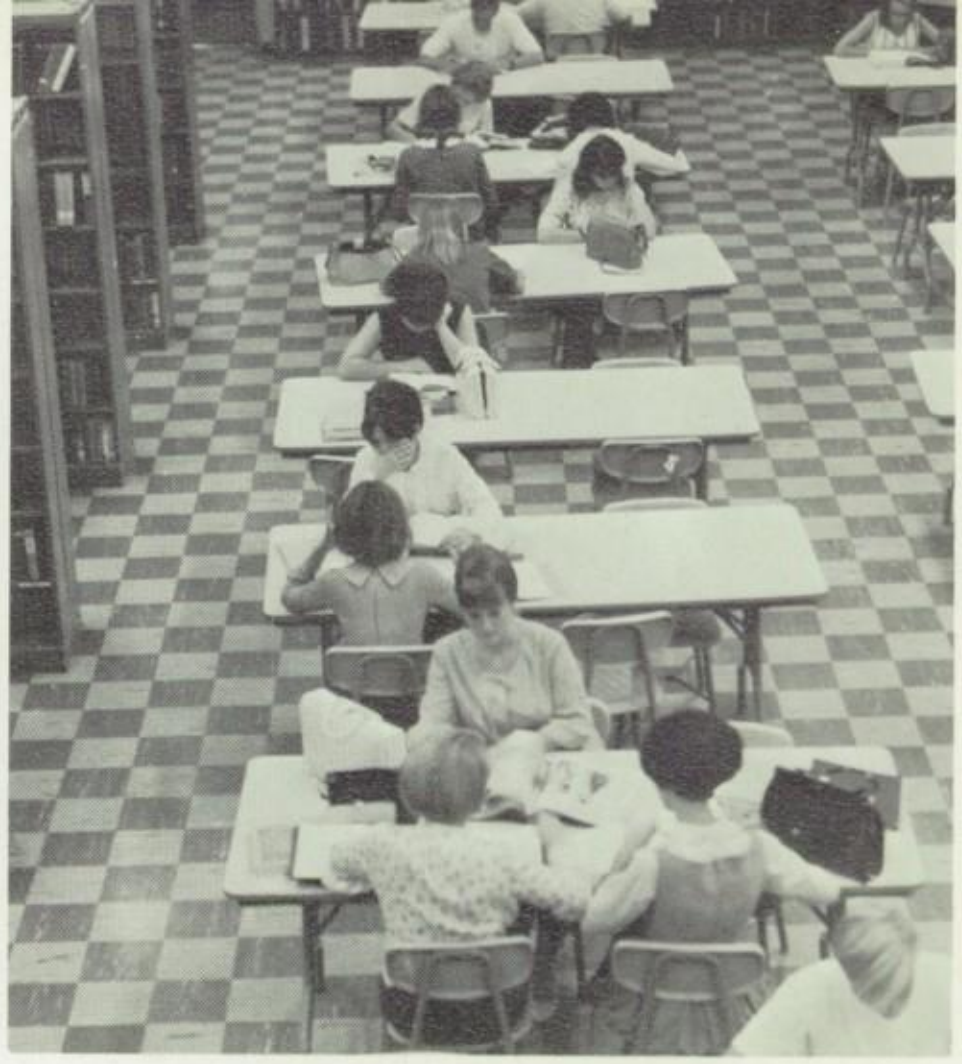
Then, of course, there were the lecture periods—the latest bore—and the chemistry experiments—the latest blast—not to mention the days in the language lab, where the students were exposed to fifty-five minutes of taped conversation which, nine times out of ten, was completely unintelligible.

For some, study hall was a welcome rest from the day's harsh routine. It gave tired students a chance to relax after all the studying and cramming for the big math test. For others it was an eleventh-hour godsend, especially during final exam week.

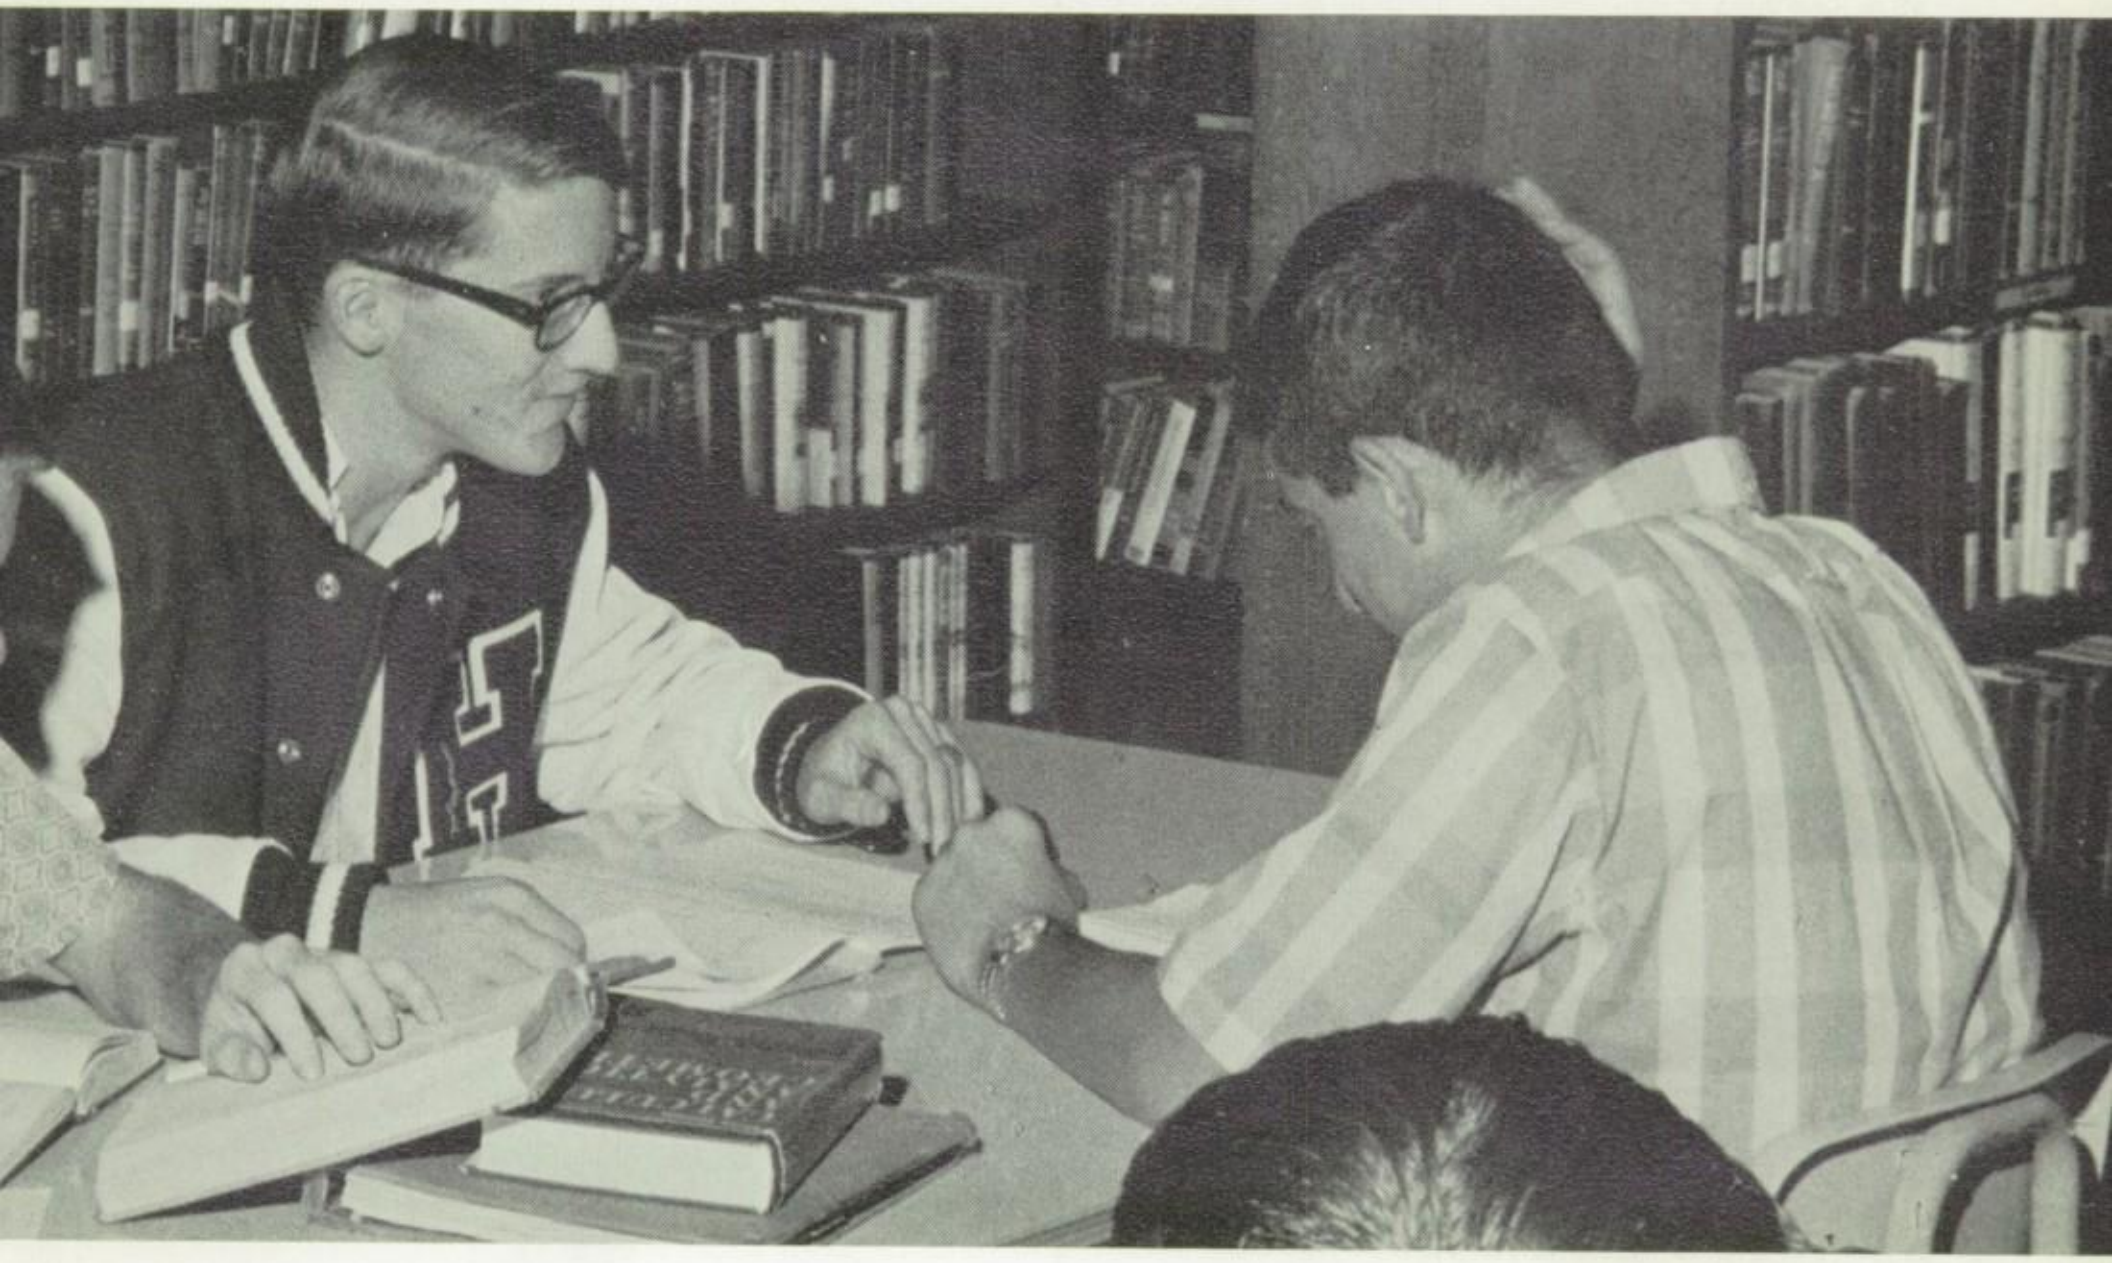
But even though the work was grueling and the quizzes were tough, there was still time for a quick chat in the library, a wink across the room, and a sigh of relief after the test, which seemed to relieve the tension and which made it all worth while.



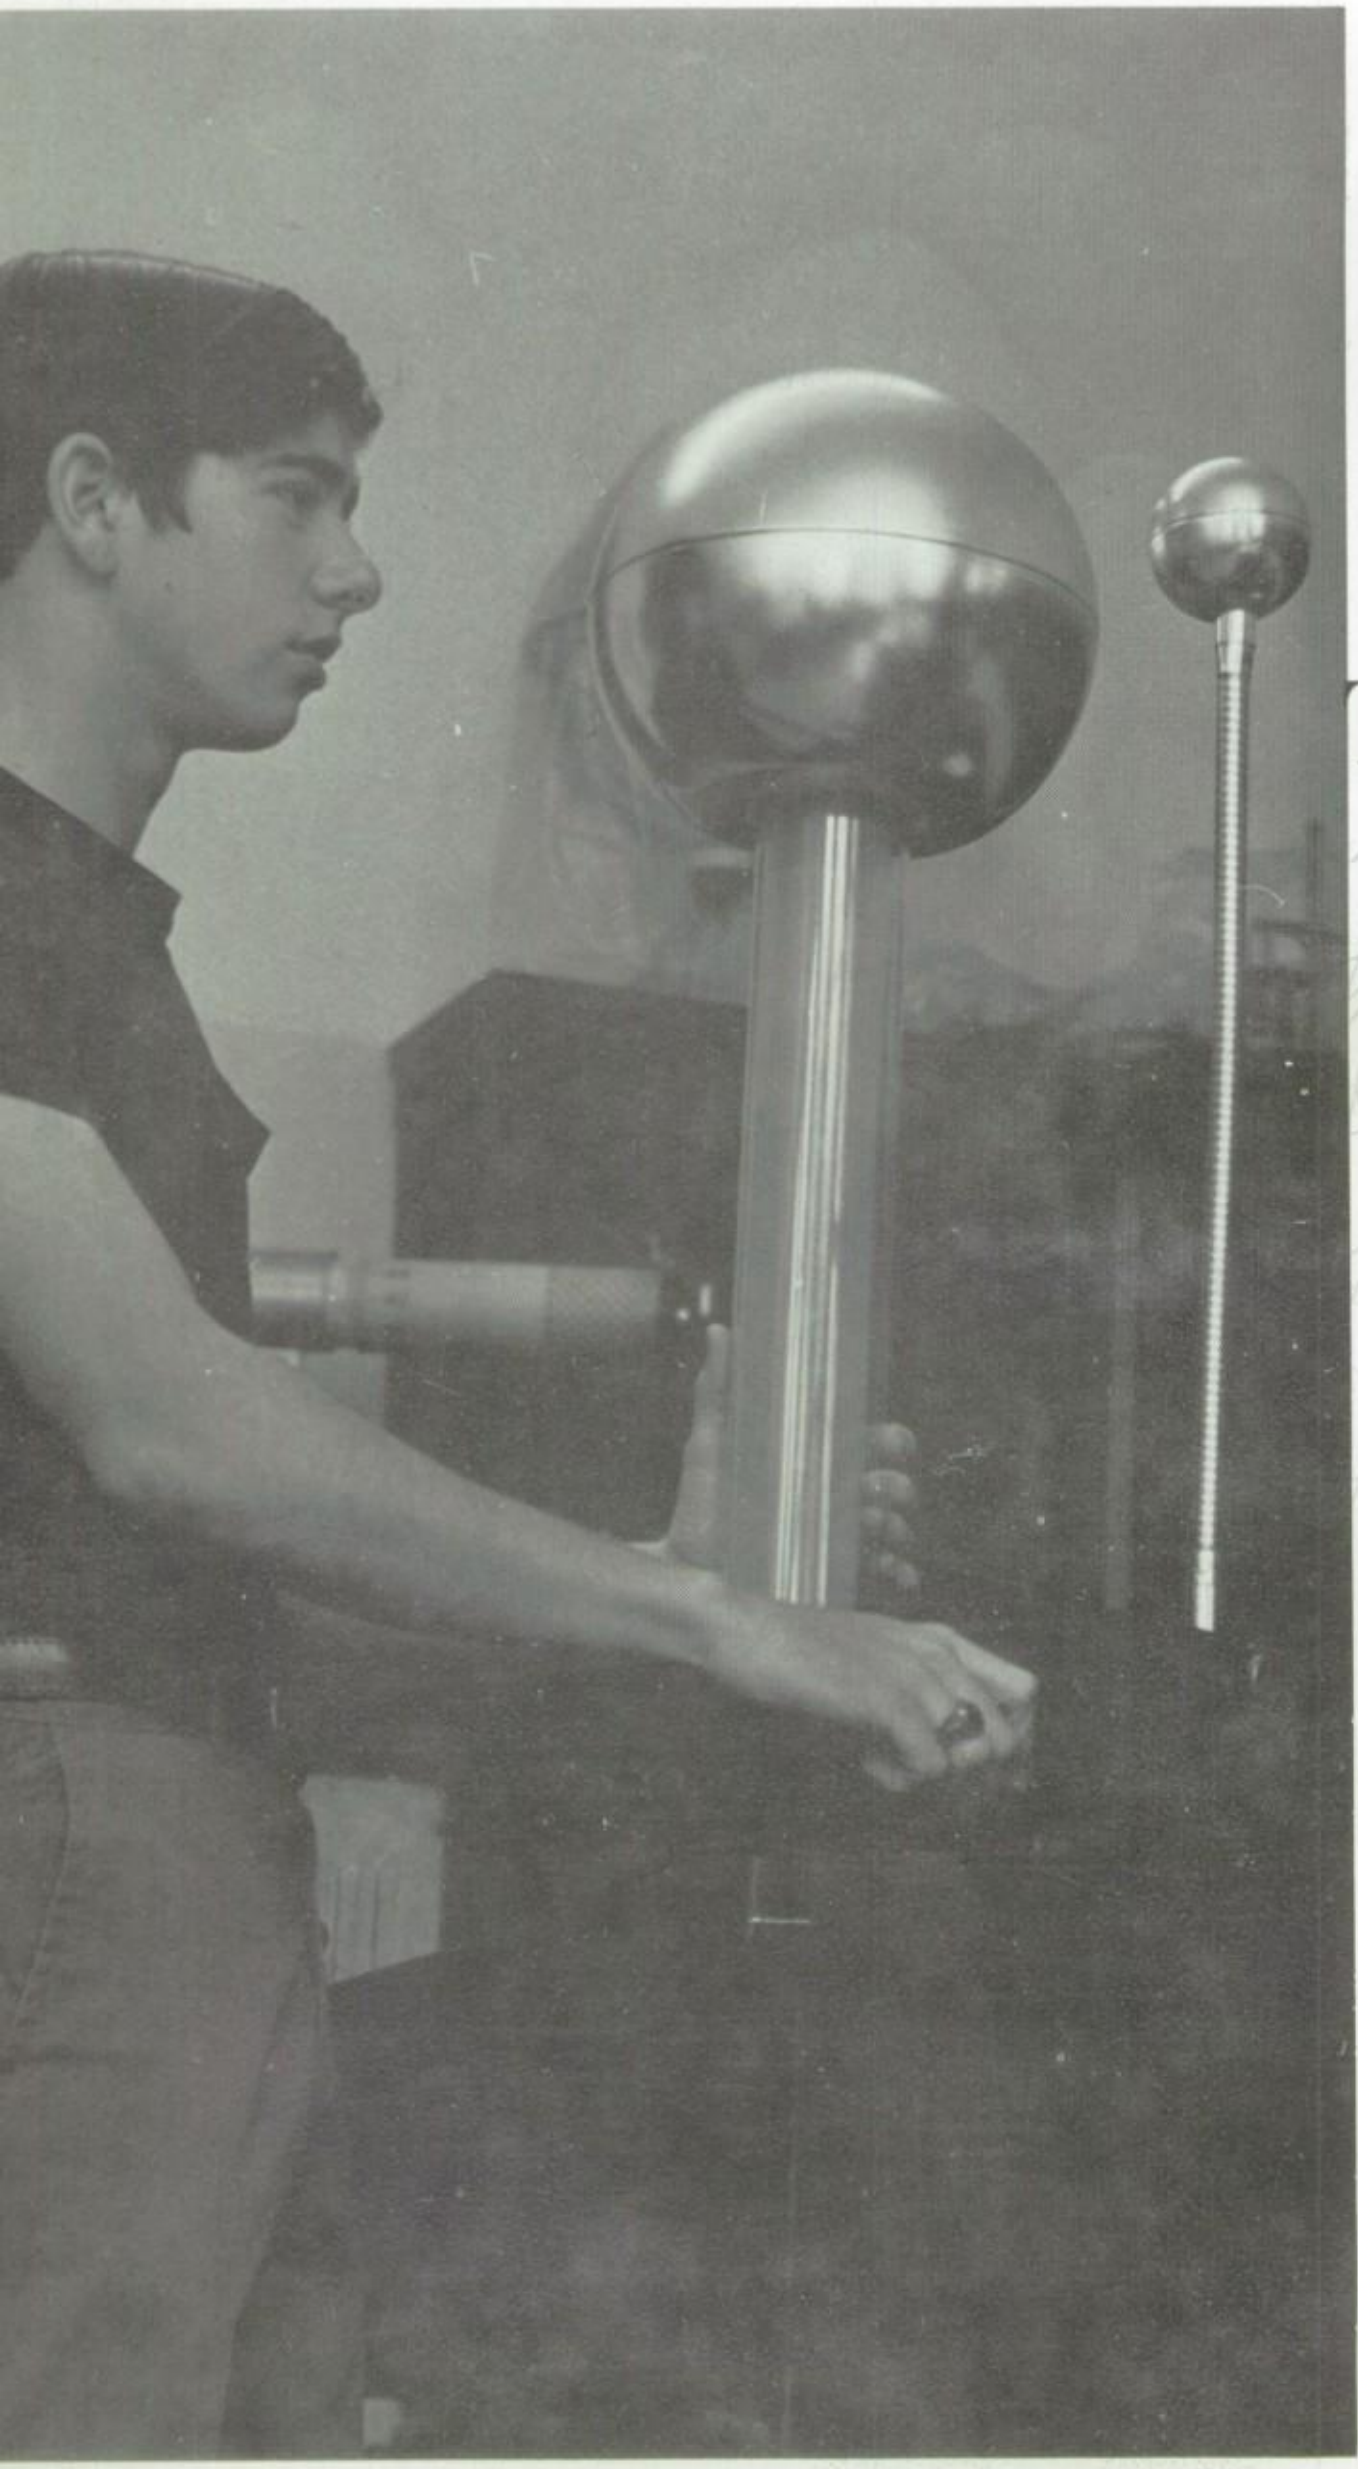


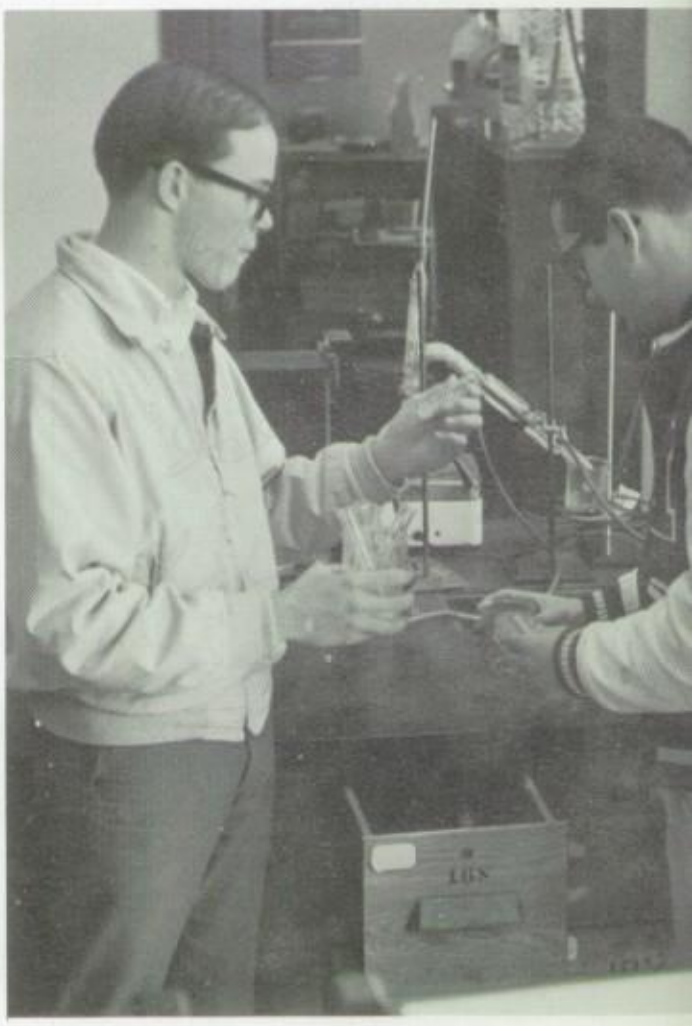


Shouts to Mental Vibrations



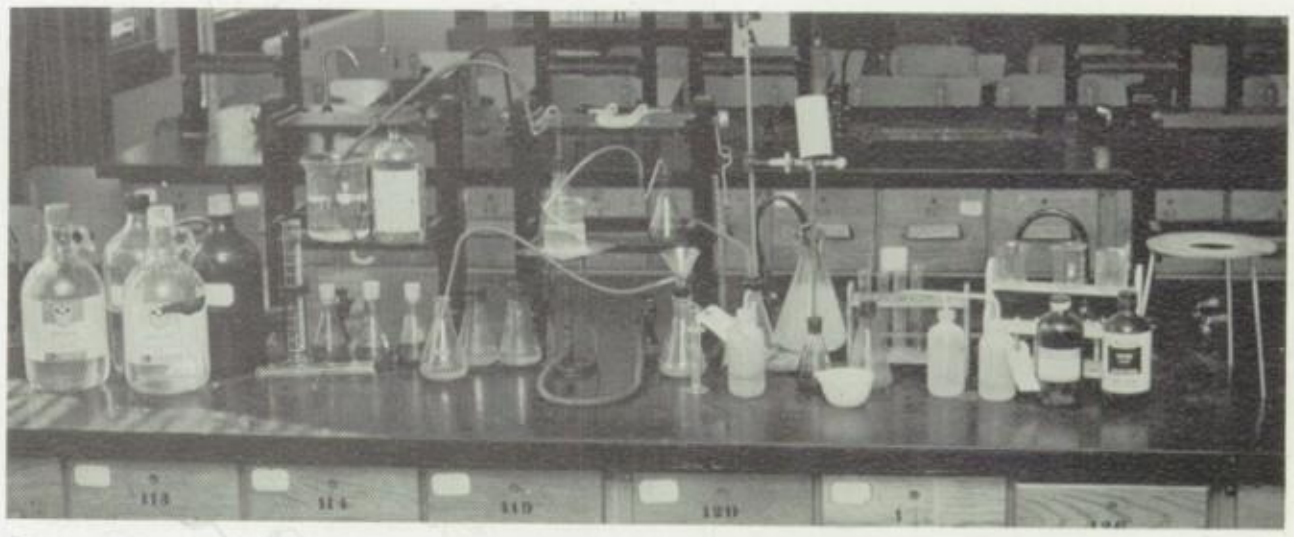
The Scientific



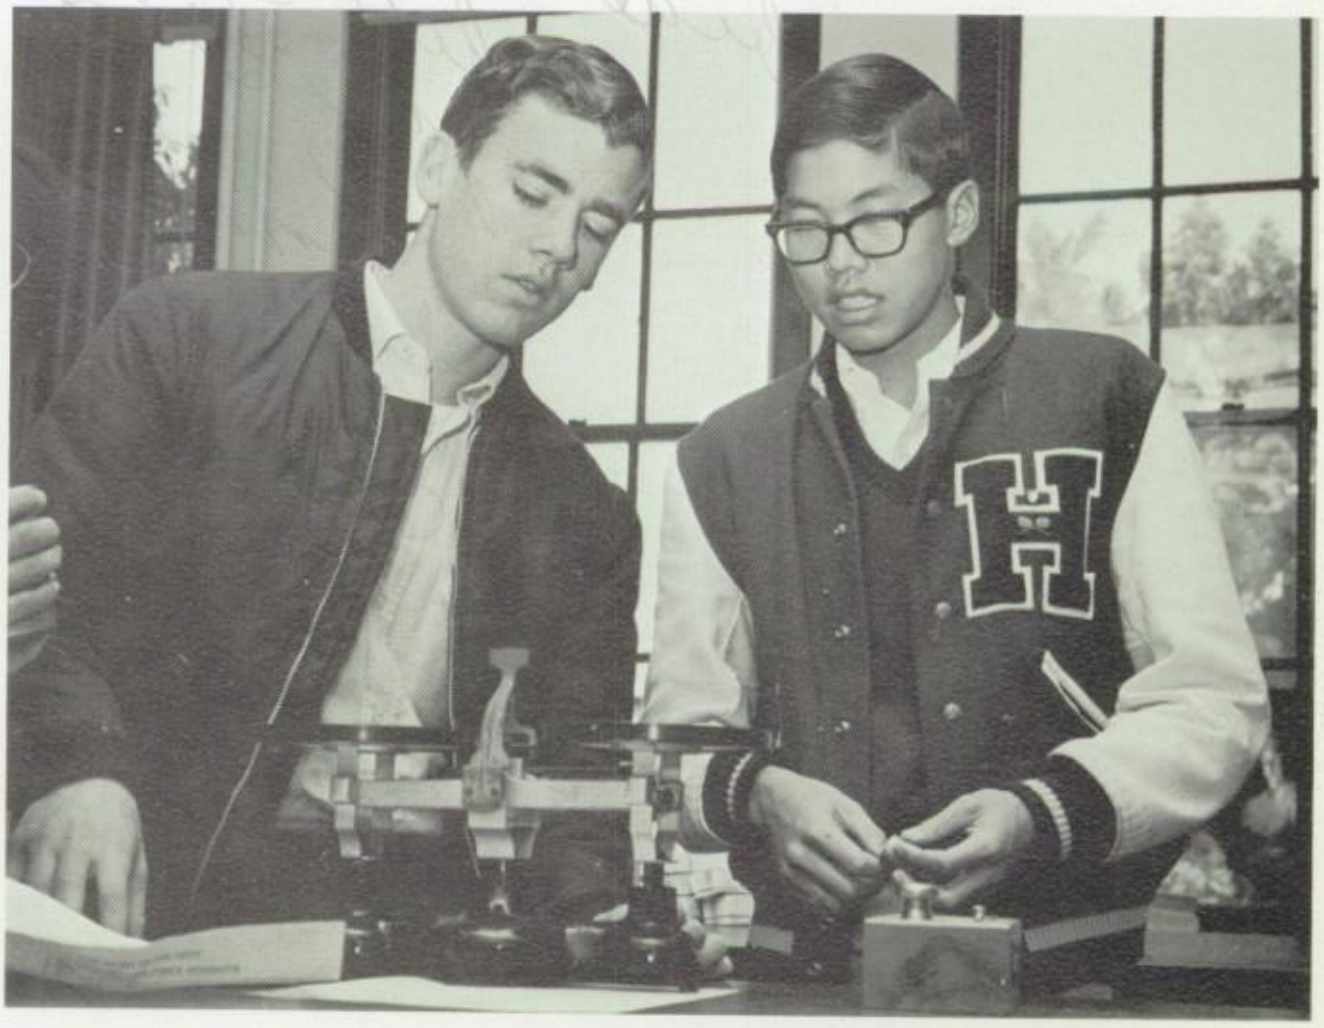


In the last decade, a new method of study was introduced into the school system. It was not honestly meant to torture students, but rather to increase their understanding of the world around them. However, many people felt that the scientific method was just a brand-new nuisance dreamed up by some wild man in a laboratory.

Actually, there was nothing particularly new or modern about the method; is was an old device used by many, many people to "keep the thinking straight." This idea has escaped quite a few.



Method: a Way to Study the World



The scientific method was taught again this year to Hoover students by some very dedicated members of the teaching profession. It was put to work by people such as Marie Curie and now, young people put it to work in the chemistry lab. Sometimes, it was even put to work outside of school, but no one is really too sure of the results.

Because the world is becoming more and more scientific, it stands to reason that the scientific method would be the best way to get things done. It has proved to be so.

This year marked the passing of a great man in the field of journalism: Mr. Henry Luce, founder of Time-Life publications. Mr. Luce (pictured opposite) worked long and hard to make Time-Life-Fortune what it is today, and as a result, we have magazines to read and the journalism tradition of excellence through hard work.

Both the newspaper and yearbook staffs took Mr. Luce's corporate hint, and literally slaved over tons of copy and pictures in order to let the students know what was going on at their school. The Cardinal staff produced a prize-winning paper and the Dias Cardinales staff put together the proverbial "best yearbook" in the finest Luce tradition.

Much work and late hours were last ditch defenses against the creeping deadline, and even though much personal sacrifice was made, the end results proved to be rewarding.

Luce, Journalism, and School Paper: Work!

Men of Today Opened the Door

Death could have come in any number of bizarre and heroic ways to the first three U.S. astronauts to die on duty, such as the explosion of an errant rocket viewed by millions of TV observers. But when they were killed on January 27 of this year they were reclining on padded couches in their Apollo capsule, routinely running through the countdown of a simulated launch in preparation for the real blast-off. Their vehicle constructed to hit the moon never got closer than the tip of a saturn rocket—less than a mile above the launching pad.

Sacrifices and failures are to be expected because man is imperfect. "New as it is in the history of mankind's progress, the conquest of space symbolizes one of man's oldest, most basic drives for hunger, the lure of every new frontier, the challenge of the impossible. And that is the legacy left behind by Virgil Grissom, Edward White, and Roger Chaffee—just as it was by men like Marco Polo, Charles A. Lindbergh and explorer Robert Falcon Scott, whose memorial bears an inscription from Tennyson's Ulysses: 'To strive, to seek, to find, and not to yield'." It is in this spirit and with these men as our inspiration that the DIAS CARDINALES staff dedicated this yearbook to the class of '67.

Able Administrators

Mr. C. Russell Henzie, principal of Hoover High School, believed in student rights. He believed that Hooverites had the right to a decent lunch court, improved laboratory facilities and a comprehensive academic program. The groundwork he laid in his second year at Hoover will be realized and appreciated by future classes. Mr. Henzie will be remembered by the class of '67 as a man of spirit, who believed in and followed the rules, and who was behind us all the way.

Principal's Message

"Another eventful year has come and gone for Hoover High School. We trust that for you Seniors this has been one of the most profitable and memorable years in your public school careers.

"It is not an easy, smooth nor comfortable road that lies ahead of you. These are trying times. This is a period of confusion, and the world trembles with uncertainty. Many of your elders are pessimistic and doubtful for the future of our civilization. Those of us better acquainted with all youth of today realize that the 'kooks' of your generation—as in ours—represent only a small proportion of you. This new world is your arena; make the most of the very challenging opportunity that lies in practically every field of endeavor. You have displayed the initiative, the courage, the leadership, the perseverance, and, we trust, we have assisted in preparing you with the knowledge to make a real impact upon the society into which you are graduating.

"We are proud of you, the class of 1967, and wish you 'Godspeed' in your future lives."

Employed with the preparation of introducing the Amigos to their American families, Mr. Henzie and Mr. Cassie issued name tags to each Amigo and his host.

Exerted Abilities to Improve Hoover

Whenever in doubt, have students look it up in the dictionary. This was Mrs. Lois Ruffa's frequent advice when assisting the faculty of the English department. She was shown here with Mr. William Thrailkill.

Always thinking ahead in order to assure the best for the coming generation, Mr. William Matthie worked diligently in estimating the student enrollment for the next school year.

Mr. William Matthie was always seen smiling on our campus. As Vice-Principal, Mr. Matthie co-ordinated student activities, prepared the master calendar and schedule and had administrative direction of our athletic program. He has been an active member of the Kiwanis Club. For thirteen years Mr. Matthie has coached Little League. He spent his relaxation time fishing and coaching football.

Mrs. Lois Ruffa, Girls' Vice-Principal, directed the Counseling Department and worked with the Chairmen of the English, Girls' P.E. and Home Economics Departments in evaluating course offerings.

Being friendly and considerate, Mrs. Ruffa was naturally suited for helping Hoover coeds with their problems. During her twenty-four hour a day job, she found time for golfing and listening to classical music.

Having two sons in college, Mr. Leslie Cassie has obtained first hand experience in coping with the problems of Hoover's boys. As well as being the supervisor of our Math, Science, and Industrial Arts Departments, Mr. Cassie also had the added task this year of directing our Amigo Program. Scouting for the Yankees and golfing were two outlets enjoyed by our athletically minded Vice-Principal.

Costing $20,000 the Ted Williams Field was expected to help the Cardinals win more games. According to Mr. Leslie Cassie, "Hoover used to have the worst baseball field, and now we have the best—thanks to the students, faculty, and community for their generosity in subscribing funds to build the field."

The doors to Mr. Fulton Vickery's office were always open to those who sought advice or who just wanted a delightful conversation. As Hoover's head counselor Mr. Vickery was privileged to tour the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs for the benefit of those boys interested in attending the Academy. Mr. Vickery was also a great aid in advising the Senior Cabinet.

"Open Door Policy" Was Encouraged

Mrs. Patricia Kintzer's neat character and personality were a vital part of the Hoover way of life. She taught Special Social Studies and Vocational Math. Being a special advisor, she kept close contact with Mrs. Nelina Enos, who taught Special Reading Improvement, English 3-4, Math Improvement, and Vocational English.

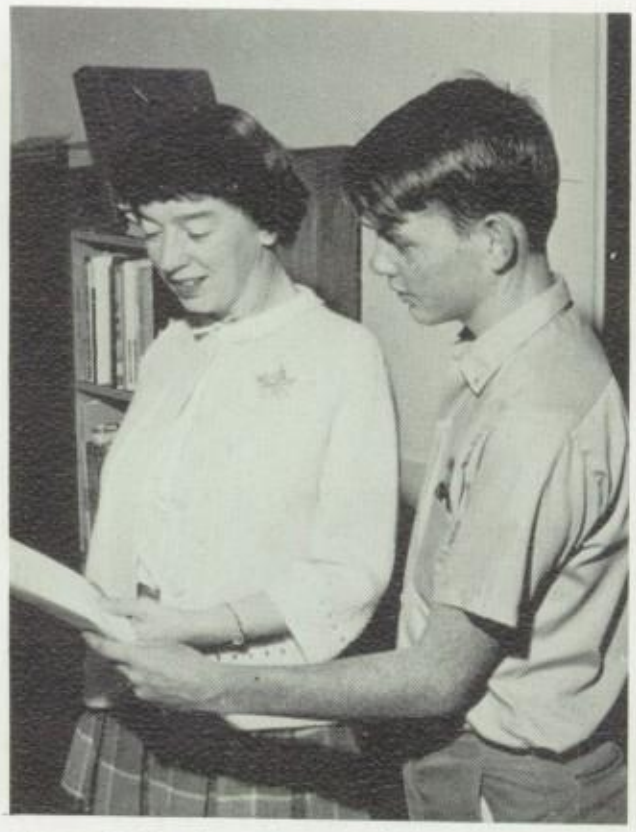
Mr. Kenneth Dowell was held in the utmost respect by members of the student body. He was kept quite busy as our ASB advisor, interclass counselor, and as a U.S. history teacher.

Our counselors were the very backbone of our strong spirits. These dedicated counselors were always available and ready to help any person with any type of problem. After a visit to the counseling office, students were encouraged by the kindness, understanding, and sound advice that their counselors gave them.

Scheduling class programs for the entire student body was only one of the time consuming duties that the counselors accomplished. They assisted students in selecting classes which met graduation, college entrance, and future career requirements. Our advisors played an even more important role than administering their written duties—they were personal friends.

This year more than ever, Mrs. Gleason, work counselor, and Mrs. Oatman, scholarship advisor, were busy finding jobs and obtaining scholarship information for qualified Hooverites.

Miss JoAnne Beavan always had time to talk with seniors about their future vocations despite her busy schedule as a Cardinal Co-Ed advisor and attendance coordinator.



Mrs. Doris Oatman was shown giving instructions to a college bound senior in completing necessary forms when applying for a California State Scholarship.

Mrs. Margaret Gleason, Hoover's work counselor, contacted local business establishments and obtained many available jobs to suit the student's ability.

by Our Compromising Counselors

Mr. Wendall Allen's friendly personality welcomed seniors to his office to discuss their future educational opportunities. As a test coordinator, he referred to his files in determining a student's aptitude.

Mr. Richard Woolley and Mrs. Theresa Volz guided the class of '68 during their active junior year. It was a year of many crucial decisions such as planning for the Junior Prom and Junior Fun Nite.

Mr. Herb Foote and Mrs. Elayne Morris led and encouraged the sophomore class with whom they will remain until their graduation from Hoover. They advised sophomores to take courses that would better prepare them for further study in college.

Order Prevailed and Chaos Was

Mr. Schurer Moe, Hoover's assistant librarian, placed worried minds at ease by aiding students with term papers and research projects.

Seated: Ruth Precourt, Library; Lillian Kinzer, Financial Office; Standing: Diane Peterson, Counseling Office; Christine Shelton, Registrar; Doris Lisenbee, School's Clerk; Virginia Dossey, Library; Evelyn Hall, Attendance Office; Velma Fleming, Attendance Office; Margaret Sampson;

Checking procedures at the card catalogue and ordering new books requested by the faculty were among the numerous duties of our head librarian, Miss Anita Gillette.

Adding to the efficiency and organization of Hoover's bookroom were our library clerks, Mrs. Ruth Precourt and Mrs. Virginia Dossey.

Battling noise, confusion, and chatter kept our librarians busy but did not prevent them from operating the bookroom efficiently. The issuing of 25,000 textbooks at the beginning of the school year was the largest project fulfilled by Hoover's library staff. Our librarians and clerks kept abreast of the best recent literary works through the use of national library magazines and newspaper reviews.

In November 700 new books with subjects ranging from history to science were displayed. More than 18,000 books were housed, organized and interpreted to meet the broad and varying demands of some 200 students who used the library daily.

Prevented Through Proficient Personnel

Nurse's Office; Catherine Hasty, Attendance Office; Lucille Hallford, Main Office.

Barely eighty per cent of Hoover's student body conquered the 48 hour flu bug, which kept the Attendance Office secretaries at a frantic pace. Always efficient and polite, the twelve secretaries were seen working in offices which served as Hoover's reception centers for the public. Sending bulletins, keeping files up to date, and supplying information to inquisitive persons were but a few of the daily tasks of Hoover's secretaries in aiding the administrative staff.

Who were the men behind the scenes this year keeping our campus looking neat and in good condition? They were the fifteen custodians working at Hoover on a staggered time schedule beginning at 6:00 A.M. Their duties ranged from the small maintenance work of replacing lights to the larger job of clearing away water on cold rainy mornings.

Keeping Hoover clean was a job of our friendly custodians: M. Black, R. Boyd, R. Buck, E. Cramton, F. Crawford, F. Gable, R. La Belle, L. Miller, L. Rittenhouse, M. Romero, head custodian, B. Schaffer, and M. Toye, pictured.

First aid and comforting advice were frequently administered to Hooverites by Mrs. Helen Baldauf, our school nurse.

Would you believe 169,480 sandwiches as well as 178,000 cartons of milk were sold to starving students during the school year? Carefully planned menus to meet the required nutritional values were served daily to 700 students. Working on different shifts from 5:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m., the cafeteria staff consisted of 17 ladies and 18 students sharing in their duties of setting up counters, servings, washing dishes, and cleaning cafeteria tables and kitchen.

Thirty-six disabled students limped around Hoover's campus on crutches during the fall semester. A steady stream of forty students visited the nurse's office daily with complaints ranging from cramps and colds to simple fractures and burns. Mrs. Sampson, the nurse's secretary, gave her invaluable assistance in keeping files up-to-date as well as standing by in emergencies.

G. Carlino symbolizes the efficiency of Hoover's cafeteria staff: V. Aillaud, Gibson, B. Gray, manager, M. Dietrich, M. Fall, J. Henderson, D. Koch, R. Lombardo, V. Slobe, and I. Zaniowka.

Traffic violators were the sole supporters for the Driver's Training Program. This program was paid for by the capital derived from parking, speeding, and improper driving tickets. In the trailer, the automobile simulator presented actual situations which the driver may meet while driving in heavy and hazardous traffic conditions. Because of the new law that went into effect July, 1967, more students than ever took advantage of this course.

Reserve Officers Training Corps provided high school boys an excellent background in the military field. Federal inspection and participation in a City-Wide Field Day were but a few of the activities scheduled for ROTC cadets this year. In addition to receiving military training and practice in discipline and leadership, cadets served Hoover by keeping order at football games.

SFC Kenneth Chance was demonstrating the correct way of holding a bazooka gun to his ROTC class. One hundred and forty-nine rifles were neatly stacked to accommodate a

Educational Opportunities Were

Since the 1920's, visiting teachers have come from the Ed Center to Hoover to counsel students concerning their future plans. Their main job was to help students adjust to the educational opportunities being offered at Hoover.

As Administrative Assistant, Mr. Lynch was mostly employed with the duties assigned by Mr. Henzie. He was responsible for the training of student and faculty in the use of audio-visual equipment. He also had the task of supervising SDSC teacher aides for lunch supervision.

An amazing number of students took advantage of having their own private tutor. Under the direction of Mr. Moe, six qualified TA's helped students help themselves.

Every young lady should learn the art of being a good homemaker. This knowledge includes sewing, cooking, childcare, and the concepts of a safe and clean home. Whether a young lady pursues a career or plans for marriage, she must learn these basic fundamentals.

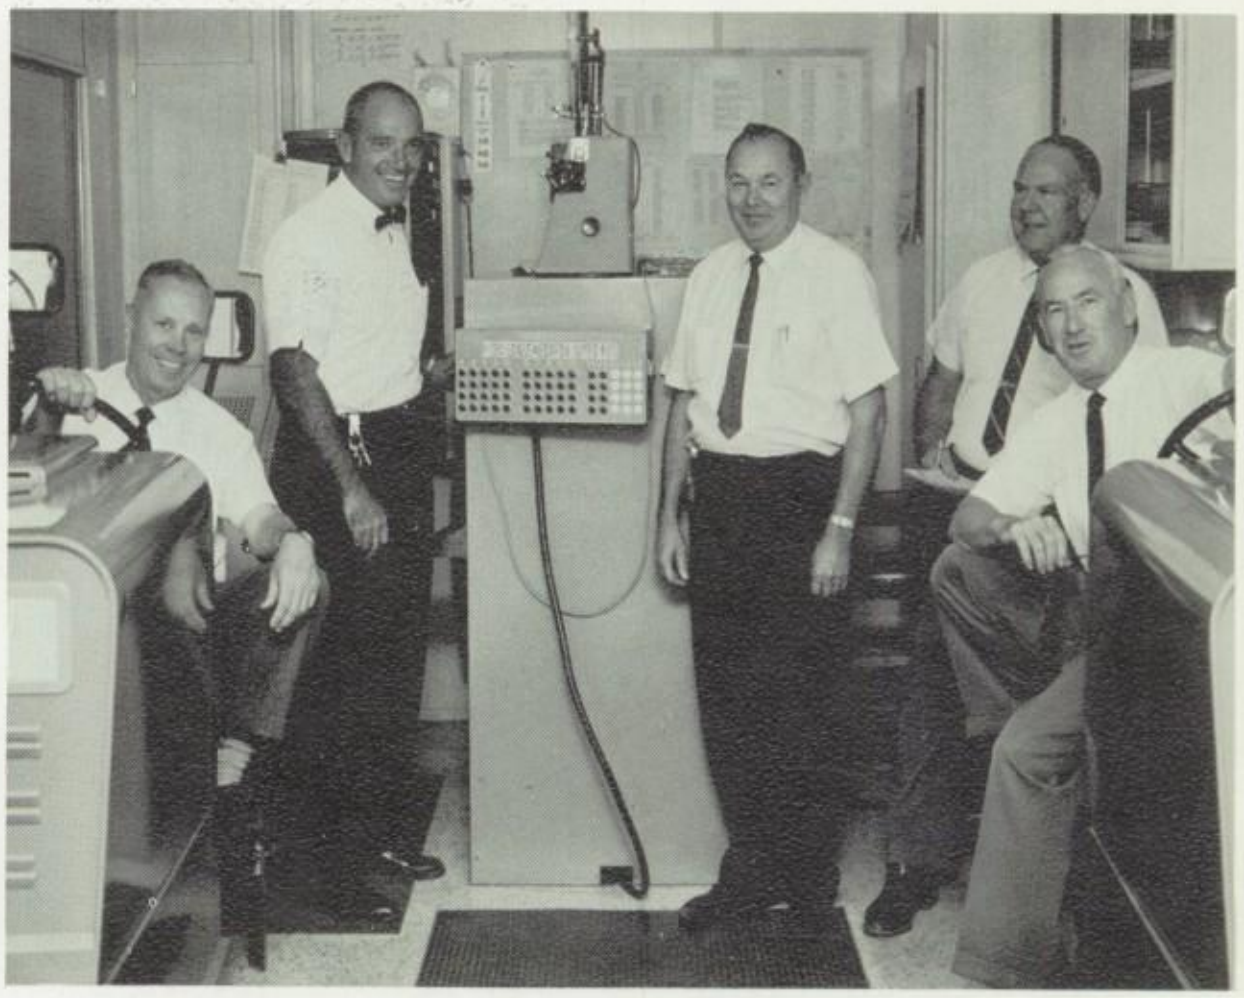
Mrs. Joan Madden was new to the Home Economics Department this year. Here, she helped Linda Kessler in her clothing class.

Mrs. Audrey Hallett, chairman of the department and sponsor of the "Hostess Club," taught Home Economics and Foods.

Mrs. Mary Tieson helped the blind by obtaining study materials from the Ed Center.

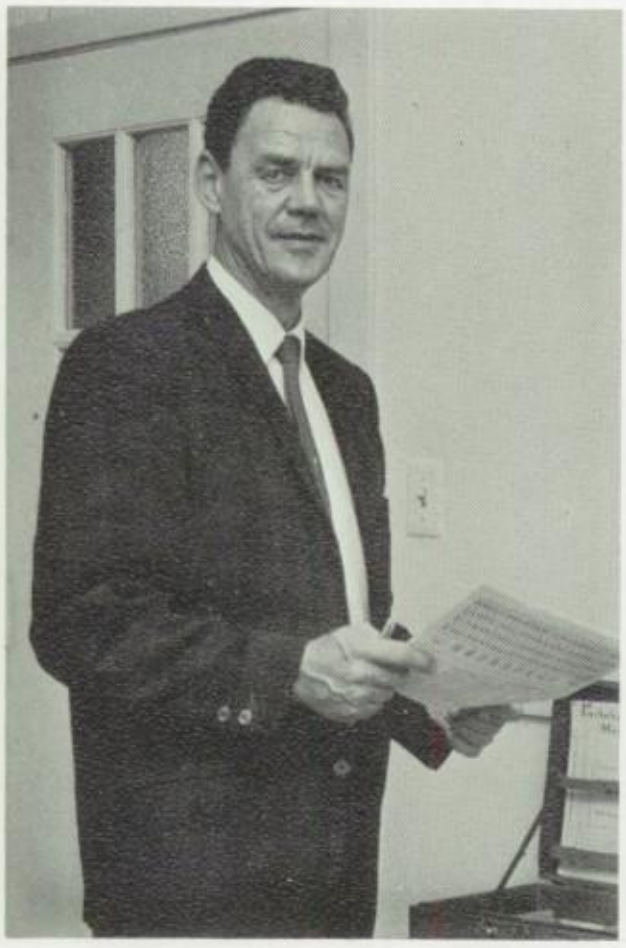
Mr. Ralph Lynch, Administrative Assistant, listened closely to what Mr. Cassie had to say about the conduct at football games.

number of Hoover cadets.



The Driver's Training instructors were Mr. Robert Duckworth-Ford, Mr. Russell Ormsby, coordinator, Mr. Loren Bryer, Mr. Charles Maxwell, and Mr. William Christie.

Explored through Specialized Courses



Mr. Joseph Tody was preparing to administer a psychiatric test. These tests were able to determine a student's ability and interests. He visited Hoover every Friday or as often as necessary.

After working with Hoover's faculty and student body for two years, Mr. William Lindsay has found Hoover "generally an outstanding group, not so much different from others." He considered us as "the young generation who is always pulling out in front."

Mrs. Ruth Moore wished that "every citizen of San Diego could stand in the halls of Hoover High to see the fine caliber of young men and women." During her first year at Hoover, she was truly pleased with the high quality of work and cooperation that existed among the students and staff at Hoover.

Mrs. Betty Ellis, who was very understanding, was always willing to discuss any problems with her students. This made her Contemporary Literature and English Literature classes both worthwhile and interesting.

Mr. George Vinson, who taught English 5-6, kept a tight ship. He caught every mischievous prankster and poked gentle fun at the victim.

Forever smiling, Mr. Jack Krill could always take a joke. He taught Contemporary Literature and English 5-6 which were classes mixed with hard work and a friendly, casual atmosphere.

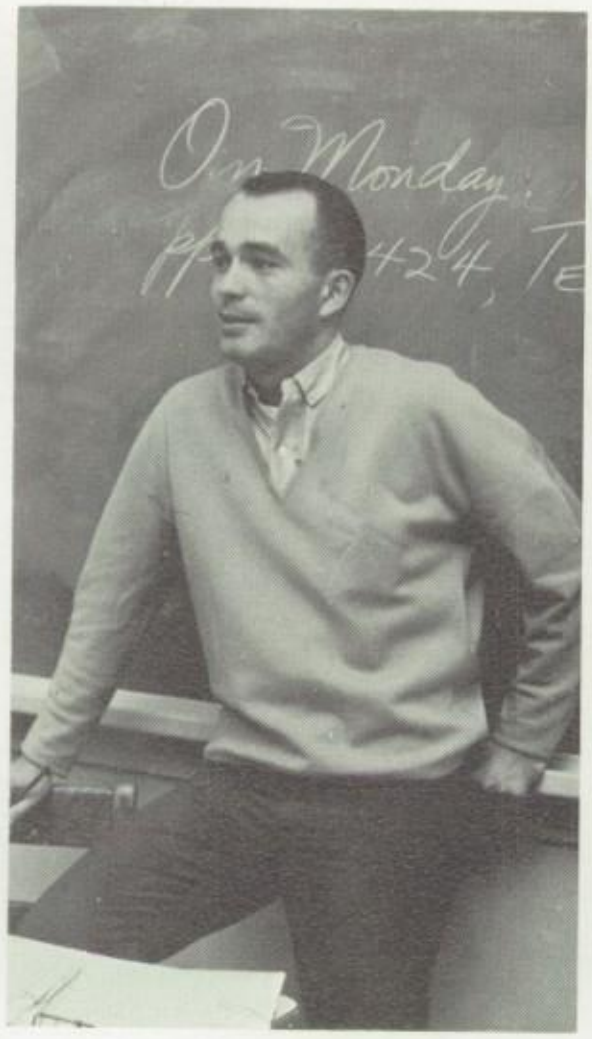
Man's Greatest Invention

Mrs. Ethel Imel, English department chairman, frequently led discussions held among our English teachers. These teachers were discussing plans for improving the department for the fall term. Pictured were Mrs. Ethel Imel (Eng. 3-4), Mr. Wilbert Lindwall (Contemporary Literature, Senior English), Miss Carol McSally (English 3-4), Miss Frances Frank (English 5-6) and Miss Eleanore Harajian (English 3-4). Not pictured was Miss Joyce Rodger (English 3-4, Senior English).

"Man's greatest invention is language. It is man's finest tool, strongest weapon, deepest resource, largest hope." This quote from an unknown author illustrated clearly our English teachers' philosophy of teaching. Their goal was to help each student use this tool to the best of his individual abilities.

A varied and interesting English curriculum was available for all students. Sophomores were exposed to new areas of study including Greek Mythology. Juniors took an English class based on our American literature. Seniors were offered several courses from which to choose. Senior English consisted of subject matter in accordance with the students' needs; Contemporary Literature dealt with modern writings mainly of the twentieth century; English Literature, a college preparatory course, concerned great masterpieces; Honors English covered basically the same material as English Literature but in a different manner and in greater depth.

Mr. David Starr stressed the importance of the Industrial Revolution which was studied in his English 5-6 classes.



Mr. William Thrailkill often listened to students in his English 5-6 classes give critical reviews of an author's writings. Mr. Thrailkill also taught Senior English.

Mrs. Evelyn McKain's previous teaching expe-rience included teaching at southern state high schools and at Georgia State College for women. She became an active faculty member and taught English 3-4 and 5-6.

Enriched Every Hooverite

Many new methods were very effective this year. Twenty students, principally seniors, volunteered to form an after school course during the second semester. It was an extensive study of the structure of the English sentence. This non-credit course strengthened the students' knowledge of grammar, and was particularly helpful in pursuing a college education.

Hooverites benefited greatly from the large number of textbooks available. Used to an advantage were the classroom sets of paperback books. The large quantity created more of a variety in classroom studies. Many popular paperbacks, coinciding with department requirements, were sold to English students in the Campus Shop. Qualified people doing their part provided for a prosperous year in the English department.

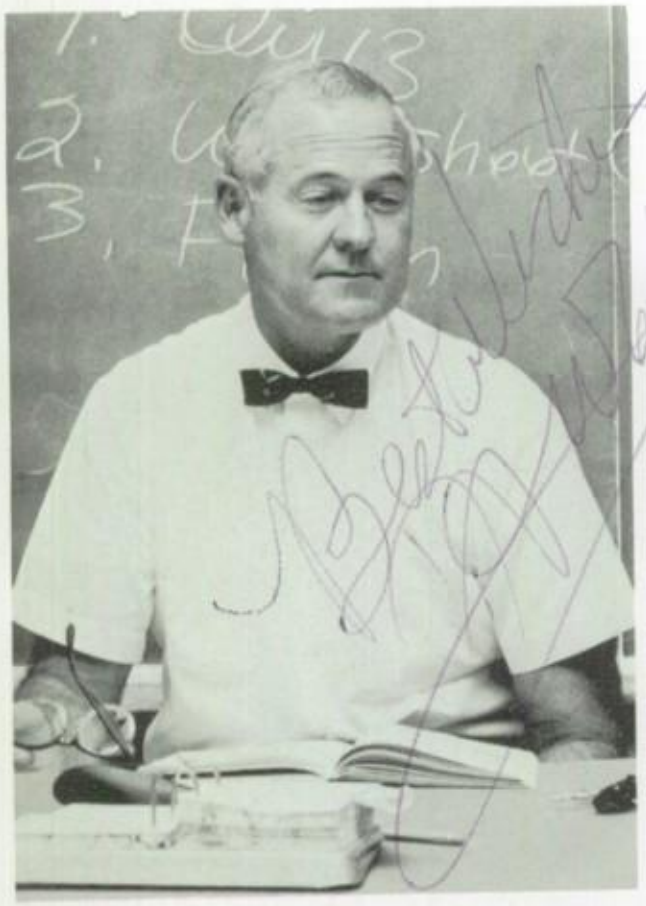
Mr. Donald Debrodt, who taught Honors English, English Literature and Contemporary Literature, generated real interest among his students.

Very dedicated to her students was Mrs. Olah Clayton. In her English 5-6 classes she emphasized the importance of reading all kinds of literature.

Always ready to offer a helping hand to her sophomore English classes was Mrs. Marion Newcomb, new to Hoover's faculty.

Mr. Ivey Durden commented on an idea related by Jerry Colburn in one of the student discussions held in his English Literature classes. Mr. Durden also taught English 3-4.

Visual Aids Vitalized



Mr. Ralph Dawson, chairman, taught four classes of American Government and spent extra time improving the curriculum of the Social Science Department.

Besides teaching the facts in U.S. History, Mr. Bruce Porteous often reminisced about being the cabin boy on the Great White Fleet and the night life in Jamul.

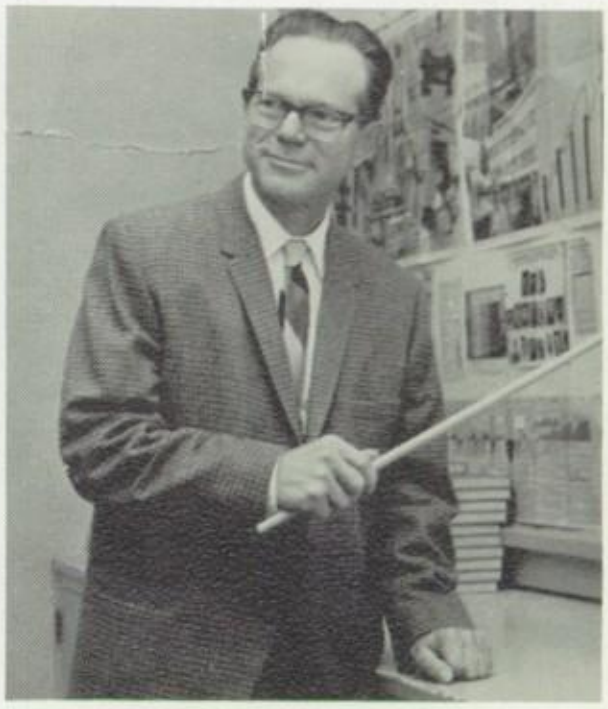
Hoover's Social Science Department offered the regular curriculum of World History, U.S. History, and American Government. Besides the regular curriculum, World Affairs and a college course in Political Science were available for advanced seniors. A new staff utilization system of team teaching was used by Mr. Zdankowski and Mr. Mitrovich with the aid of teacher assistants in teaching U.S. History to over 225 juniors. Increasing the student's knowledge of our American Heritage was a goal of our Social Science Department. Not shown is Mrs. Mary Ann McDonald who replaced Mr. Greig who died of cancer during the year.

The friendliness of Mr. Walter Kosky in his World History and U.S. History classes brought about better communication between student and teacher.

The day of returning tests in the U.S. and World History classes of Mr. Richard Carroll, Jr., was also a day for mixed emotions. Mr. Carroll supervised Hoover's halls.

Our Social Science Classes

In his American Government classes, Mr. Ralph Whitehead often referred to the Declaration of Independence. He also taught tennis in the Physical Education Department.

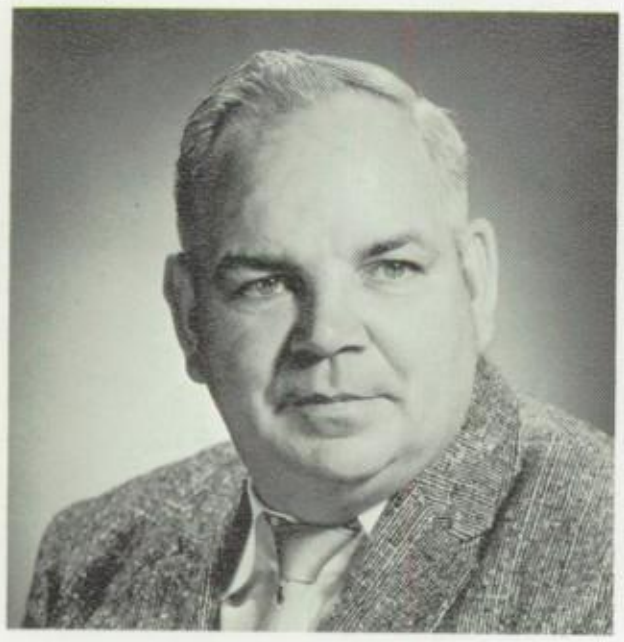


Mr. Dan Showley explained how to read and evaluate an American Stock Transactions chart to his American Government classes.

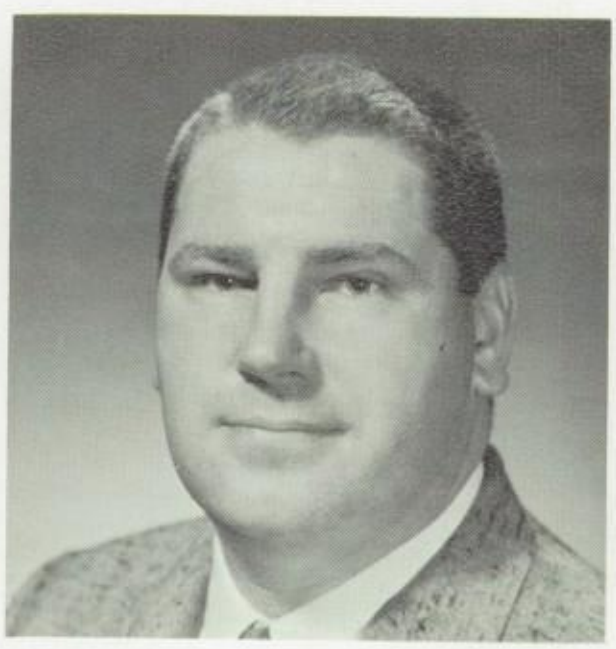
As well as the regular textbook information used in her U.S. History and American Government classes Mrs. Dorothy Sanderson also relayed the true story about many famous personages.

Mr. Galen Sayler kept sophomores well aware of current events. He taught World History.

A happy medium was always reached between challenging work and fairness in Mrs. Bonni Lane's English 5-6 and World Affairs classes.



Mr. J. Wells Hershey's easy-going disposition was the main factor for the enjoyable U.S. History and Drivers Education classes he taught.



Interesting lectures and discussions in Mr. Henry Zdankowski's U.S. History classes were generally associated with the current events being studied.

Mr. Gary Stollsteimer guided the Advanced Orchestra through the surging score of Oberon's Overture with the firm and unerring hand of a ship's captain riding out a sou'wester. His precise baton gave full play to the music's quick and dramatic climax.

Music and Art Created

Newly arrived Mr. Robert Cooper who received his Master of Arts in teaching from Harvard University directed two of the finest choir groups in their area, the Mesa Methodist Church Choir and, of course, the Cardinal Ensemble. In his ensemble class, he was interpreting and reviewing the music being sung.

"In today's fiercely competitive music market, contests have become a way of life." Our symphonic orchestra and concert band jointly participated in the district and regional Southern California School Band and Orchestra Association in which both earned superior ratings. After our Advanced Band represented us in the Toyland Parade, they came marching home with superior achievements.

Music Appreciation, as taught by Mr. Stollsteimer, was the history of primitive to present-day music. It covered all styles of music, composers, and related events.

Cardinal Ensemble, under the direction of Mr. Cooper, was a select group of singers chosen by audition. In addition to participating in school assemblies, Christmas caroling throughout the halls of Hoover, and the Spring Festival, they also sang for church groups, luncheons, and PTA meetings.

The fundamentals of note values, harmony, and time signs were stressed by Mr. Cooper in the Advanced and Beginning Girls Choir and Mixed Chorus.

Through the combined efforts of our Music Department, the Christmas, Easter, and Patriotic Programs were overwhelmingly successful.

"There really is no such thing as art. There are only artists." Today they buy their paints, and design posters for the underground. There is no harm in calling such an activity an art as long as we keep in mind that such a word may mean very different things in different times and places.

A great number of Hoover's exhibits which were displayed at the Fine Arts Gallery received much recognition. The exhibits ranged from sculpture to art paintings. A few of the better works were sold to the public for a good price. Students were given opportunities to show their artistic abilities by displaying works throughout our school.

Mrs. Dorothy Williams with the help of Dave Furry showed a famous Picasso painting, "Child with Dove," to her Drawing and Painting class. She also taught General Art, Crafts and Commercial Art.

Mankind's Universal Language

Mrs. Helen Delaney showed a welcoming sign for our Ecuadorian friends to her Color and Design class. She also taught Commercial Art, Art 1-2, Sr. Art Studio and Drawing and Painting.

Miss Martha Murphy explained the function of a weaving apparatus to student Lee Ann Hill. Miss Murphy also instructed a Crafts class to over 160 students.

Mrs. Ruth Rowe, congenial to work with, displayed an excellent example of a papier-mache creature. She taught Art 1-2, Life Drawing and Commercial Art.

The weekly singing of Spanish songs in the language lab was a treat enjoyed by Miss Fausta Miller's second and third year Spanish classes. As chairman of the Spanish Department, Miss Miller was a sponsor of our Amigo program.

Hoover's Latin classes were greatly changed this year with the addition of Mr. Donald Firebaugh to our faculty. Mr. Firebaugh's four years of study in Italy and knowledge of several languages were two assets that helped make his classes informative.

Visual aids and records enlivened the pronunciation and verb drills in Mrs. Anne Peterson's first and second year Spanish classes. Mrs. Peterson also sponsored the Future Teachers Club.

Foreign Languages Fostered

Mal criada and mala influencia were two terms frequently heard in Mrs. Mary Heinkel's first, fourth and fifth year Spanish classes. Mrs. Heinkel, a newcomer to Hoover this year, emphasized the fundamentals of Spanish grammar in her first year classes. The fourth and fifth year group conversed mainly in Spanish and read Spanish novels.

Miss Marie Schoessler stressed the fact that in Germany a wienerschnitzel was a veal cutlet and not a hot dog as many of her students were led to believe. The singing of German beerhall songs and viewing filmstrips of a romantic nature were enjoyed by her first, second and third year German classes.

Conjugation, memorization, tapes, and repetition drills were all experienced by the students enrolled in one of Hoover's foreign language classes. Latin, French, German and Spanish were offered. This year at Hoover, Spanish was, with the celebrated arrival of our Amigos from Ecuador, the language on campus. Stumbling in two languages was fun and compelled those who had memorized those seemingly useless idioms thankful they had done so. In our Latin classes Hooverites gained a solid foundation for the studying of the classics. Both French and German were useful to those entering the field of science.

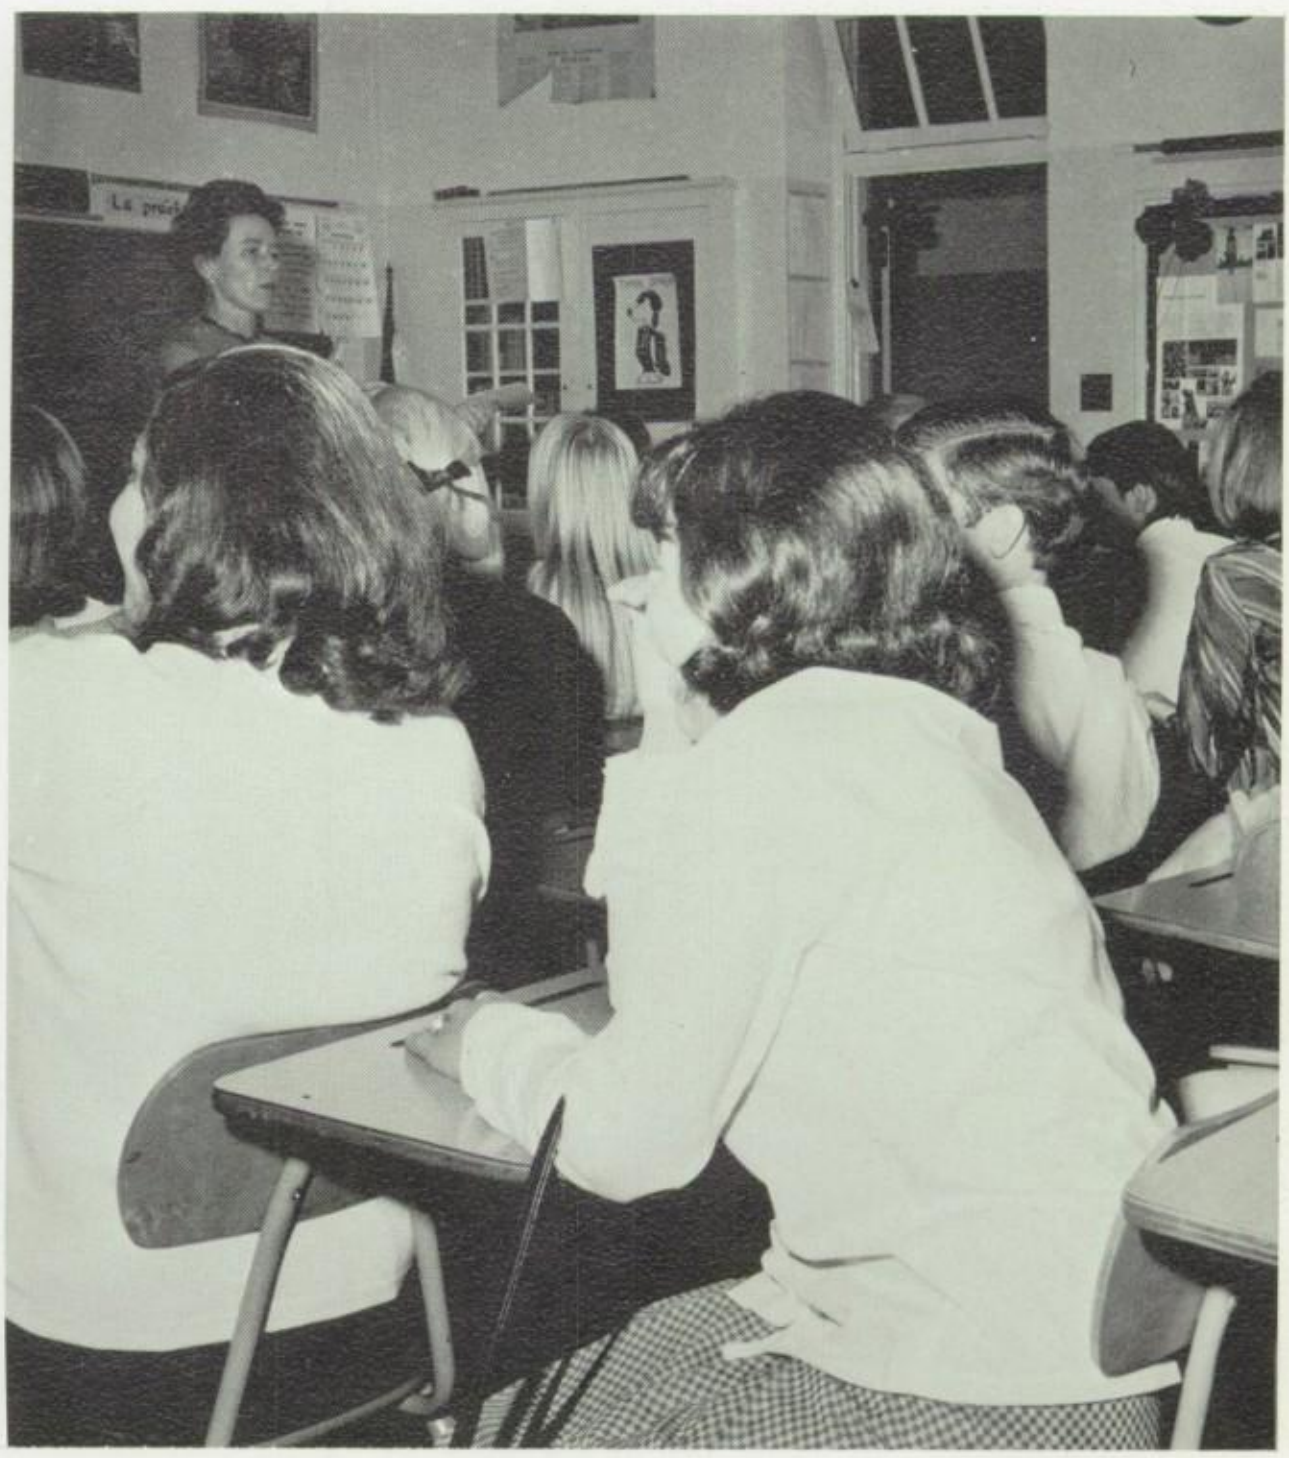
Many were tempted to drop out of the first and second year classes, but those who persevered were rewarded by being able to converse with relative ease in another language. These third, fourth, and fifth year foreign language students were provided with numerous opportunities to put their knowledge to good use. Summer school course offerings in Mexico, exchange programs in Europe and work opportunities here and abroad were made available to those interested.

Climbing two flights of stairs was made worthwhile by Mr. Francis King's penetrating lectures covering French culture, history and current events. Mr. King taught first, second and third year French and was also the sponsor of the AFS.

Mrs. Frances Hoff encouraged her first and second year Spanish students to join the Pan American Club of which she was the sponsor. Films of Latin America and Mexico were viewed by her classes.

Understanding Through Communication

Mrs. Laura Arnold, a diversified person, spoke three languages and taught classes in two: English and French. Here she conducted a drill in her French class with the aid of a tape recorder.



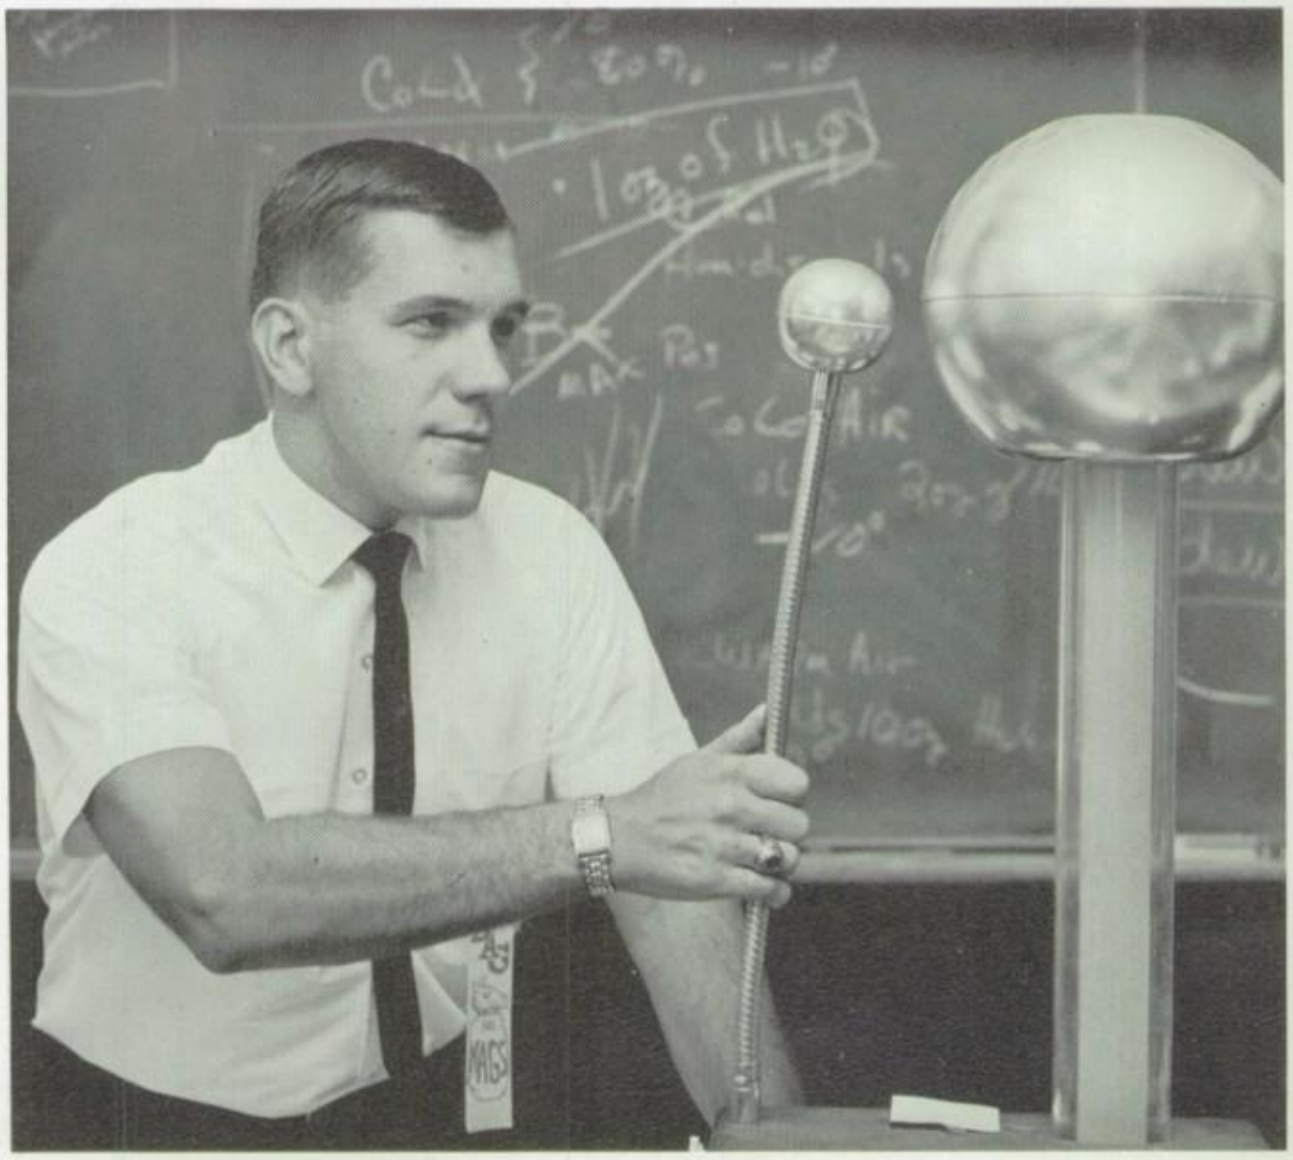
Spanish in 104 with Mrs. Peterson was representative of all our language classes. In learning the art of foreign communication new techniques were employed, but there was nothing that could replace the drudgery of memorization and daily work.

Tape recorded examinations were a favorite tool of Mr. Roy Engle in the testing of his physiology classes.

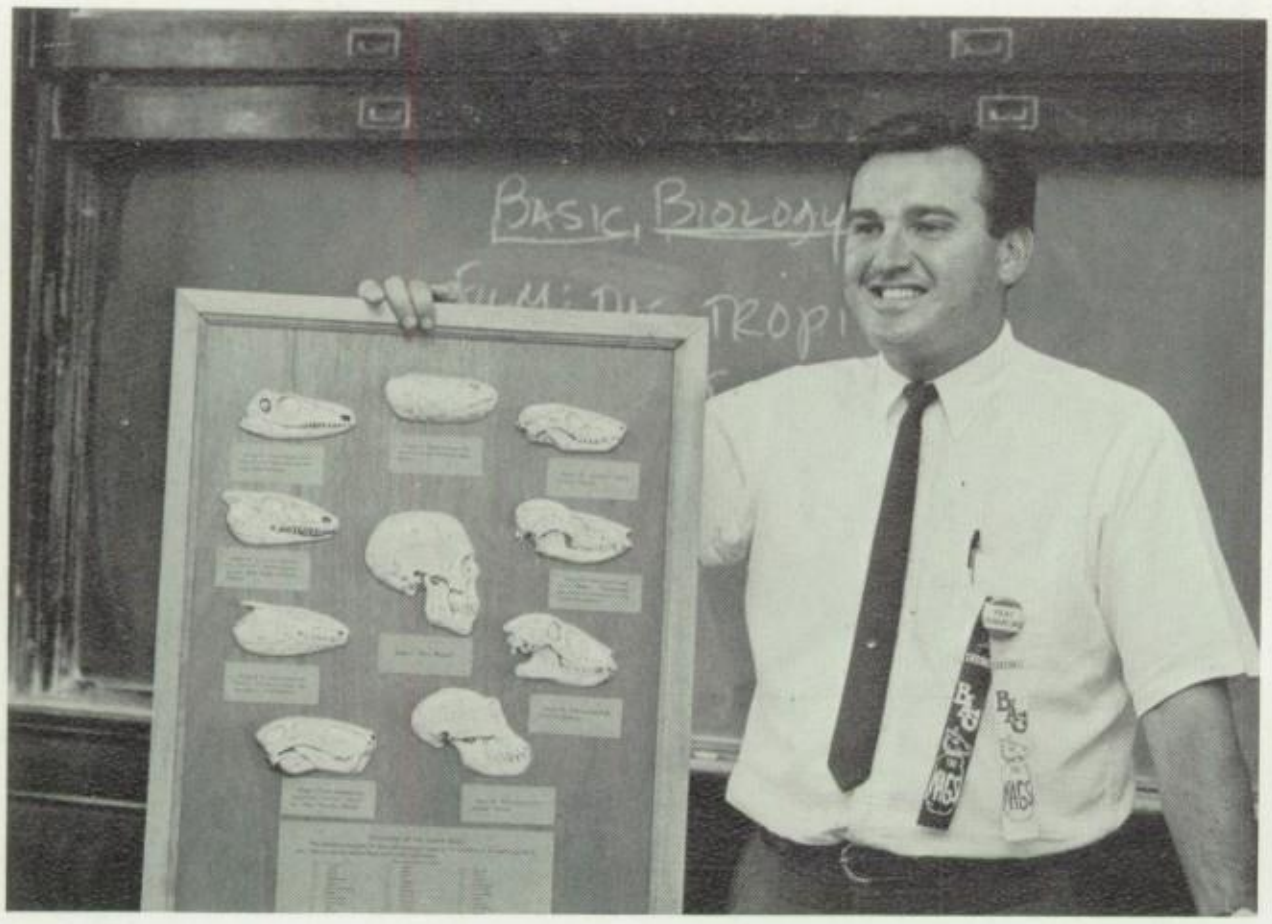
"Friday football jokes" and a comprehensive background in chemistry characterized Mr. Robert Nordstrum, chairman of Hoover's science department.

Study and Experimentation

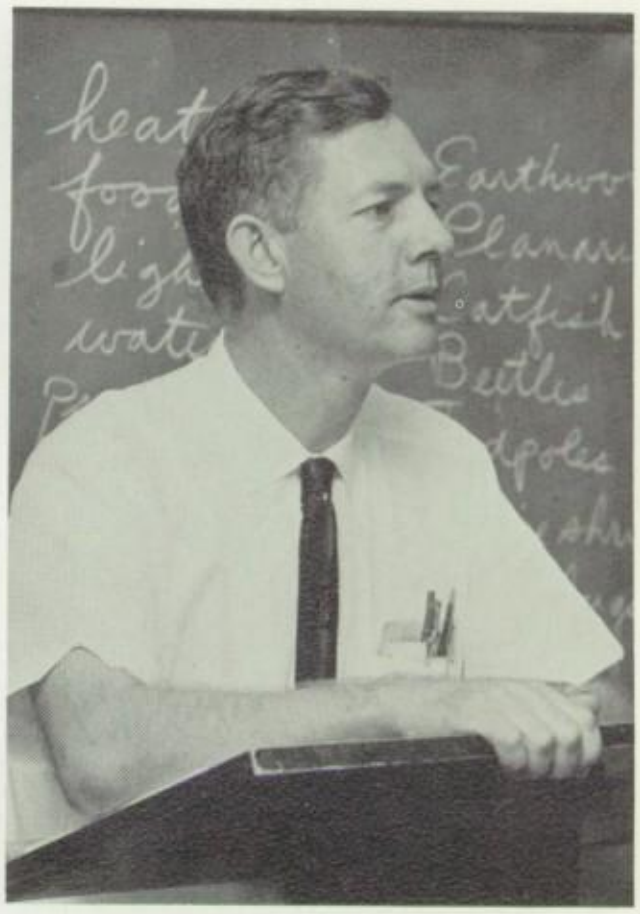
The birds and the bees, along with several species of apes, dogs, and insects were a specialty of Mr. Raymond Harris of the biology section.



Mr. Robert Cizek had the "world on fire" with his Van de Graff particle accelerator which produced sparks over two inches long for the benefit of Hoover's physics classes.



Basic Biology was a breeze with Mr. Walt Baranski. Here he explained the differences, often times not obvious to the untrained eye, between the human skull and some of its animal counterparts.



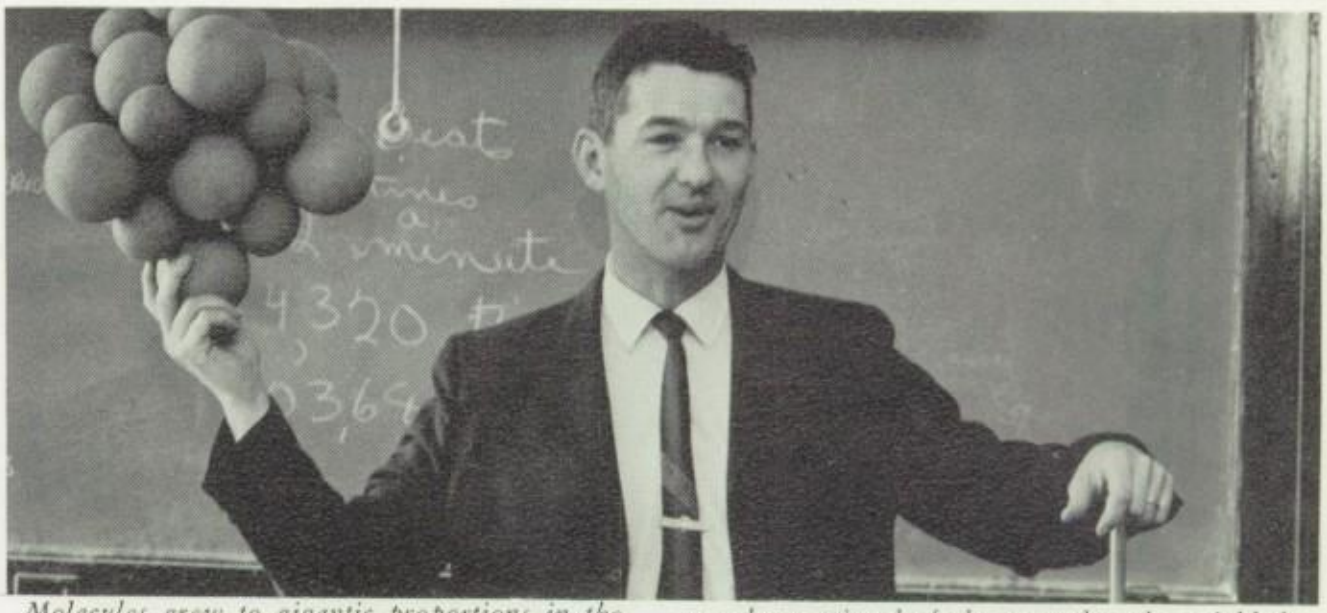
Mr. Harold Jameson was noted for his interesting lectures and experiments. Here he answered a question on animal classification for one of biology students.

Trained Students for the Future

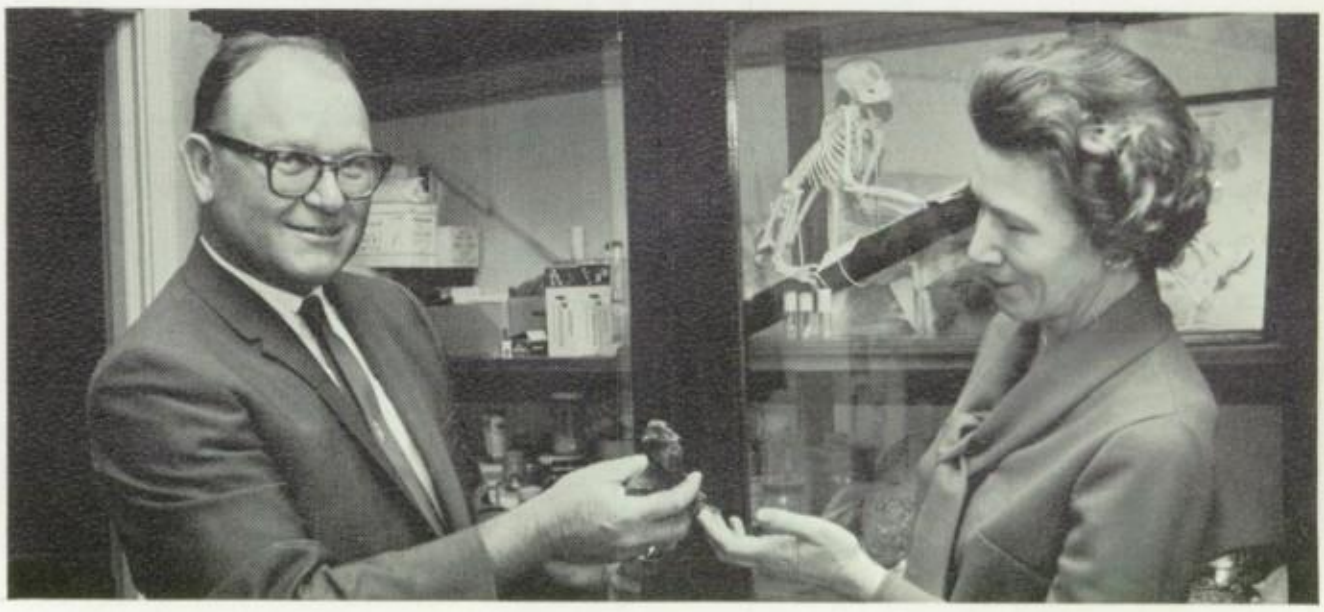
Do you know a funny bone from a sacroiliac? In taking advantage of the variety of science courses offered at Hoover, students sought answers to this question and many more thorough study and experimentation.

Headed by Mr. Robert Nordstrom, Hoover's Science Department endeavored to stimulate thought, to encourage further research as in the Science Fair, and to develop the scientific attitude. Biology students explored new worlds of plant and animal life through dissection and observation. Agnamina the skeleton and Sam the muscle man livened up our physiology classes. Chemistry students had to tolerate overpowering odors while working on laboratory experiments. Through Science Fair projects and technical papers, physics students discovered excellent opportunities for scientific advancement.

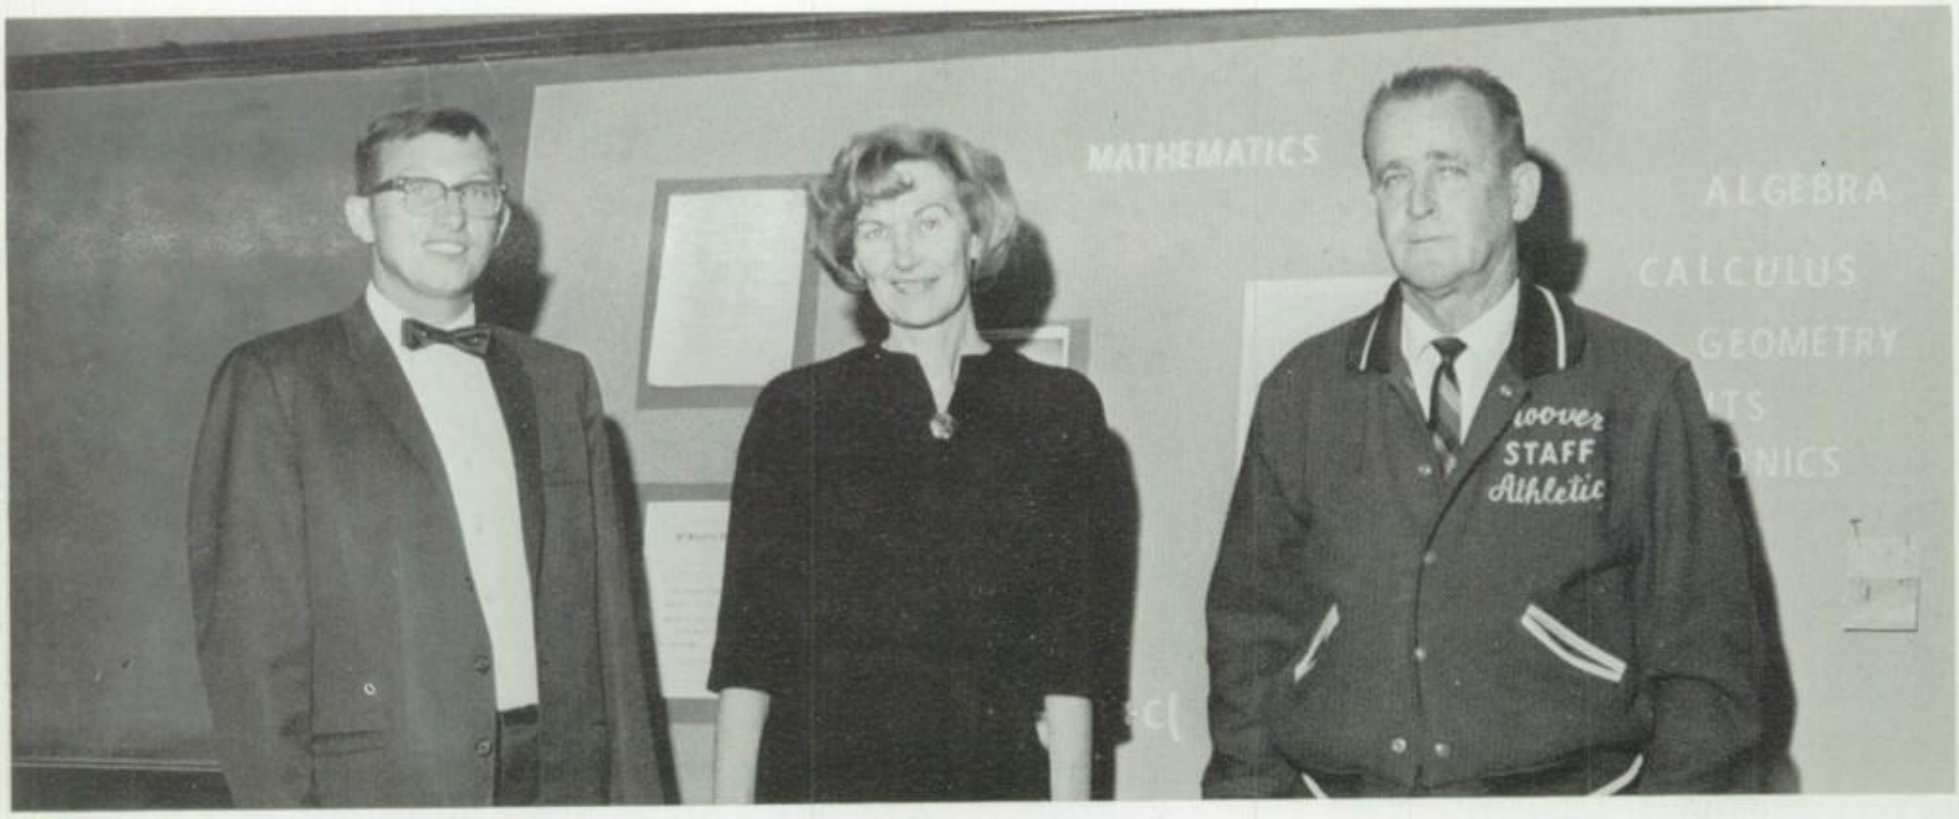
Hoover's Science Department inspired many students to seek science careers.



Molecules grew to gigantic proportions in the hands of Mr. Fred Jappe, as he uttered the magic words, "Chem Study likes you." The wondrous wizard of the test tubes also wielded a magic stick of chalk which rendered difficult equations instantly understandable.



Miss Genevieve Rainwater and Mr. Edmund Vestal prepared to place a skeleton of one of their former feathered friends in the biology display case along with some other interesting items.



Mr. Richard Darst (Advanced Math and Geometry), Mrs. Florence Jordan (Calculus and Advanced Math) and Mr. John Finan (Basic Algebra and Physical Education) posed for our camera in front of Mrs. Jordan's mathematics bulletin board. It was designed to keep students informed about math contests, scholarships, and special course offerings.

Math Trained

The appreciation and comprehension of mathematics as taught by our keen instructors gave Hooverites a standard of exact reasoning which they were able to apply to other areas. Basic Algebra was primarily concerned with solving problems by forming equations. Geometry also used the logical approach, but in a different way. Students used theorems and postulates to write proofs on various given answers.

New to Hoover's Math Department was Mrs. Claire Cooke, who used the drawing of lines intersecting at one point to illustrate that vertical angles are congruent to her Geometry and Intermediate Algebra classes.

Right: Birth rate and unemployment statistics were used by Mr. Benjamin Nicholls in his General Math classes. These diverting additions kept his students aware of math's modern applications.

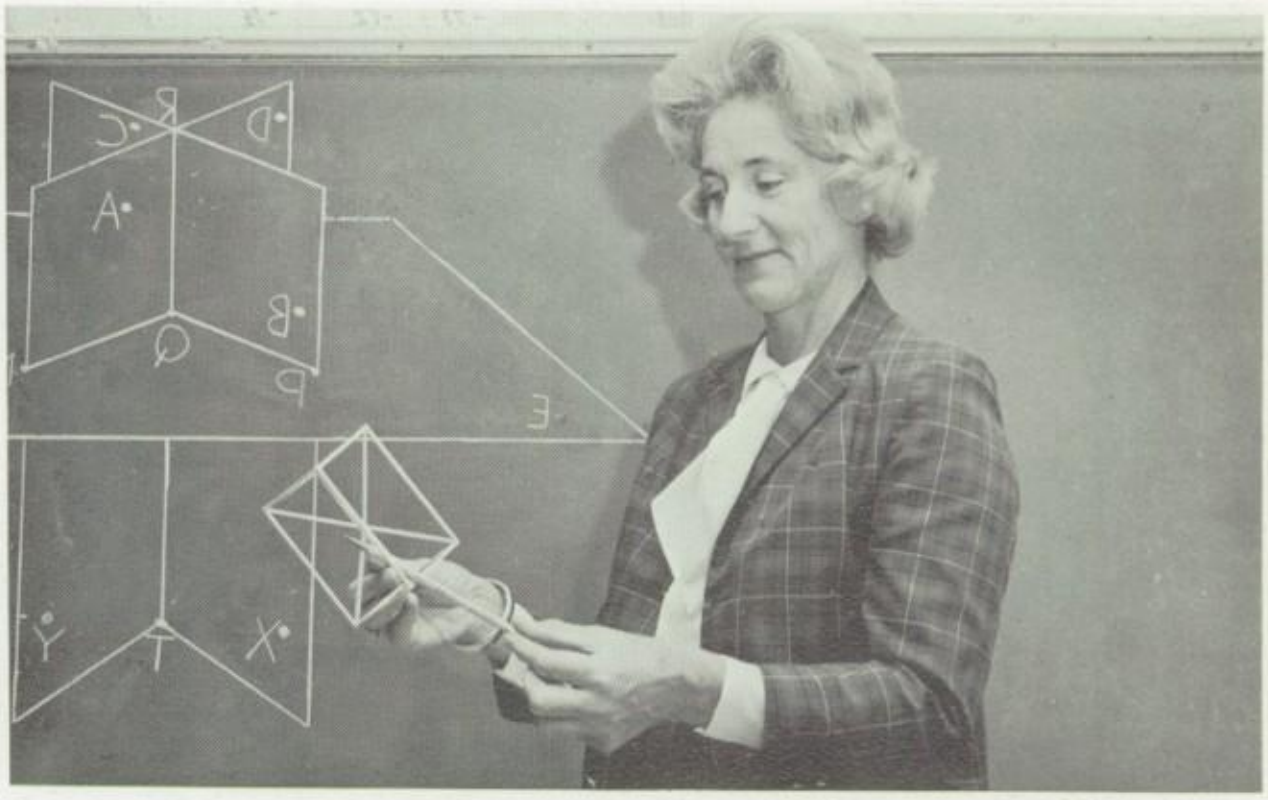
Mr. Thomas Tift, a new member on Hoover's faculty this year, showed a satisfied expression after one of his students successfully tackled a difficult problem in one of his Algebra classes.



The strange combination of birthday donuts and planes in space were two specialties of Miss Geraldine Connell which surprised her students. Miss Connell taught Adv. Math. Basic Algebra and Trigonometry and Advanced Algebra.

the Mind to Reason Precisely

Intermediate Algebra took young scholars a step further along the road of higher mathematics. It proved to be the doorway to trigonometry and calculus. Calculus taught by Mrs. Jordon, chairman of the Math Department, enabled fourteen selected students to define clearly some geometrical concepts such as the direction of a curve, the area surrounded by a curve, and physical concepts such as velocity and work.

Left: Prospecting in New Mexico was the unusual hobby of Mr. Floyd Lowe. He gave special tips to his Algebra and Geometry students on how to mathematically locate the Lost Dutchman Mine.

Left: When returning General Math tests, Mr. Benjamin Ciccatti frequently offered a word of encouragement to his students. Mr. Ciccatti also taught Drafting and Mechanical Drawing.

Above: A customary practice of Mr. Graydon Crabtree's Basic and Intermediate Algebra and Geometry classes was to review carefully any test problems with which his students had difficulty.

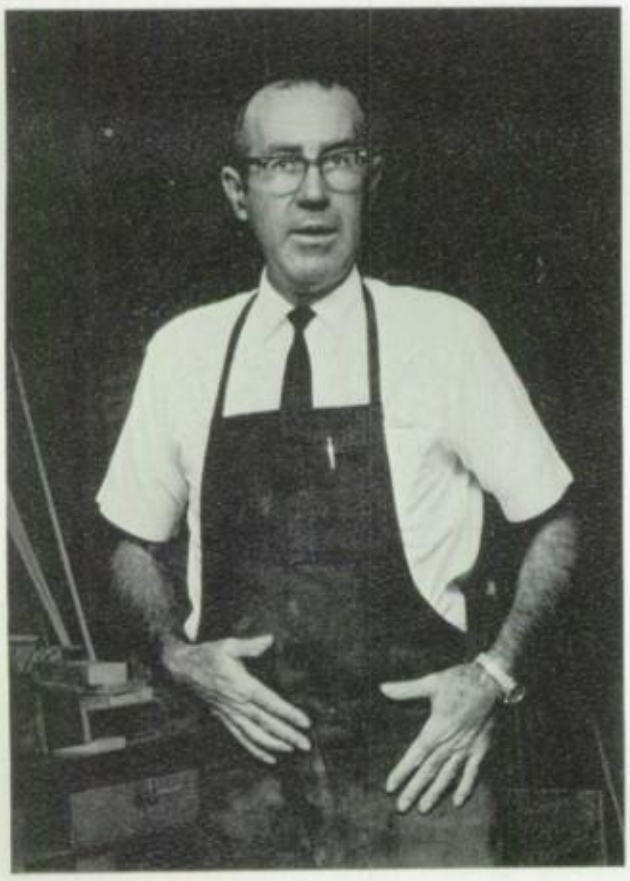
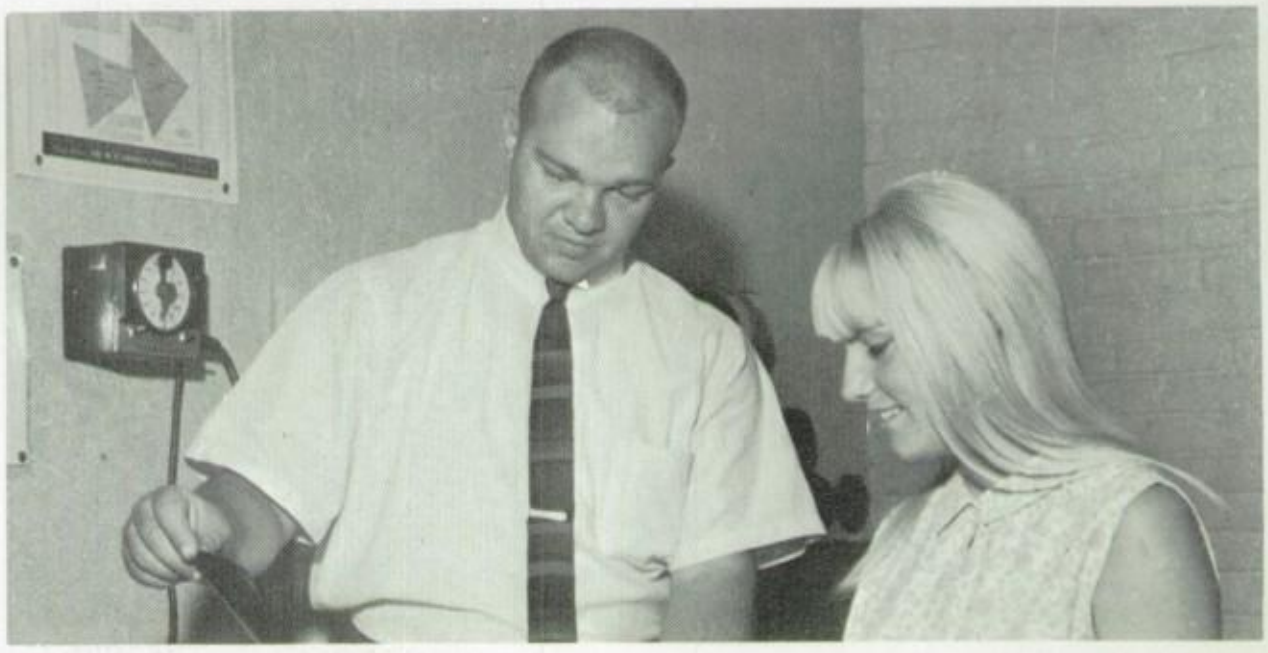
Mr. Victor Hoffert, chairman of the Industrial Arts Department, taught students in his drafting classes how to make and read drawings and to use acceptable drafting techniques. Precise workmanship and neatness were emphasized.

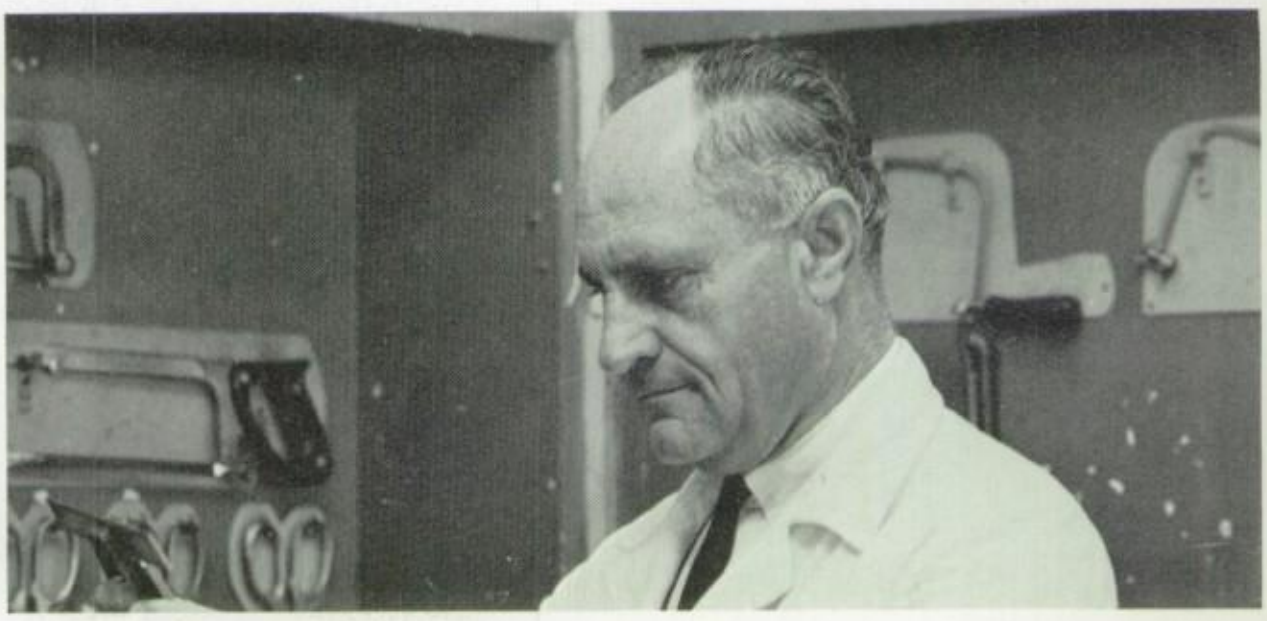
Experience and Knowledge Provided



Students of Mr. John Trask's wood shop were introduced to a wide variety of tools, machines, and materials necessary for various types of wood construction and finishing.



In graphic arts, Mr. Robert Hampel provided a wide variety of industrial duplicating processes, such as: letterpress printing and offset lithography.



Mr. Post, a general metal teacher, supervised two classes of Occupational Metal-Skills which delved deeper into metal characteristics for vocational use. Mr. Post also taught Auto Shop.

Mr. Bill Mulkey, an auto mechanics teacher, placed great emphasis on theory, proper maintenance, and safe operation of automobiles. In some cases, students worked on their own engines, differentials, electrical systems, and transmissions.

One of the main objectives of industrial arts was to provide information and exploratory experiences in various industrial occupations that would help the student to make a wise selection of his life work.

General metal taught by Mr. John Kauble included a study of metal characteristics. Students worked in the area of foundry, sheet metal, welding, and machine operations. Mr. Kauble also taught two classes of technical English.

Exploratory Occupational Experiences

Craftsmen of the Future . . .

Industrial arts was a vital part of the total educational program for Hoover students. They needed an opportunity to become acquainted with the processes and the materials used in industry. With increased mechanization becoming a part of their lives, it was essential that industrial arts experiences be regarded as basic and fundamental for all youth.

The Industrial Arts Department developed manipulative skills and provided an opportunity for creative activities through the construction of worthwhile projects. Safe practices in the use and care of supplies, tools, and equipment were emphasized. Abilities in performing simple home repairs and wisdom in selecting industrial products and services were stressed.

Industrial arts education sought to build a degree of proficiency in a wide variety of basic mechanical skills and provided constructive guidance in appraisal of personal abilities and aptitudes.

Mr. Fred Jappe used his up-to-date knowledge of photography to instruct a student in the operation of a Bessler Enlarger. He taught two classes of photography, a new course offered this year, with emphasis on both the vocational and avocational uses of photography.

Electronics provided an understanding of electrical fundamentals. Under the guidance of Mr. Ronald Mahoney, students constructed and repaired various useful electronic devices.

Mr. Robert Rybiski, chairman of the Business Department, was responsible for orientating modern business procedures into all the classes. He taught both Typing and Shorthand.

Exploratory work experience in the areas of secretarial and clerical work was available to all graduating seniors this year. In the upper division classes, mock interviews were presented to prepare students for employment situations. Work counselors have had excellent success in placing Hoover Business Education students for employment. To acquaint students with the business world in which they live, opportunities to visit business houses were given to merchandising and clerical students.

The delivery of numerous pieces of equipment consisting of Executive Typewriters, IBM Selectrics, and an Off-Set Printing machine was made during the current year.

Specialized Courses Helped Students

Miss Hazel Martens believed that if at first one does not succeed try again. This motto was practiced by students in her Typing and Record Keeping classes.

In her Record Keeping, Typing and Business English classes Mrs. Mary Sullivan was responsible for installing permanent knowledge to stay with her students for a lifetime. These classes were extremely beneficial Perfection was imperative in business courses. Miss Judith Wheeler demanded accuracy in all work done by her Bookkeeping and Merchandising students.

Miss Martha Miller and Mrs. Bernice Conklin worked together on problems which arose within their department. Miss Miller taught Shorthand and Typing. Mrs. Conoklin instructed Clerical Procedures and Office Practice courses.

Mr. Harold Watson, during his first year at Hoover, brought the Journalism classes liveliness and purpose. Students learned the procedures for writing newsworthy articles as well as planning page layouts. Mr. Watson enjoyed supervising the "Cardinal" staff. The eighteen industrious students on the staff produced a bi-monthly school newspaper. Mr. Watson and the staff were awarded the Sigma Delta Chi prize as the best student newspaper in San Diego County.

Success in the Reading Improvement Laboratory class was an individual effort. Students received as much benefit as the effort they put forth. Shown here was Mrs. Doris Oatman, one of the instructors, assisting a student. Mr. Schurer Moe also taught this class.

Succeed in Future Endeavors

The Reading Improvement Laboratory with its modern facilities helped improve reading skills for many students. Not only did this class increase their capacity for vocabulary, speed, comprehension and concentration, but it also enabled the students to use several different study methods such as skim reading. This six week course, taken in place of a study hall or during the summer, was supervised by Mrs. Doris Oatman and Mr. Schurer Moe.

Drama is an art in which words are used to express thoughts and emotions. In Beginning Drama, students explored the art through the history of the theater. Both the Inter. and Adv. Drama classes were taught how to put on make-up, and to pick out props and costumes. Encouraged by Mrs. Archer and Mr. Schermerhorn, Hoover's speech art students participated in the San Diego City Speech Festivals and several of them won awards of excellence.

Mr. Harold Watson possessed two qualities necessary for his position. He understood his students and their problems and was always helpful. Mr. Watson taught English 3-4, Journalism and was the faculty advisor of the "Cardinal."

Mr. John Shermerhorn excelled in portraying any type of character. This was necessary for such a fine teacher of Public Speaking and Drama. He often urged his students to have self-confidence.

Enthusiasm was the key factor for a good performer, so naturally Mrs. Anne Archer set a good example. She displayed her dramatic and teaching abilities in her Drama classes.

Hooverites Kept Fit

As sponsor of the girls' tennis team and chairman of the P.E. Department, Miss Margaret Minshall was active in after school sports.

Miss Jacqueline Rose was known for her great sense of humor. Although she enjoyed all sports, her favorite was teaching modern dancing.

Miss Patricia Brooke, sponsor of the gymnastics team, coached many gymnastic students to victory.

Whether it was raining or shining, the girls in our PE classes were seen either exercising or playing. A number of girls demonstrated physical fitness proficiency by receiving achievement awards from the President's Council on Physical Fitness. This year's PE courses ranged from team activities such as basketball, softball, and field hockey to individual sports such as tennis, gymnastics, track, and golf.

in the Kennedy Tradition

Coach Wayne DeBate, chairman of the P.E. department, was debating on which basketball team to select for the Eastern league competitive playoff.

Coach Charles McIntire, new on Hoover's faculty, enjoyed coaching gymnastics. He always stressed good form and balance while training boys for the team.

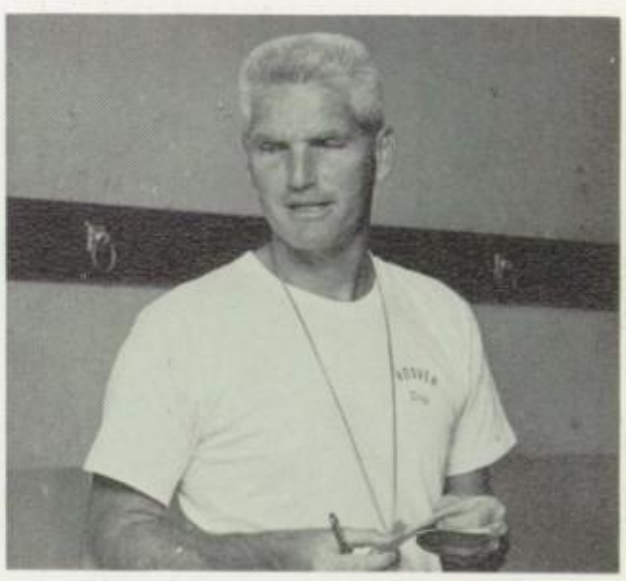
Coach Jerry Bartow's pep talks before baseball games inspired our baseball players. Here, he assigned badminton courts to his class during doubles competition.

Coach Russell Leslie, line football coach, and coach Bob Warner of our wrestling team discussed the favorable plays that some of their boys performed during interclass competition.

Coach Harold Mitrovich reviewed game strategy during a break in our overtime basketball victory against the Saints.

Strength and stamina were obtained by P.E. classes as a result of aggressive coaches. On rainy days, long periods of continuous exercise were stressed to help prepare boys for the physical fitness test. The main attractions that the PE Department offered were football, basketball, volleyball, badminton, softball, and of course bleachers. Also featured were running laps and cold showers. Coaches emphasized team work and hustling along with mental alertness and aggressive ball playing to defeat an opponent.

Coach Kenneth Peeters was cheered by his Cross Country team victory.



Coach John Murphy trained his trackmen to never give up. This train of thought proved to be beneficial in winning many events.

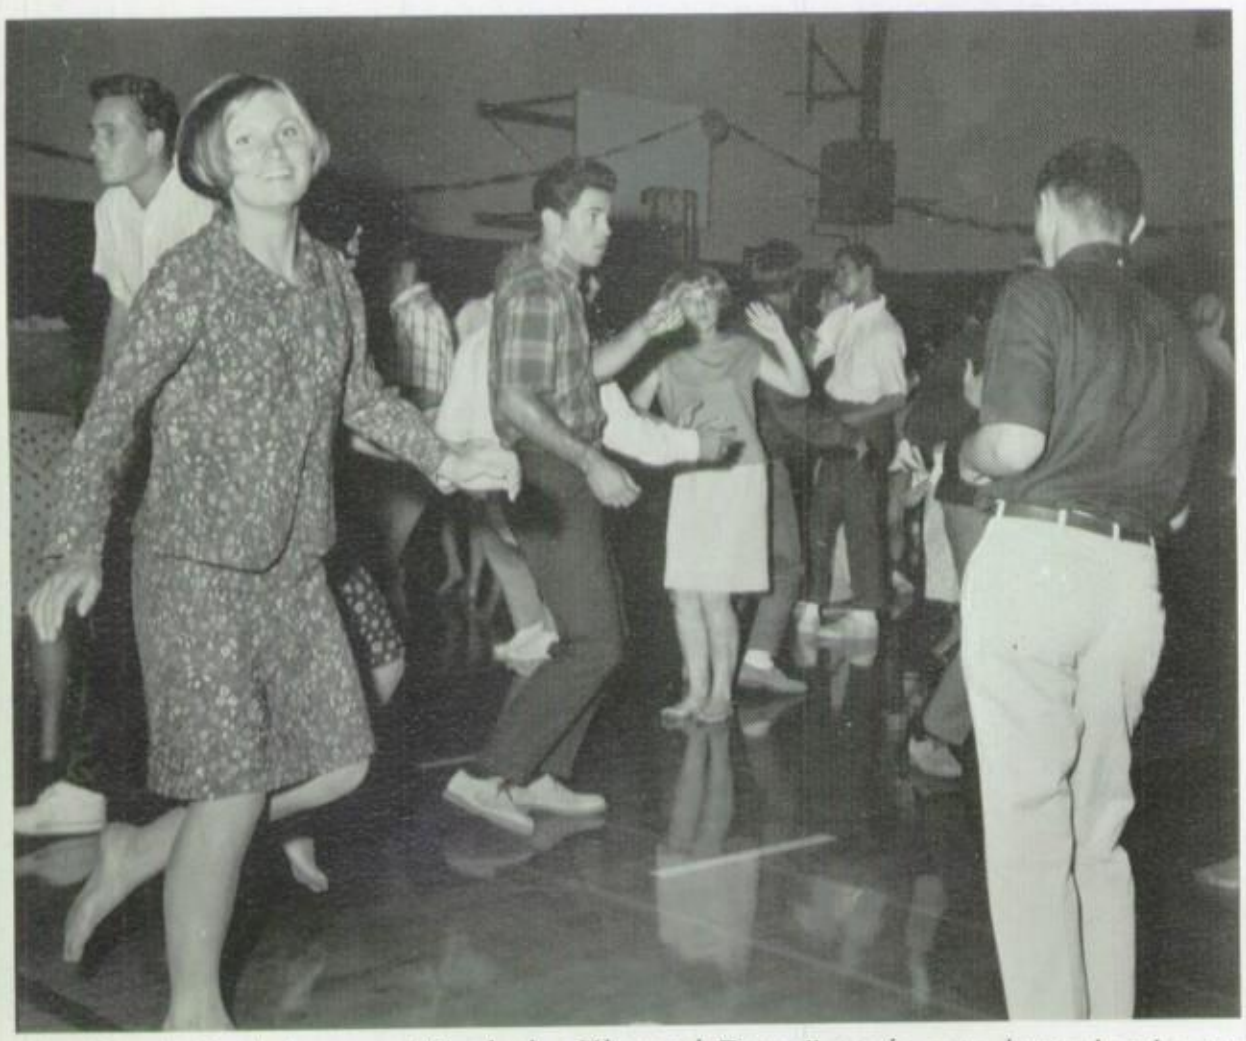
Traditional Events

Uh, huh, they really did dance together.

"Let the Little Girl Dance," but dance alone as we did most of the time.



The "Howdy Hop" became a "Land of a Thousand Dances" as the gang bumped and rotated until the "Midnight Hour."

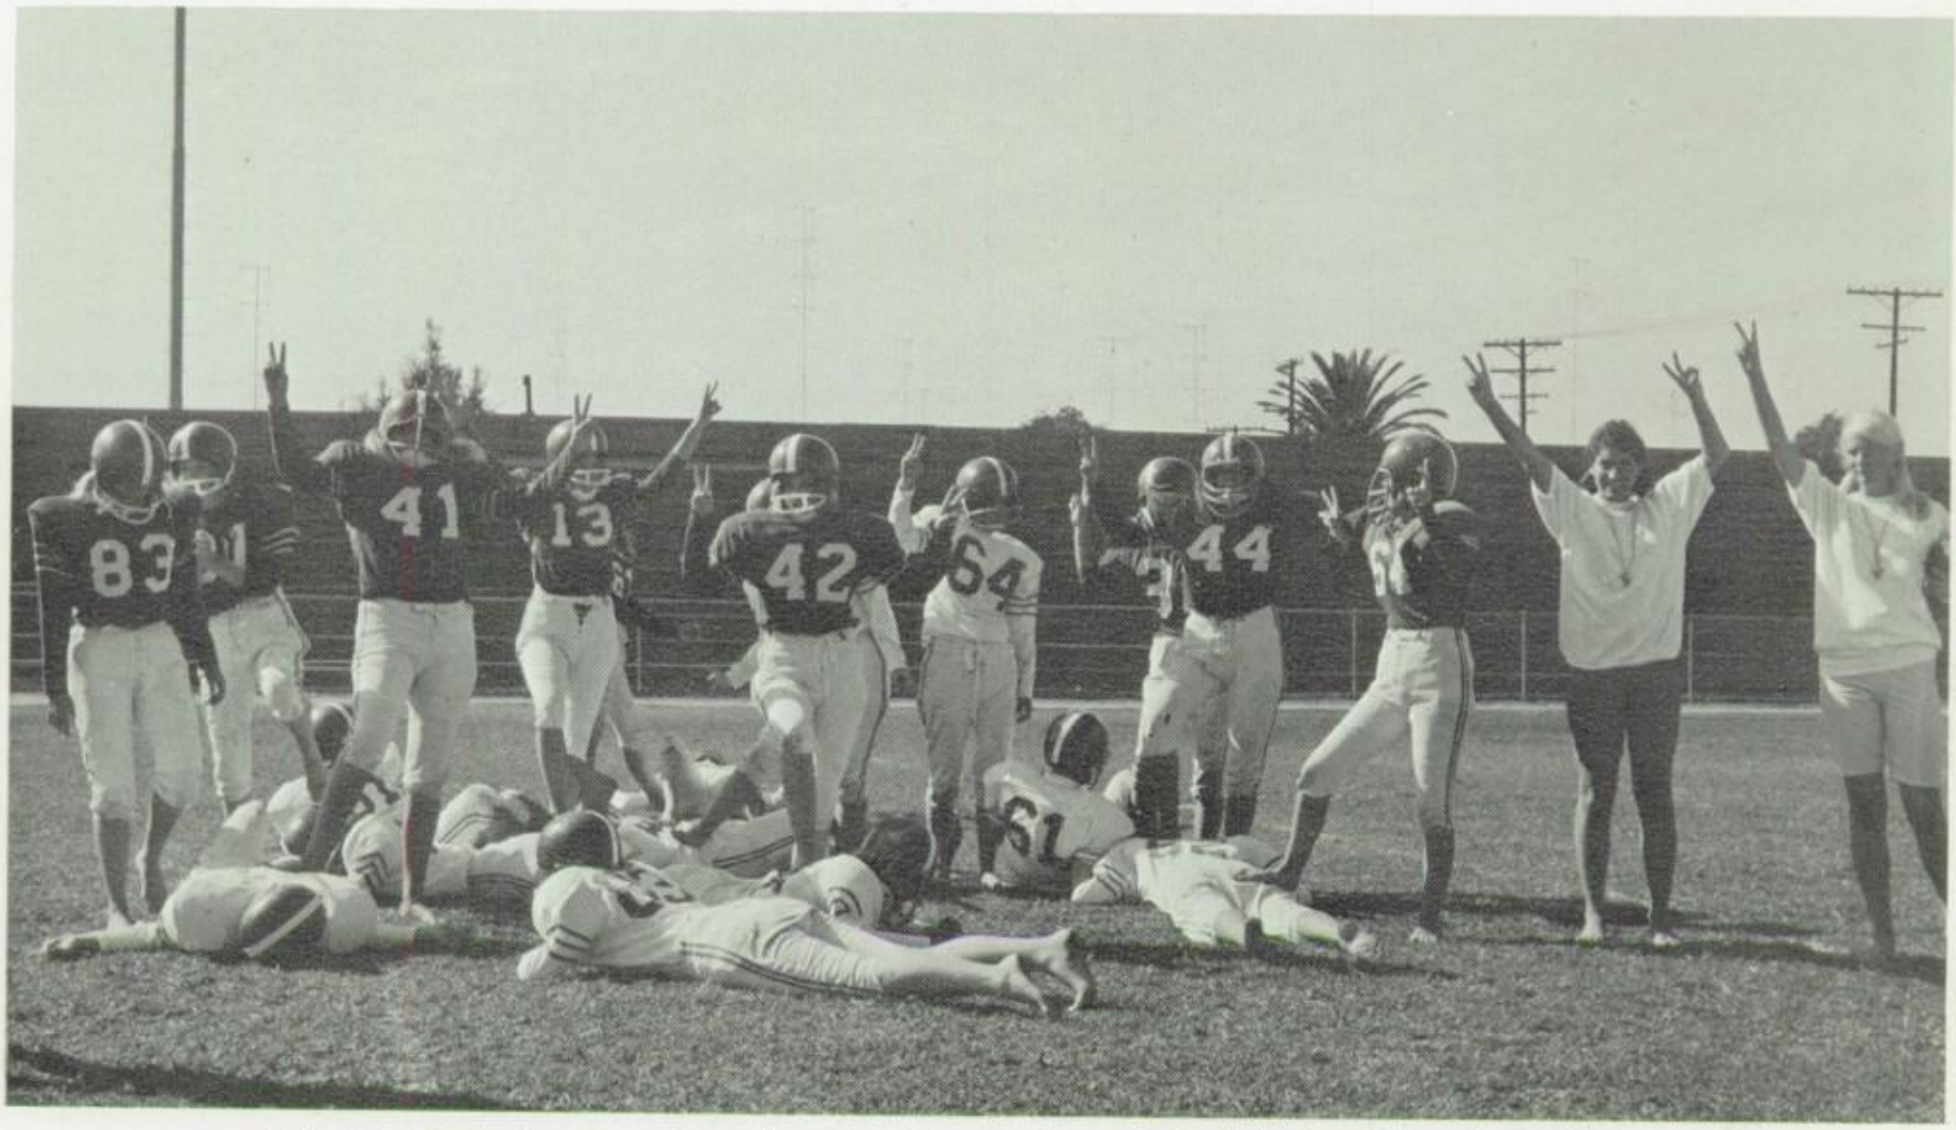
"Howdy Hop" And Mock Football Marked Success

The Hoover - Kearny game was over. We had won our first game of the season and our victory pulsated throughout the crowd. This year our enthusiasm did not end at the close of the game. Music by the Esquires could be heard from the girls' gym as the "Howdy Hop" got under way. This annual "get acquainted" dance was sponsored by the P.T.A. and lasted until the midnight hour. Just as our game had ended with victory and enthusiasm, so had Hoover's "Howdy Hop."

Hoover girls displayed their talents as football players, when they led Hoover on to victory over Crawford. The Colts started the action by running the wrong direction and scoring for the Cardinals. The Cardinettes then got into the "Maidenform Formation" which resulted in a touchdown by Wonderboy Morstad. As the girls continued down their road to victory, Wonderboy intercepted a pass and shot off down the field as the gun sounded. VICTORY was our cry with the final score being 18-0.

Fashion was in the spotlight when Hoover's Homecoming lovelies appeared in their full-length, fine-quality gowns. High styled hairdos and make-up perfection set an example for all Cardinettes to follow. The crowd found it hard to imagine that one of these beauties would be crowned as queen. These girls lead the style showing poise and gracefulness in all aspects of dress and stance. As the girls were escorted off the field, the cheering crowd was filled with excitement. Was it possible to select the prettiest? Somehow it had to be done. Suspense just had to hold on until the game that night where the winner was to be announced.

Sparked Hoover's Spirit



Exhausted Crawfordettes were flattened as the victory stand was displayed by the undefeated Cardinettes.

And here they come! Our 1966-67 homecoming lovelies. Candidates for queen were Montillia Broaded, Lorretta Shopert, Michelle Palcic and Sally Cline.

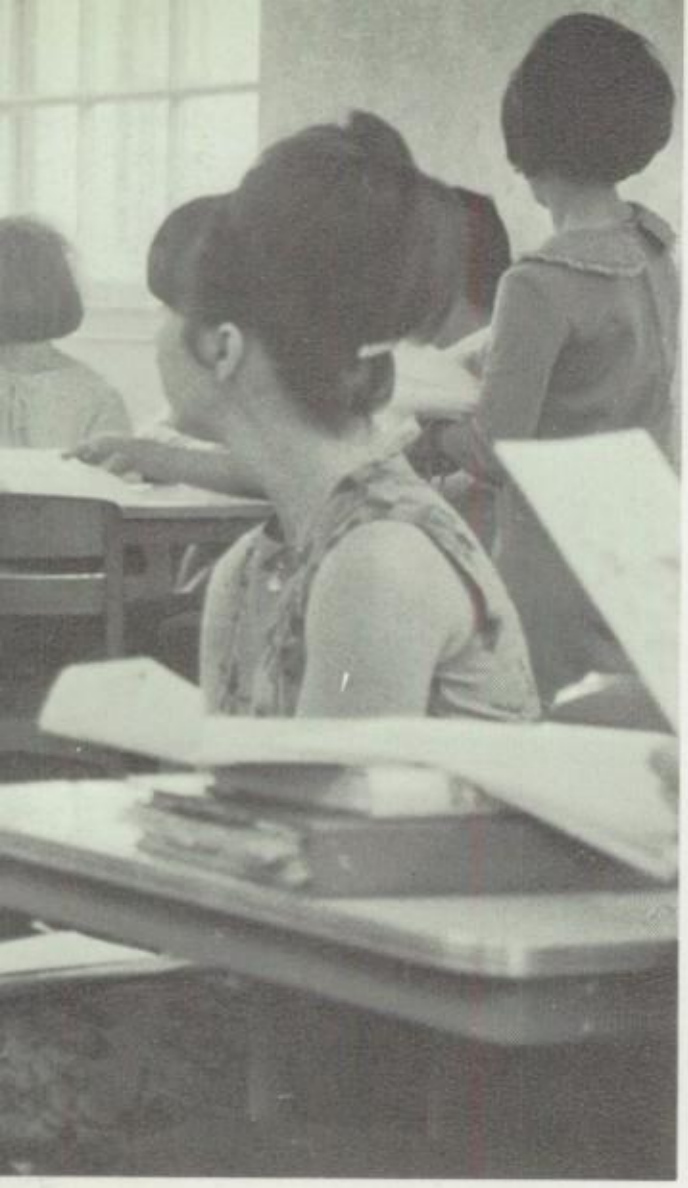
Displaying her form of make-up and hairstyling perfection, Daphne took a second glance in the mirror before cheering her team to victory.

Student Council meetings were held once a month in the cafeteria. They provided a chance for class representatives to air Hoover's current problems and also solutions a chance to arise.

Student Government–A Basis of Hoover's

Mike Flanigan gets advice from Mr. Kenneth Dowell, the A.S.B. advisor. His suggestions were always worth some thought and aided in solving many of Hoover's problems.

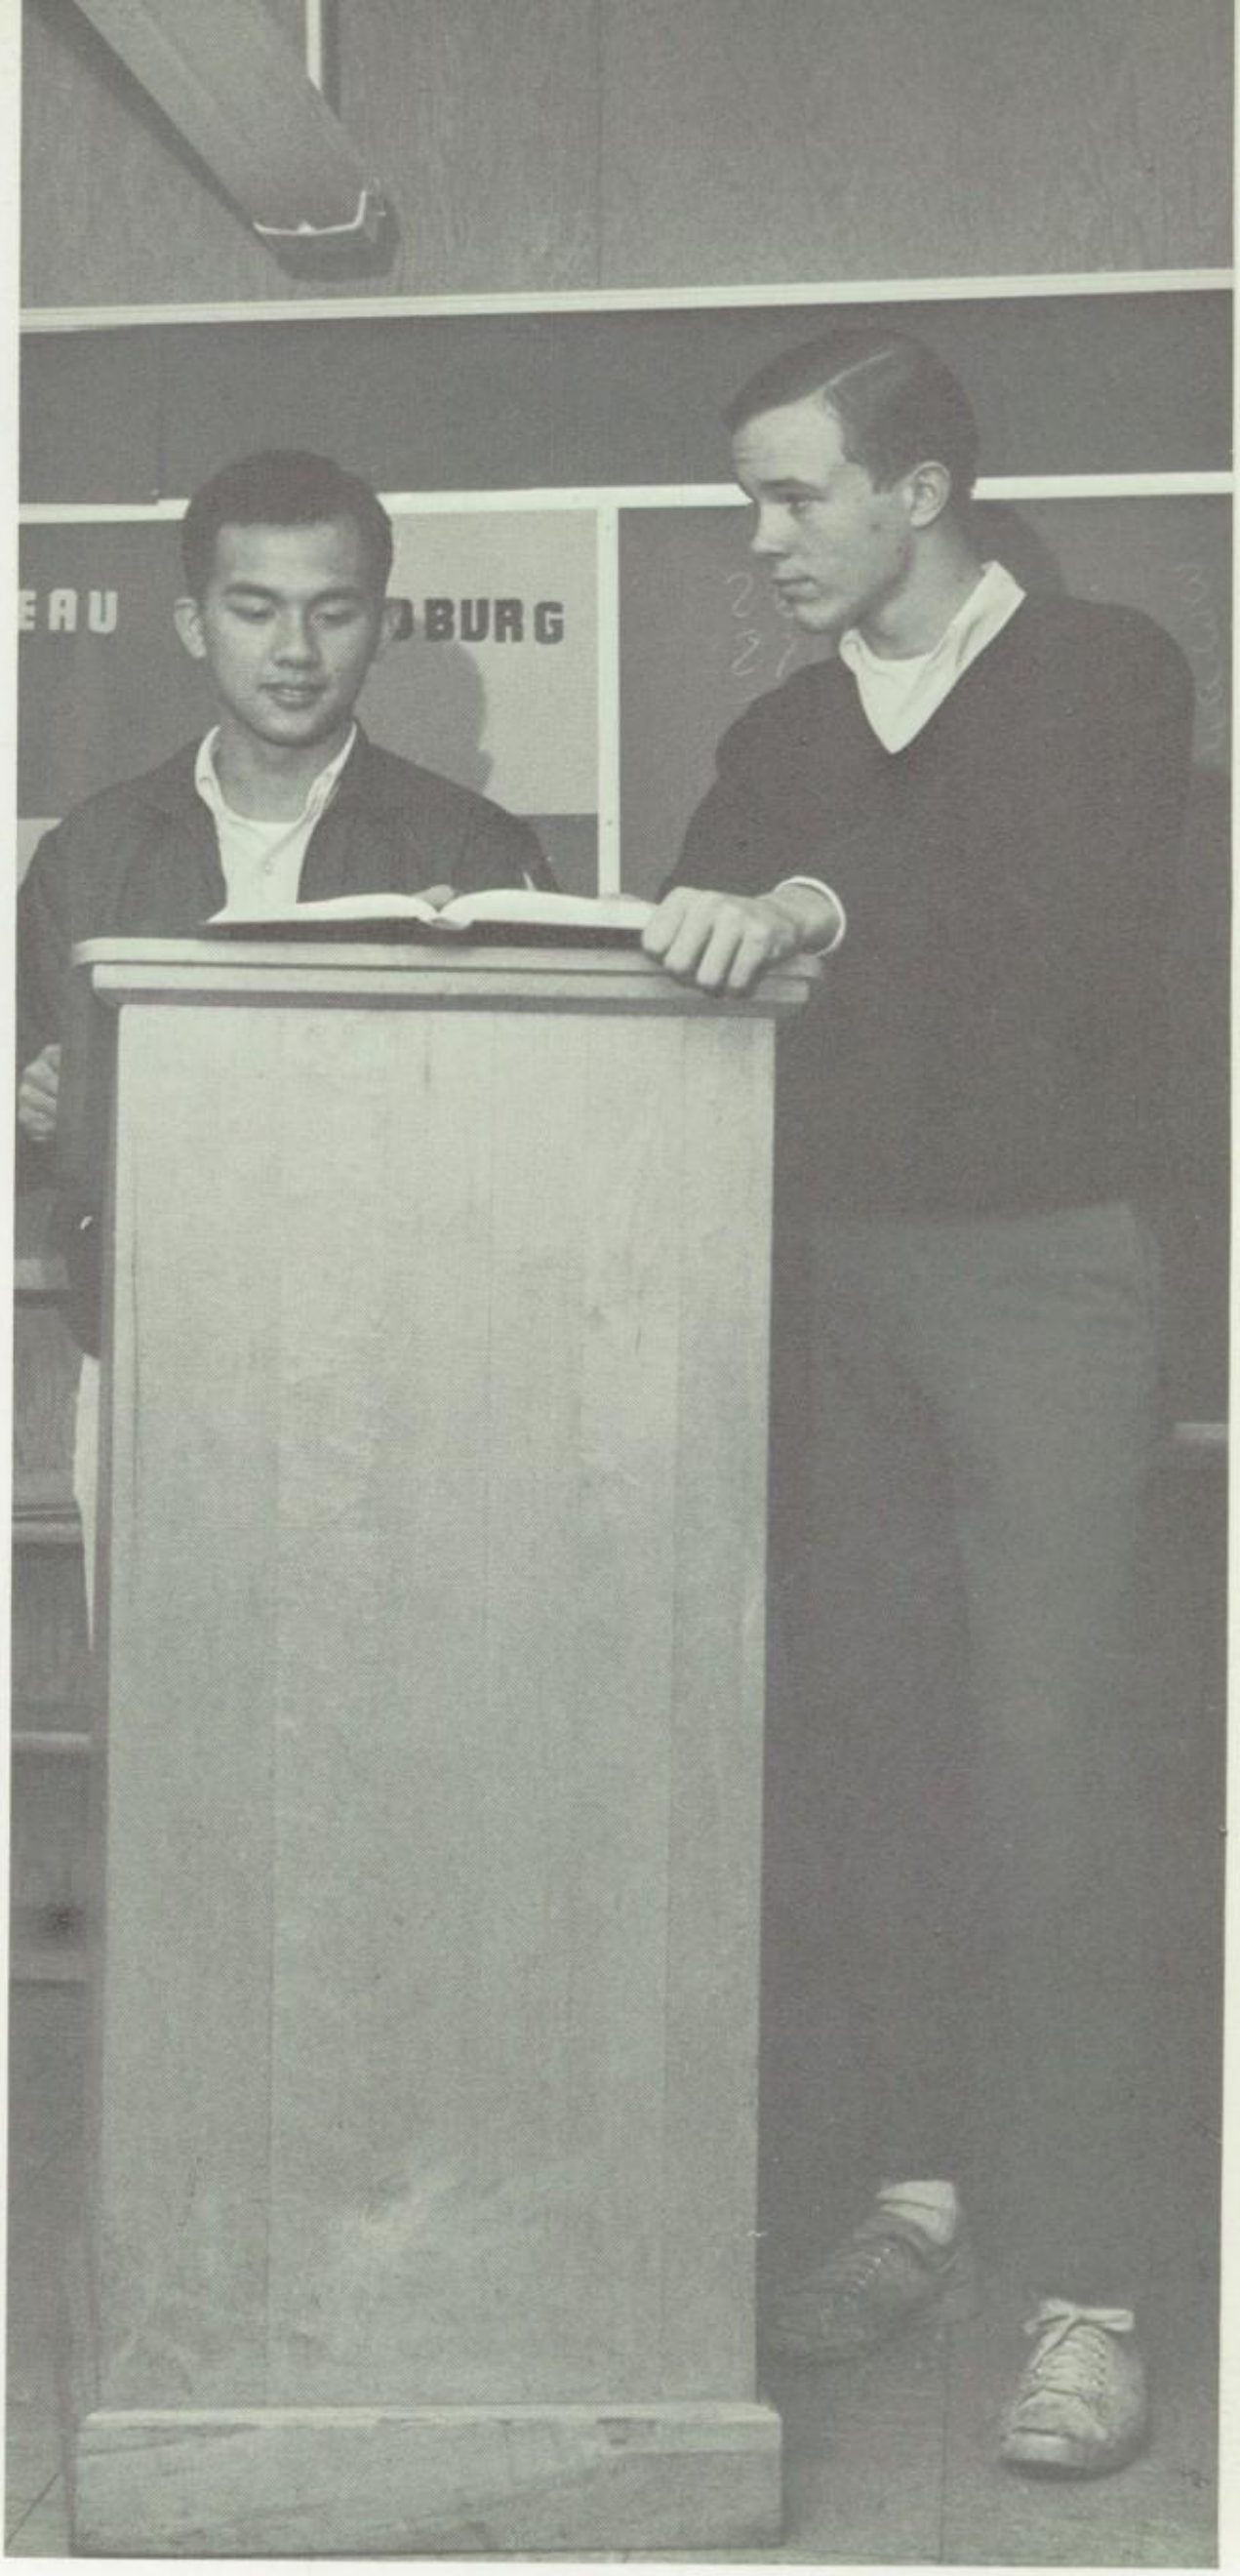
Commissioner General Dennis Low led this year's student body through one of the most prosperous years of student government. The job of Commissioner General is not an easy one to be sure, but despite this fact Dennis was able to accept the responsibility and work for the well being of every Hoover student. A heavy academic schedule took a lot of Dennis' time as shown by his high grade point average and the fact that he was chosen as one of the semi-finalists in the California State Scholarship program. Serving as Assistant Commissioner General last year helped Dennis gain experience in leadership which he applied to his job this year. Dennis' leadership along with his organization and efficiency aided in having a firm, smooth functioning student government for 1966-67.



Existence

The position held by Mike Flanigan this year was that of Assistant Commissioner General. While presiding over the student council was Mike's official responsibility, he helped plan such events as this year's Commissioners Ball. A.S.B. duties kept Mike very busy; yet he always found time to lend a helping hand to other students and activities around Hoover.

This year's Board of Commissioners was under the supervision of Mr. Kenneth Dowell. A close working arrangement between the commissioners and Mr. Dowell led to the continuance of voting registration and the Senior parking lot. Hours of time and effort were spent cooperating with one another to provide a well-organized and well-remembered year.



Commissioner General Dennis Low and Assistant Commissioner General Mike Flanigan debated the problems of leading student government.

Commissioners Strived for Efficiency

B-4 fifth period served as a place to air out current problems of Student Government. Even though government constituted hard work, there was always time for laughter.

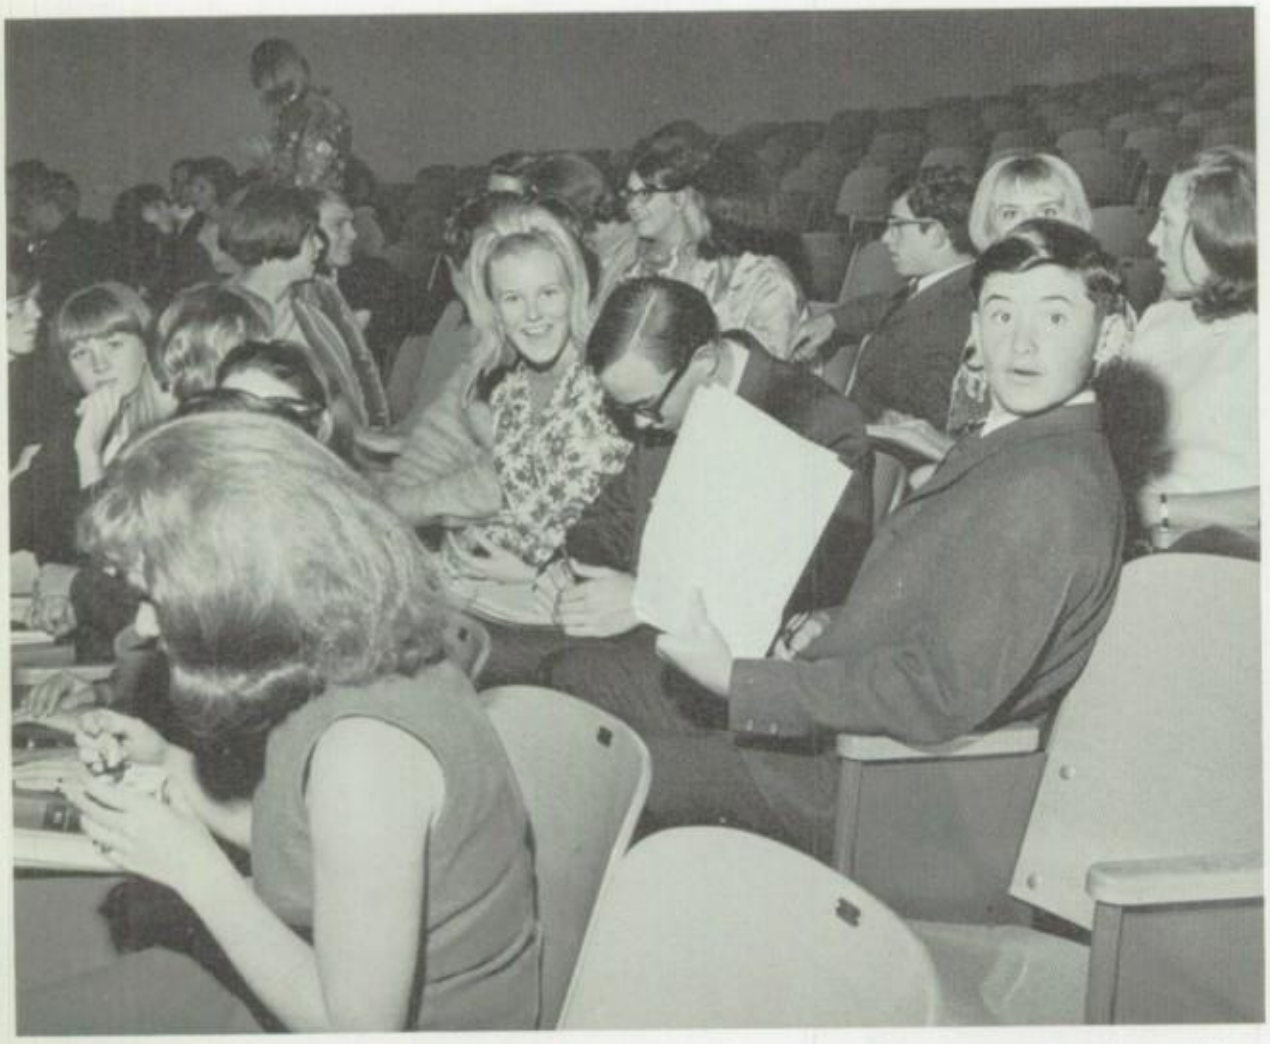
Commissioner of Elections, Terry Latta, ran all the school elections and the annual nominating convention. As Commissioner of Girls' Activities, Bonita Ponder automatically became the President of Cardinal Coeds. She represented the interests of Hoover girls. Nancy Isbell, Commissioner of Publicity, publicized all A.S.B. activities representing the school in local news media. Tom Petrich, Commissioner of Buildings and Grounds was in charge of seeing that Hoover's campus was kept clean. John Knight, Commissioner of Athletics, worked with the coaches in co-ordinating all athletic programs. As Commissioner of Student Affairs, Kathi Hoffer was responsible for Homecoming and all other student activities. Lynn Love, Commissioner of Assemblies co-ordinated programs for presentation to the school and planned assemblies from outside sources. Supervision of our Board of Commissioners was under the guidance of Mr. Dowell.

Everyday fifth period occupied the time of our thirteen commissioners. During this hour they planned activities, and solved problems submitted to them by the student body. Each commissioner headed his own committee, choosing its members.

Brian Nash, Commissioner of Finance, had the job of controlling A.S.B. funds. Brenda Jackson, secretary, was in charge of all correspondence to outside sources. As Commissioner of Thrift & Safety, Pat Crogan was in charge of selling savings stamps, supervising safety functions, and was responsible for the general safety around our halls and campus. Ida Cosio, Commissioner of School Spirit, was confronted with the problem of promoting school spirit, planning rallies and keeping Hoover "tops." Darla Henry, A.S.B. Clerk, took the minutes of their meetings and kept the scrapbook. Rosalyn Bornstein, Commissioner of Sales and Organizations, served as the link between the clubs.

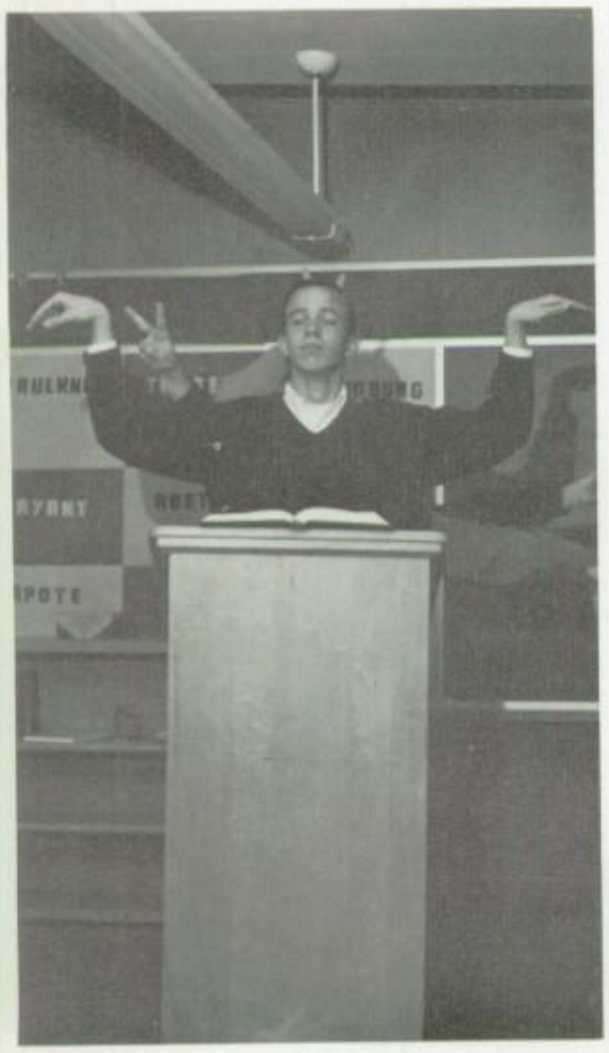
Problems were discussed and solutions submitted by Mr. Dowell, Hoover's A.S.B. advisor.

Hoover's Commissioners Were Found



Kathi Hoffer, Mike Flanigan and Lynn Love found speech to be quite an amusing subject.

Dennis Low hosted Crawford's Commissioner General, Tom Crooks as he listened to the praises of Hoover.



Is Mike Flanigan leading student government or an Egyptian Meditation?

While eating in the cafeteria Rosalyn Bornstein exclaimed, "Oh look, it's all gone!"

Everywhere and Anywhere!

Hoover's Commissioners led two lives. We saw them in the limelight around our campus and thought to ourselves wouldn't it be nice to be one of the figure-heads of Hoover? Just think, they got out of class quite often, left school to visit other places, headed committees, had more pictures in the yearbook, and were generally recognized around school both by students and faculty. Yes, that must have been a great life.

Well, take another look. Commissioners did get benefits and privileges because of the position they had, but in all honesty each one deserved it. They campaigned and won the election for that honor. It was an honor, but even an honor didn't come easily. Our Commissioners had to attend classes, take tests, and do Homework just as everyone else did in addition to their jobs of leading Hoover's student government. The 1966-67 Commissioners led two lives — that of a student body leader, and that of a student. These two pages are dedicated to the student life of a Commissioner.

Oh no, Brenda, a whole weeks diet down the drain.

Ohhhhhhhhhh, I forgot to use my ban this morning. Too bad Terry.

Is this really student government in action? Just ask John, Terry, Mike and Tom.

Behind the smile of each Senior attendant was the secret hope that she would at that moment be chosen Hoover's homecoming queen. Their anxiety was somewhat steadied by the support of the nervous escorts, Dan Miller, Rick Thompson, and Paul Salerno.

Floats, Femmes, and Football

Past cheerleaders, old cars, and plenty of spirit set the Homecoming mood.

A new feature of Hoover's Homecoming '66 was the innovation of active class competition through the construction of floats. The judging was held at the Homecoming rally with the junior float capturing first place. The actual transformation of a catamaran into the junior float lasted one week. Organization, communication, 3,500 paper flowers and the enthusiastic support of over 200 juniors contributed heavily to the excellence of the junior float.

Preparation of the sophomore float, judged second place, began early in October. The float was constructed with 6,000 paper napkins, string, spray paint, a wood foundation, and the time and effort of spirited sophomores.

Hasty preparation and a lack of organization were major factors in the disappointment of the senior float.

honored to be on the winning float.

Pat Crogan, Barbara Hersey and Kathi Hoffer entered the stadium on the senior float.

Meant Homecoming '66

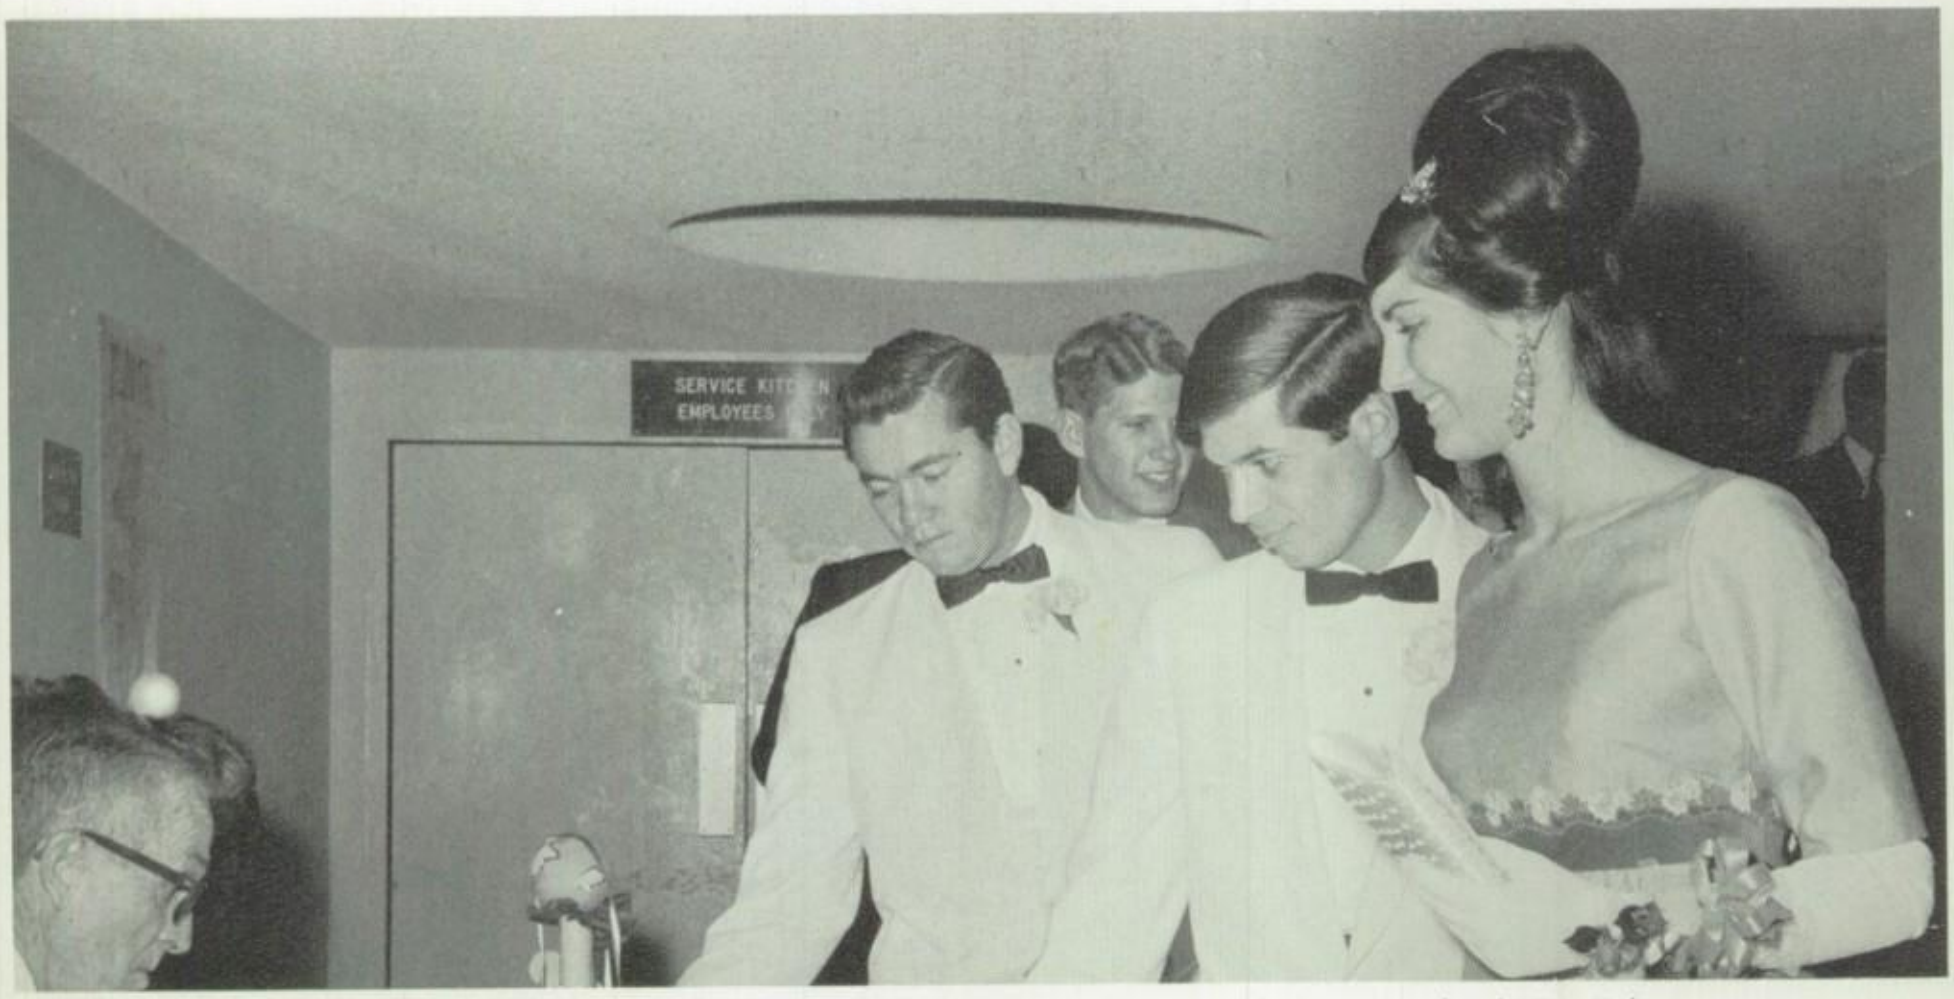
The Grecian theme carried out with tall pillars made from carpet rolls and covered with marble contact paper, and the beauty of the senior attendants were forgotten by many when the senior float fell apart at the Homecoming rally. Luckily with the aid of a devoted group of seniors the float was put back together before the big night.

Although the floats received most of the attention of the Homecoming crowd, Hoover's past cheerleaders made a spirited comeback as they performed time-honored Hoover cheers.

Hoover's Homecoming '66 ended on a triumphant note as Hooverites past and present saw the Cardinals secure a 21 to 16 victory over the San Diego Cavers for the first time in three years.

Our peppy little friend was driving everyone buggy spreading school spirit.

Love Makes the World Go Round



Mr. Dowell and Mrs. Ruffa checked the names of each Hoover student and his date as a night of "Love" began.

Dennis Low, Commissioner General, headed the reception line with the other commissioners following.

It was February 10th and the clock was striking twelve noon. Passes to leave school were frantically being shown to teachers by excited Hoover girls. Where was half of Hoover's population going? Their patterns were scattered among hair appointments, picking up formals, and even boutonnieres, but all were getting ready for the same event—the Commissioner's Ball.

The Caribbean Room of the El Cortez was this year's setting. The theme, "Love Makes the World Go Round," was carried out in pink, white, and lavender arrangements and decorations.

Tradition was broken as music was provided by Sandi and the Classics. This type of music was a change from the usual orchestra.

Door prizes, Valentine suckers, and pictures of the night all added to the great success of this year's Commissioners' Ball.

Sandi and the Classics took a break as Hoover students rested their weary toes.

of Handel's Hallelujah Chorus.

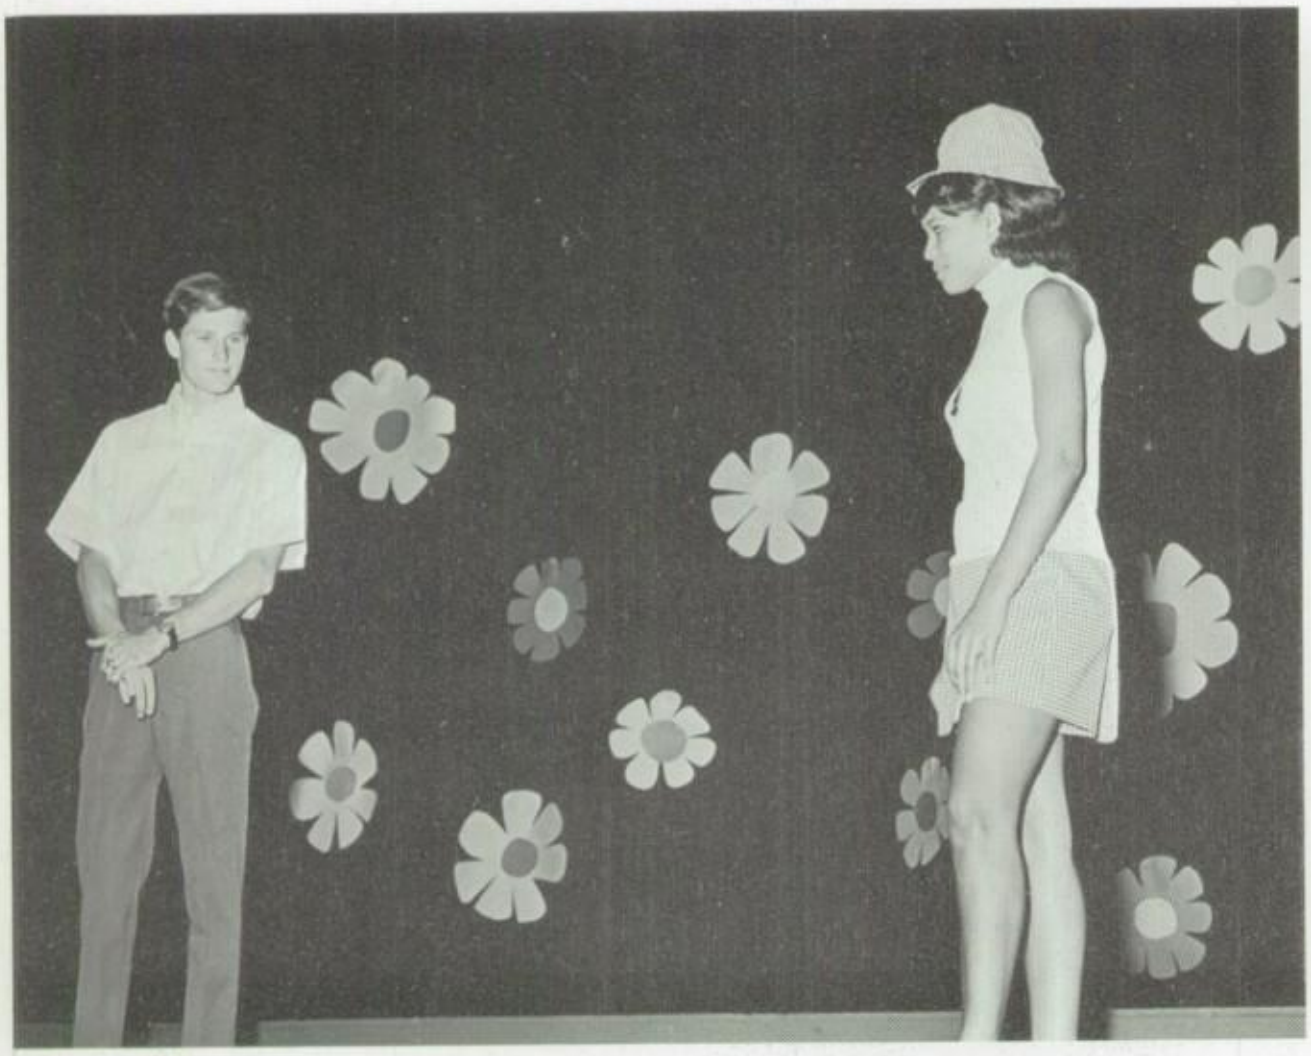
The Drama, P.E. and Music Departments co-ordinated their efforts to present to the school and community a cultural setting for Christmas. The theme of the program which was "The Joy of Christmas Through Music" was carried out by Las Pasadas. Las Pasadas is the name given to the traditional way of celebrating Christmas in the villages and homes of Mexico. Las Pasadas, or the asking for shelter, represent the several inns at which Joseph begged shelter for Mary. Beginning on the sixteenth of December the villagers dramatized the search for shelter and each evening of the nine days, a group of villagers, pretending they are pilgrims, carry figures of Mary and Joseph and go from house to house begging shelter. Finally the master of one of the homes invites the pilgrims to enter and join the family in a fiesta. At the end of the evening's fun, the breaking of the piñata takes place.

The Ensemble portrayed the villagers in search for shelter and members of the Cardinal Choir depicted the home owners.

The Advanced Girls Choir sang songs from the Hanukka Celebration while the modern dance troupe presented the story of the Candle Lighting.

The vocal section of the music department was led by Mr. Cooper. The Ensemble, Cardinal Choir, and Girls' Choir were the advanced groups, while beginning singers had the opportunity to sing with the Mixed Chorus or the Girls' Chorus.

A Double Bounce of Spring and



Bonnie Ponder and Steve Mitchell showed the casual look in fashion for Spring.

Frank McCauley wondered how he ever got roped into modeling—Ida Casio will never tell.

Although spring and fashion could not quite grasp hands, the annual fashion show, done by the Adorable Shop and Dan Morris, brought the sun to the auditorium. Bikinis, bermudas, tent dresses, wild colors, after five garments and prom formals brightened the daisy colored stage. Wild fashions were never before so gay.

Hoover girls who made their own dresses for Dirndl Day were invited to the cafeteria at seven in the morning to model in front of a panel of seven judges. About fifty-five talented girls participated in the show. Out of twenty seniors, four were chosen as semi-finalists. After much discussion and decision, Miss Dirndl was selected. Linda Anderson, escorted by Mr. Esquire, Mike Williams, displayed a flowered print dress covered by a white coat. She and Mr. Esquire were presented to the student body at the fashion show.

Spring was bursting out all over and so were the fashions on Hoover's stage.

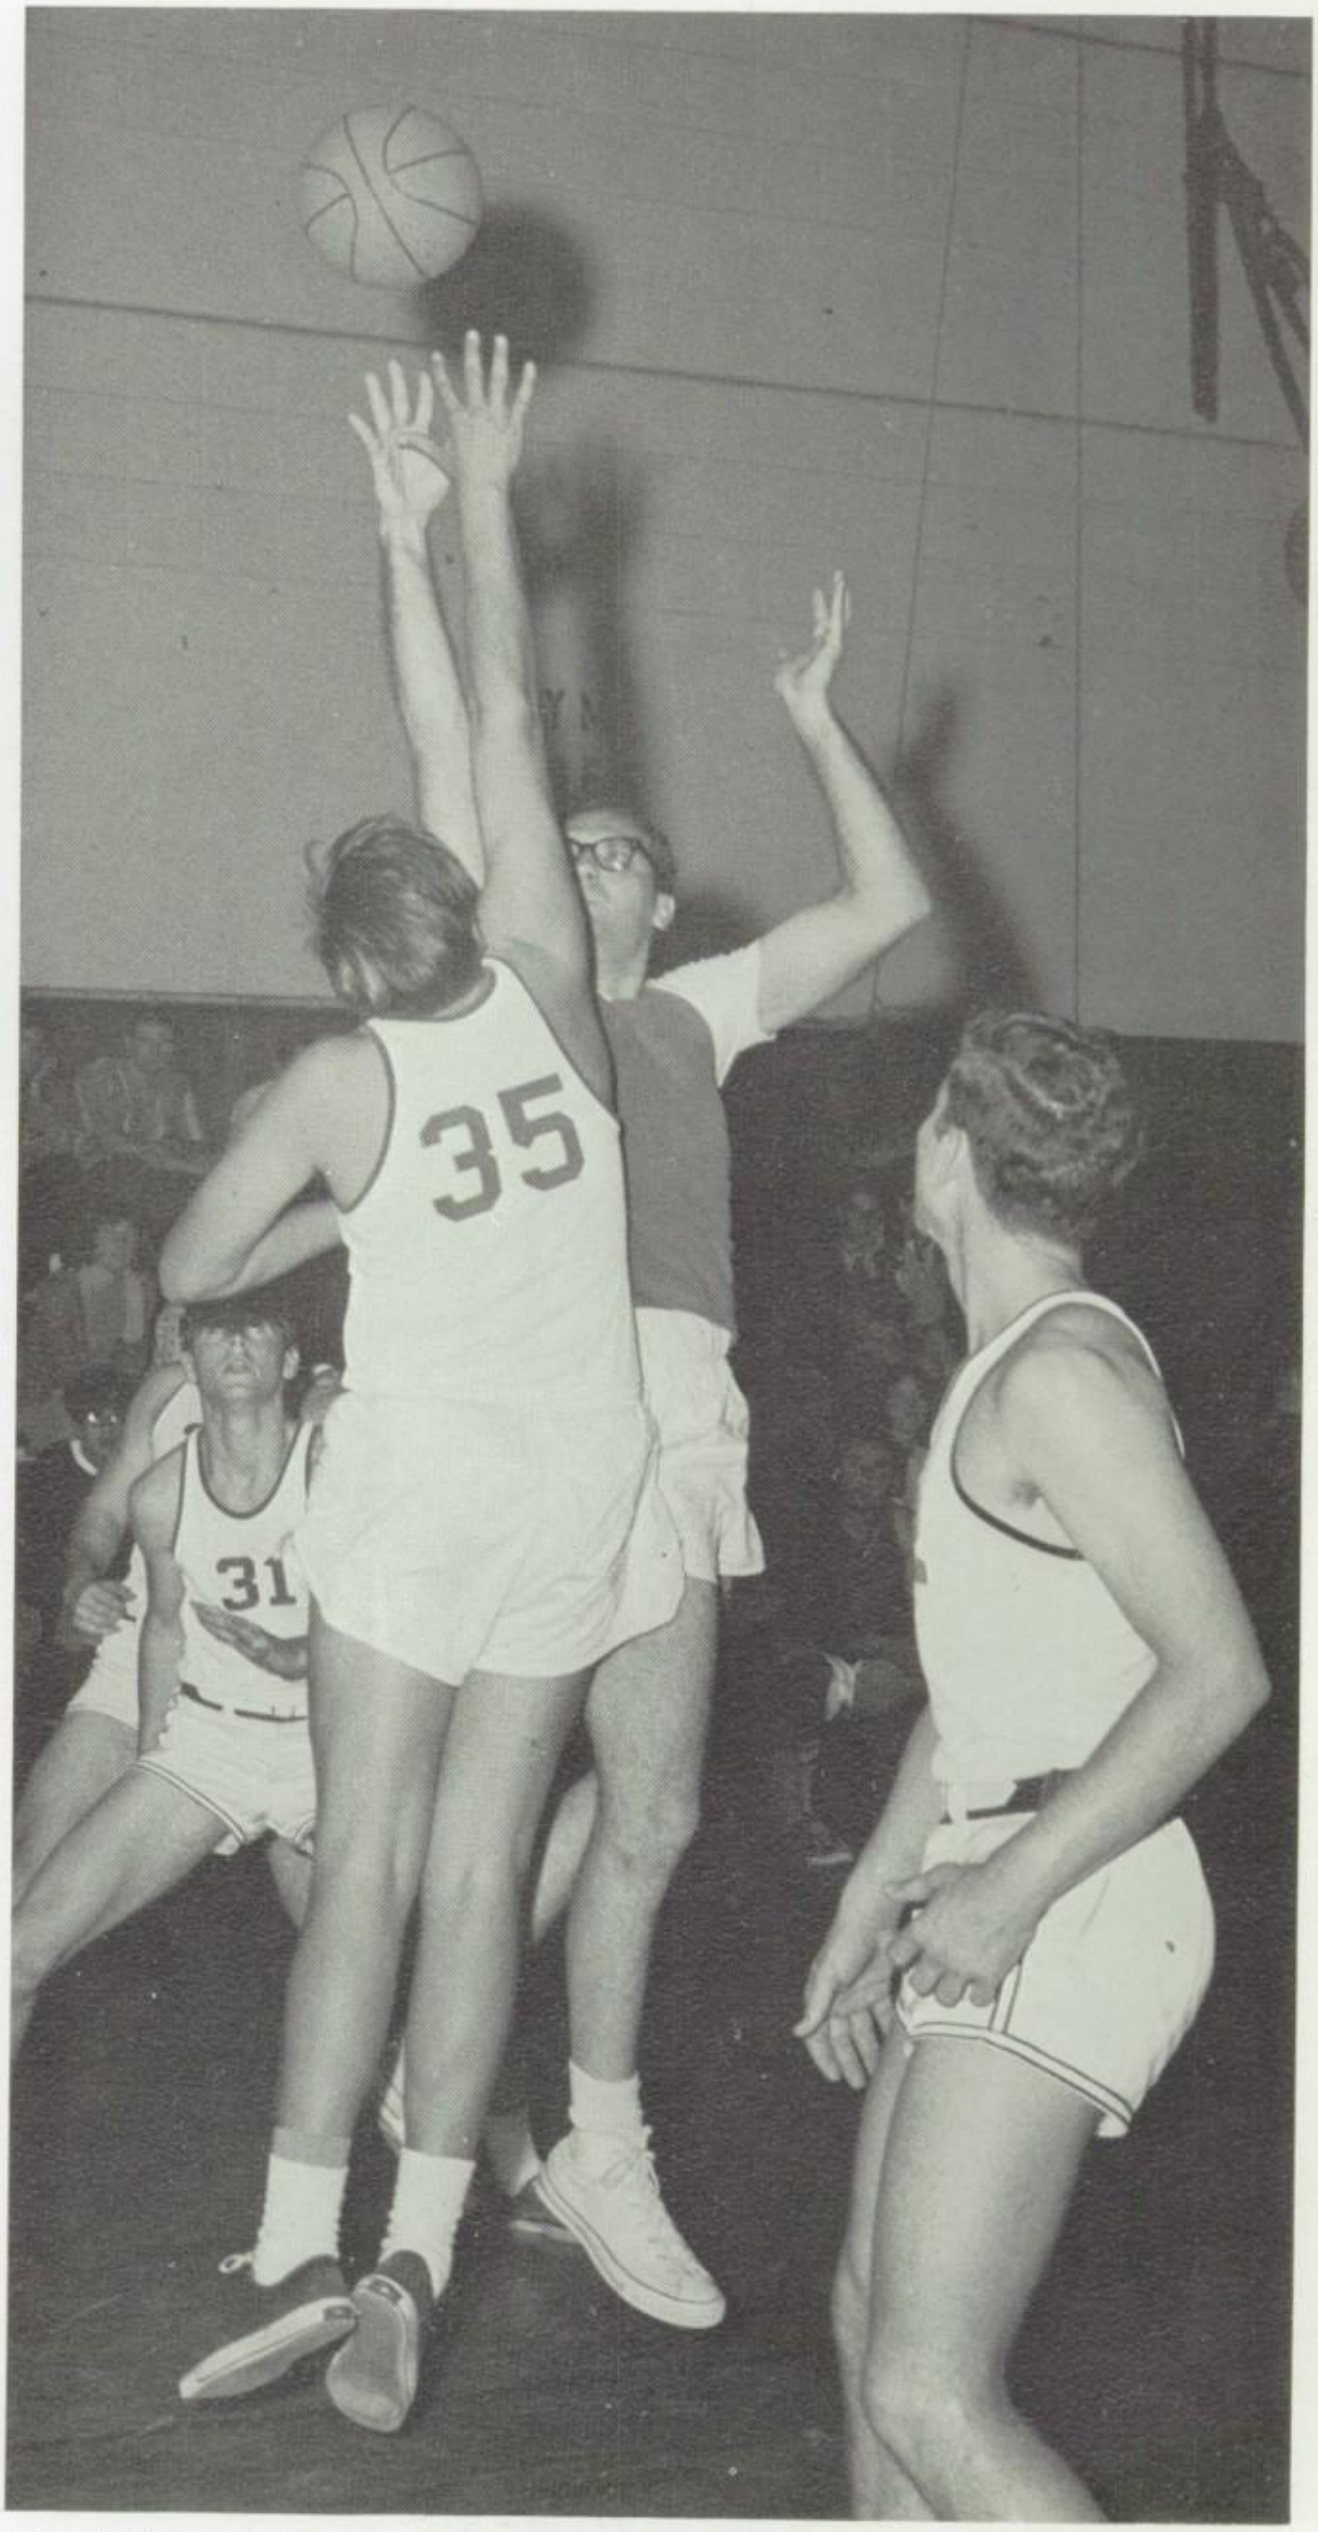
Fairness Proved Foul for Defeated Seniors

It was on March 16 at 2:00 P.M. in the Boys' Gym that the annual event occurred. The Senior-Faculty basketball game was to be that annual event. The abilities of both teams were nearly equal, and to assure no Faculty "foul play" Jim Simpson and Fred Carbone were hired to serve as two college referees. Within the first two minutes of play the Faculty jumped ahead with a 6-0 lead. The end of the first quarter saw the Faculty ahead 17 to 12 and by half time the teachers had boosted their score to 27-22. The Senior team upset the Hoover's Faculty early in the third quarter with a three point lead over the confident teachers. The Seniors' lead did not exist long as the Faculty forged ahead never to trail again. The final score ended in the Seniors' defeat with the score being 59-45. High scorers of the game were Coach Bartow, Coach DeBate, and Mr. Krill for the teachers and George Odencrantz and Richard Schotte, for the Seniors.



"Jump-ball, Jump-ball—Get it, Get it!" Mr. Krill and Mike Palcic were up in the air over this predicament.

This was one night when calories didn't count.

Dads

The annual banquet for dads and daughters sponsored by the Cardinal Co-eds was held on November 22nd, but preparations were begun early in October. The theme chosen was "Dad and Daughter Duet," which was carried out in publicity, posters, decorations, and the main plan of the program. A devoted decorations committee worked diligently preparing center pieces, wall decors, name tags, and place cards. Practice and rehearsing resulted in entertainment, which included a ventriloquist act with Mary Jane Reed and her daughter, Wendy Jane; a folk-singing act by a Hoover student, Sally Green; and a dad and daughter duet featuring Lenore Groves and her father. The entire dinner was catered by Jansen Smorgasbord.

The Big and Little Sister Party was an annual event in the life of Hoover. This year's "get acquainted" party was under the supervision of Bonita Ponder, Commissioner of Girls Activities. Entertainment was provided by Hoover students and refreshments were served to all who attended.

A dance with dad and a proud father went hand in hand.

Hoover's girls, new and old, joined together for an informal party.

Girls and gossip . . . need we say more?

"I Still Believe People

The cast and crew presented Mrs. Archer and Mrs. Wooley gifts of appreciation on opening night.

The idea of total seclusion for two years is nearly impossible for most people to even imagine. And yet, during the war years, hundreds of German Jews hid for their very existence. To be discovered was to prepare for certain death. A shadow of fear hung over all the abused Jews.

In one family, a young girl had the gift of joy and laughter which seemed to dispel the gray shadow.

Anne Frank kept a diary of the years of their hiding. The hope and youth of her thoughts were the basis for the dramatization by Frances Goodrich of her diary.

The beauty and poignancy of this drama was successfully portrayed by members of the Advanced Drama class, under the direction of Mrs. Anne Archer.

Eight people living in one cramped room for two war-filled years, provided one young girl with the incentive to create The Diary of Anne Frank.

September—Cheryl Effron

This year's Cardinal Co-eds were an asset to our school. Their service projects, sales and activities all were gauged toward the betterment of Hoover. The girls' enthusiasm and effort in making a success of the Cardinal Co-eds was something to be commended. One of the service projects undertaken by the girls was the Christmas Mailbox. In its third year it again was a large success, and for only a penny, a Christmas card could be sent to anyone in the school. The student body was lucky to have these girls and was very proud of their work.

A Co-ed of the Month was a girl chosen by the Cardinal Co-ed Cabinet for her time and effort spent toward the betterment of Hoover. Only ten senior girls were able to receive this honor, as each month a different girl was selected. There were far more than ten girls who deserved this award; thus those girls not in Hoover's limelight as much as others were chosen.

Each of our ten honored co-eds gained her deserved recognition with the placement of her picture on the bulletin board in the main hall. An article about each girl was also placed in the school paper.

Foolish Fads Found on the

Alex Walker, Pat Krause, Linda Vassallo, Jo Ann Shedden, June Vincent and Holly Palmer worked with their sponsor Miss Wheeler in the Campus Shop everyday.

Cardinal Campus Shop Sold Everything From Books to Beanies

Pencils and paper, notebooks and staplers, shakers for the games, even Cardinal key chains—whatever the need might have been the Campus Shop was right at hand. Last minute supplies and even school spirit boosters such as Cardinal birds and beanies were available at the shop. Under the direction of Miss Wheeler and the volunteers from her merchandising class, the Campus Shop was open for business every day during both lunches. Hoover students found the shop an asset to the school and thus made it a third year success!

Campus Shop sales attracted many Hoover customers. New sales were made with the addition of paperback books.

Funniest Faces

Fashion was an important part of the lives of Cardinals. Students wandered around the halls in "high styles" and "kookie" clothes.

The mini skirt, paisley shirts, pant suits and fake hair played an important role in every day life.

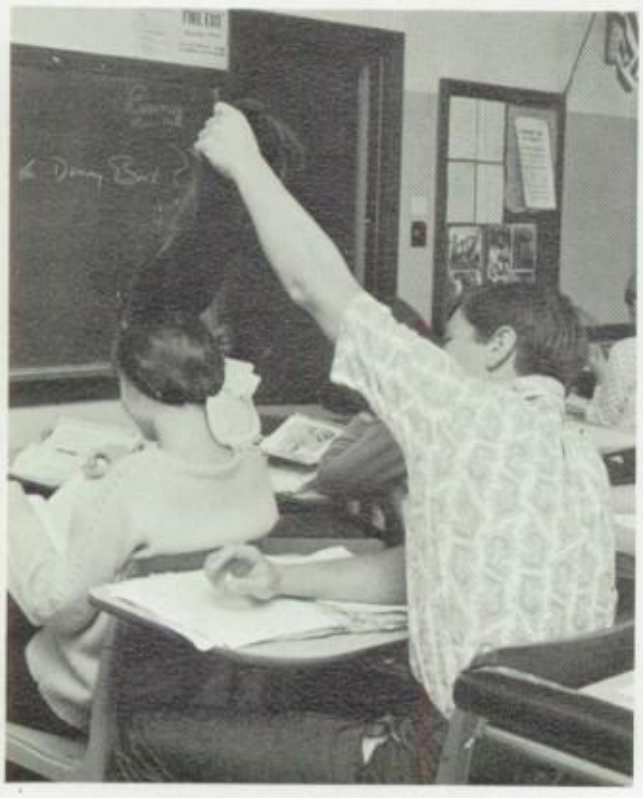
Falls, switches, postigues, and wigs were not uncommon. A girl could come to school with beautiful long hair, five minutes later have it short and again she may have a long ponytail. One day she may be a brunette the next day a blushing blonde.

For after school playtime the pant suit made the scene. Kookie colors, crazy hats and funny feet made the outfit a complete success.

The boys also had a great new wave of fashion. The "Mod look" with paisley shirts, white cuffs and collars, plus bright and fancy shades of levies caused the girls to sit up and take notice.

The leggy look took hold when the weather cooled off. Girls wore coarse, criss-cross stockings in colors to match every attire.

Vinyl took hold as girls were seen in bright raincoats and hats. The vinyl boot, clear and colored, completed the outfit with that special touch.



This was one of those "hairy" situations.

These were the fads? They had to be kidding.

Warm hello's and friendly smiles were exchanged as we met our Amigos for the first time.

Amigos Meant International

Hola—como estas? became a familiar greeting during November as Hoover played host to thirty-one Ecuadorian students. These students from Quito were hosted by Hoover families for eighteen days.

As the bus pulled up in front of Hoover the Wednesday of their arrival, pictures began flashing. Everyone was excited to see his amigo for the first time. After the Amigos were united with their American families a reception was held in the cafeteria.

Much time was devoted to entertaining our guests. It seemed that these students loved "to party." The Latin American beat was peppy and caught on fast. Dancing, Spanish and American folksinging and gossip was the main attraction of these "get-togethers."

A day at the zoo was one of the activities planned for our friends. One amigo remarked, "Oh, look at the beefs." Many phrases like this one appeared in conversation, but we always got the message.

A tree was planted in Hoover's patio in honor of our guests. This tree will forever symbolize the warmth and friendships felt by all.

A tree planting ceremony was just one of the many remembrances of our visitors from Ecuador.

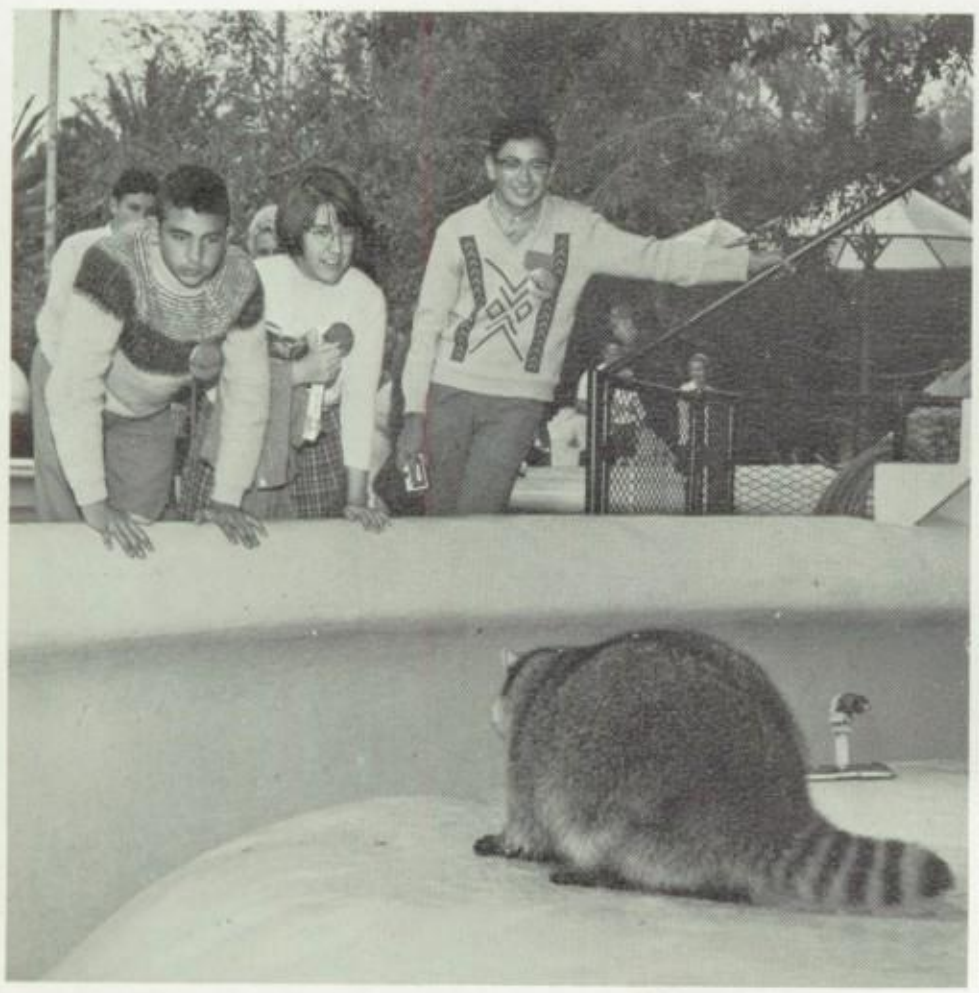
Off the bus and into the life of Hoover stepped our amigos.

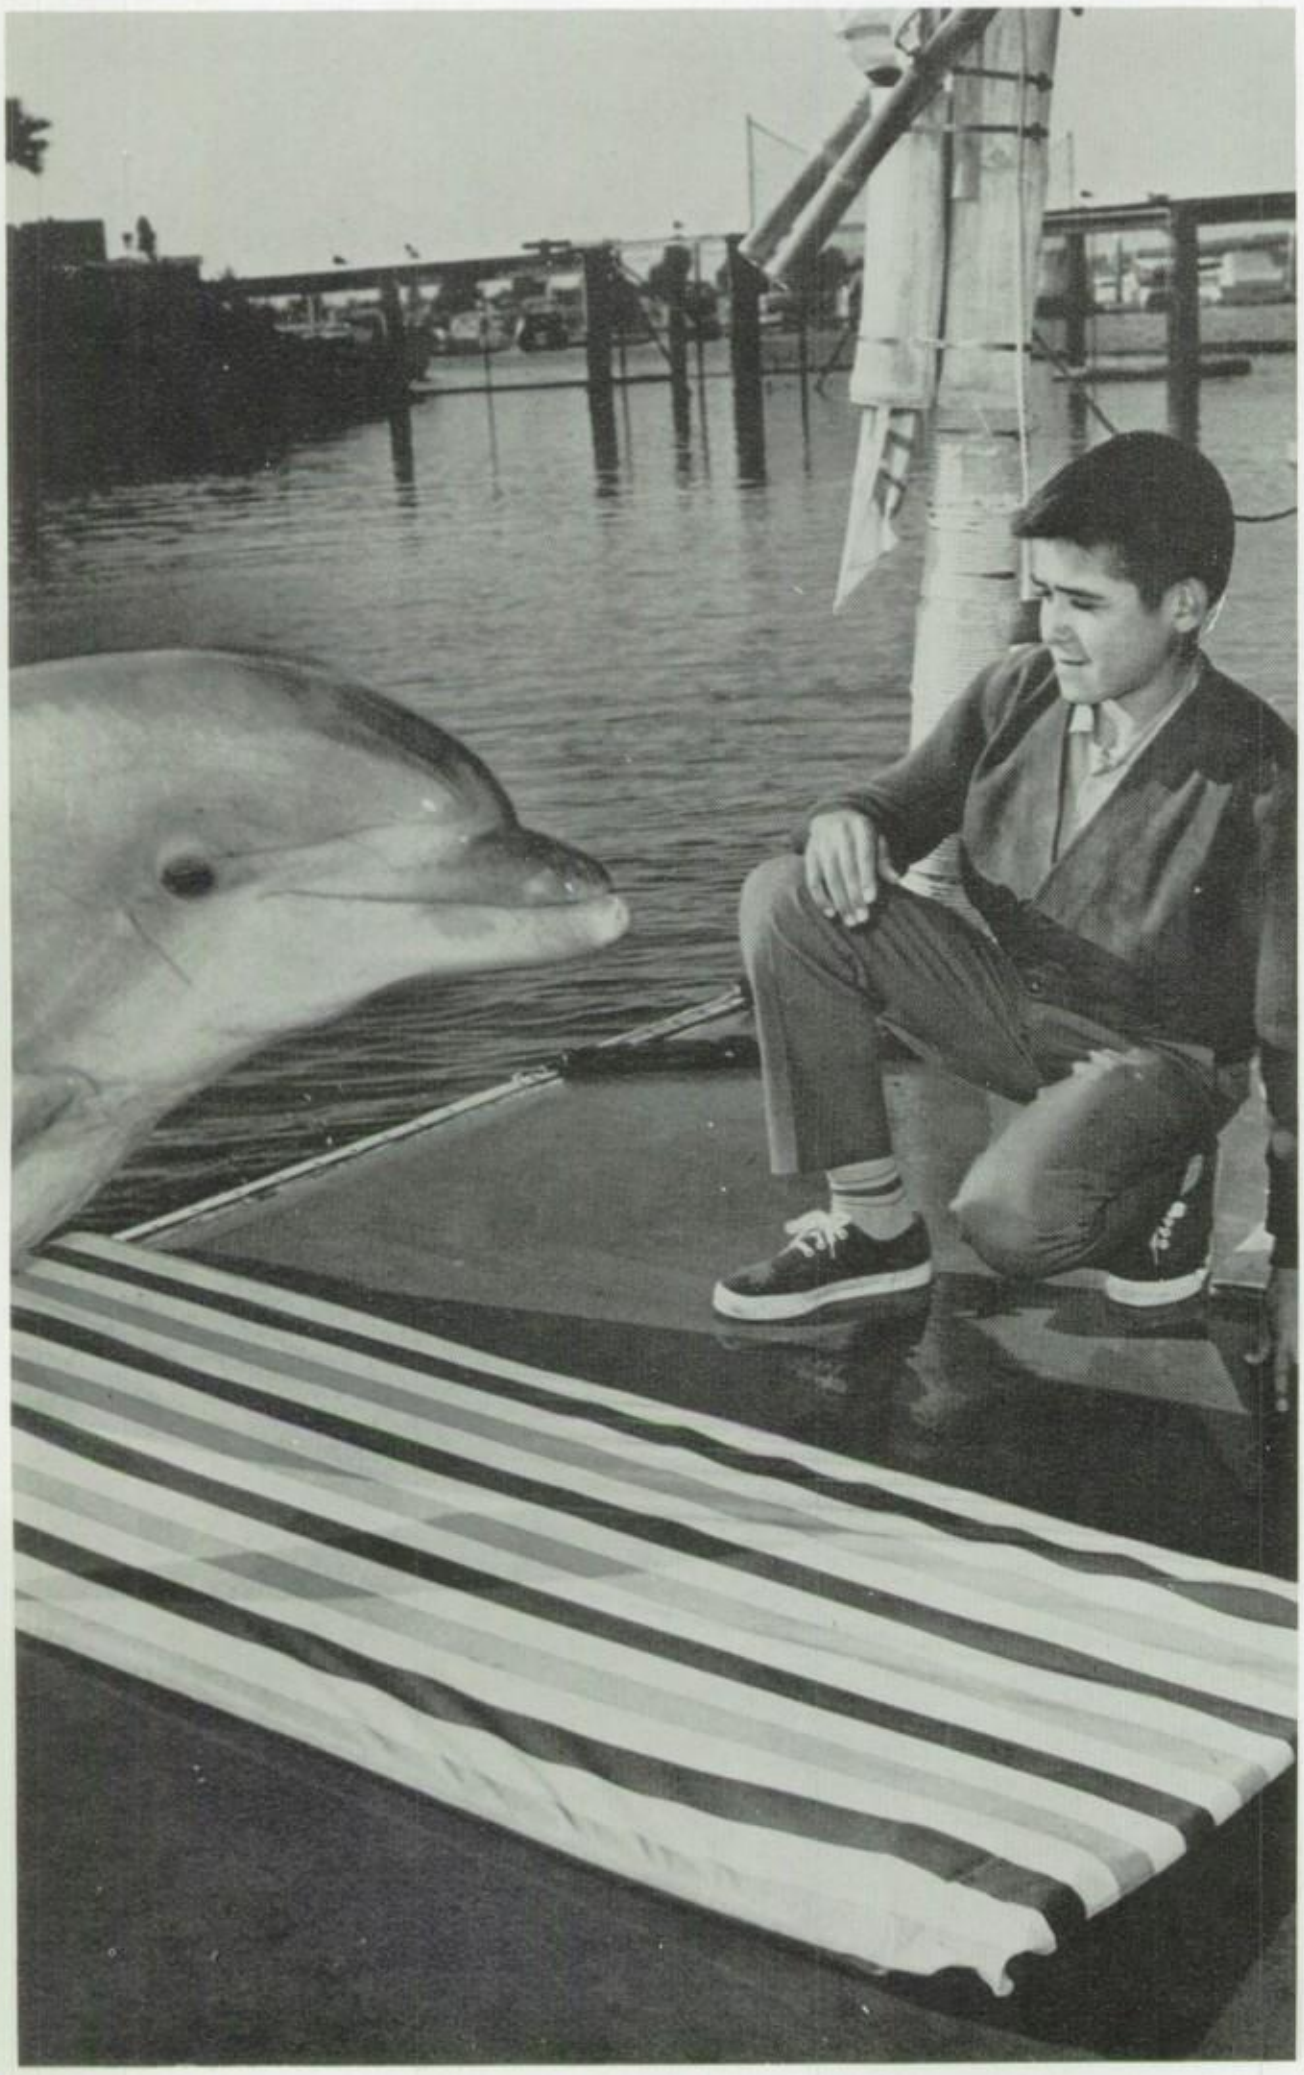


The San Diego Zoo was the setting for a day of fun enjoyed by the amigos and their families.

Two Countries United

Fantasy land became reality land as the Amigos and their hosts arrived at Disneyland for a day of fun and adventure. Tom Sawyer's Island, the Tea Cups, horse and buggy rides and the Matterhorn were just a few of the thrilling experiences the Amigos enjoyed.

Movies of the entire visit were taken from the day the Amigos arrived to the time they boarded their plane. This film captured many moments of realism and times that will never be forgotten.



¿Hablas espanol Señor Porpoise? One surprise in store for our Amigos was a trip to Sea World. A day of pure enjoyment was felt by all our Ecuadorian guests. The sights and sounds of the water world were unveiled and captured the mood of our San Diego marineland.

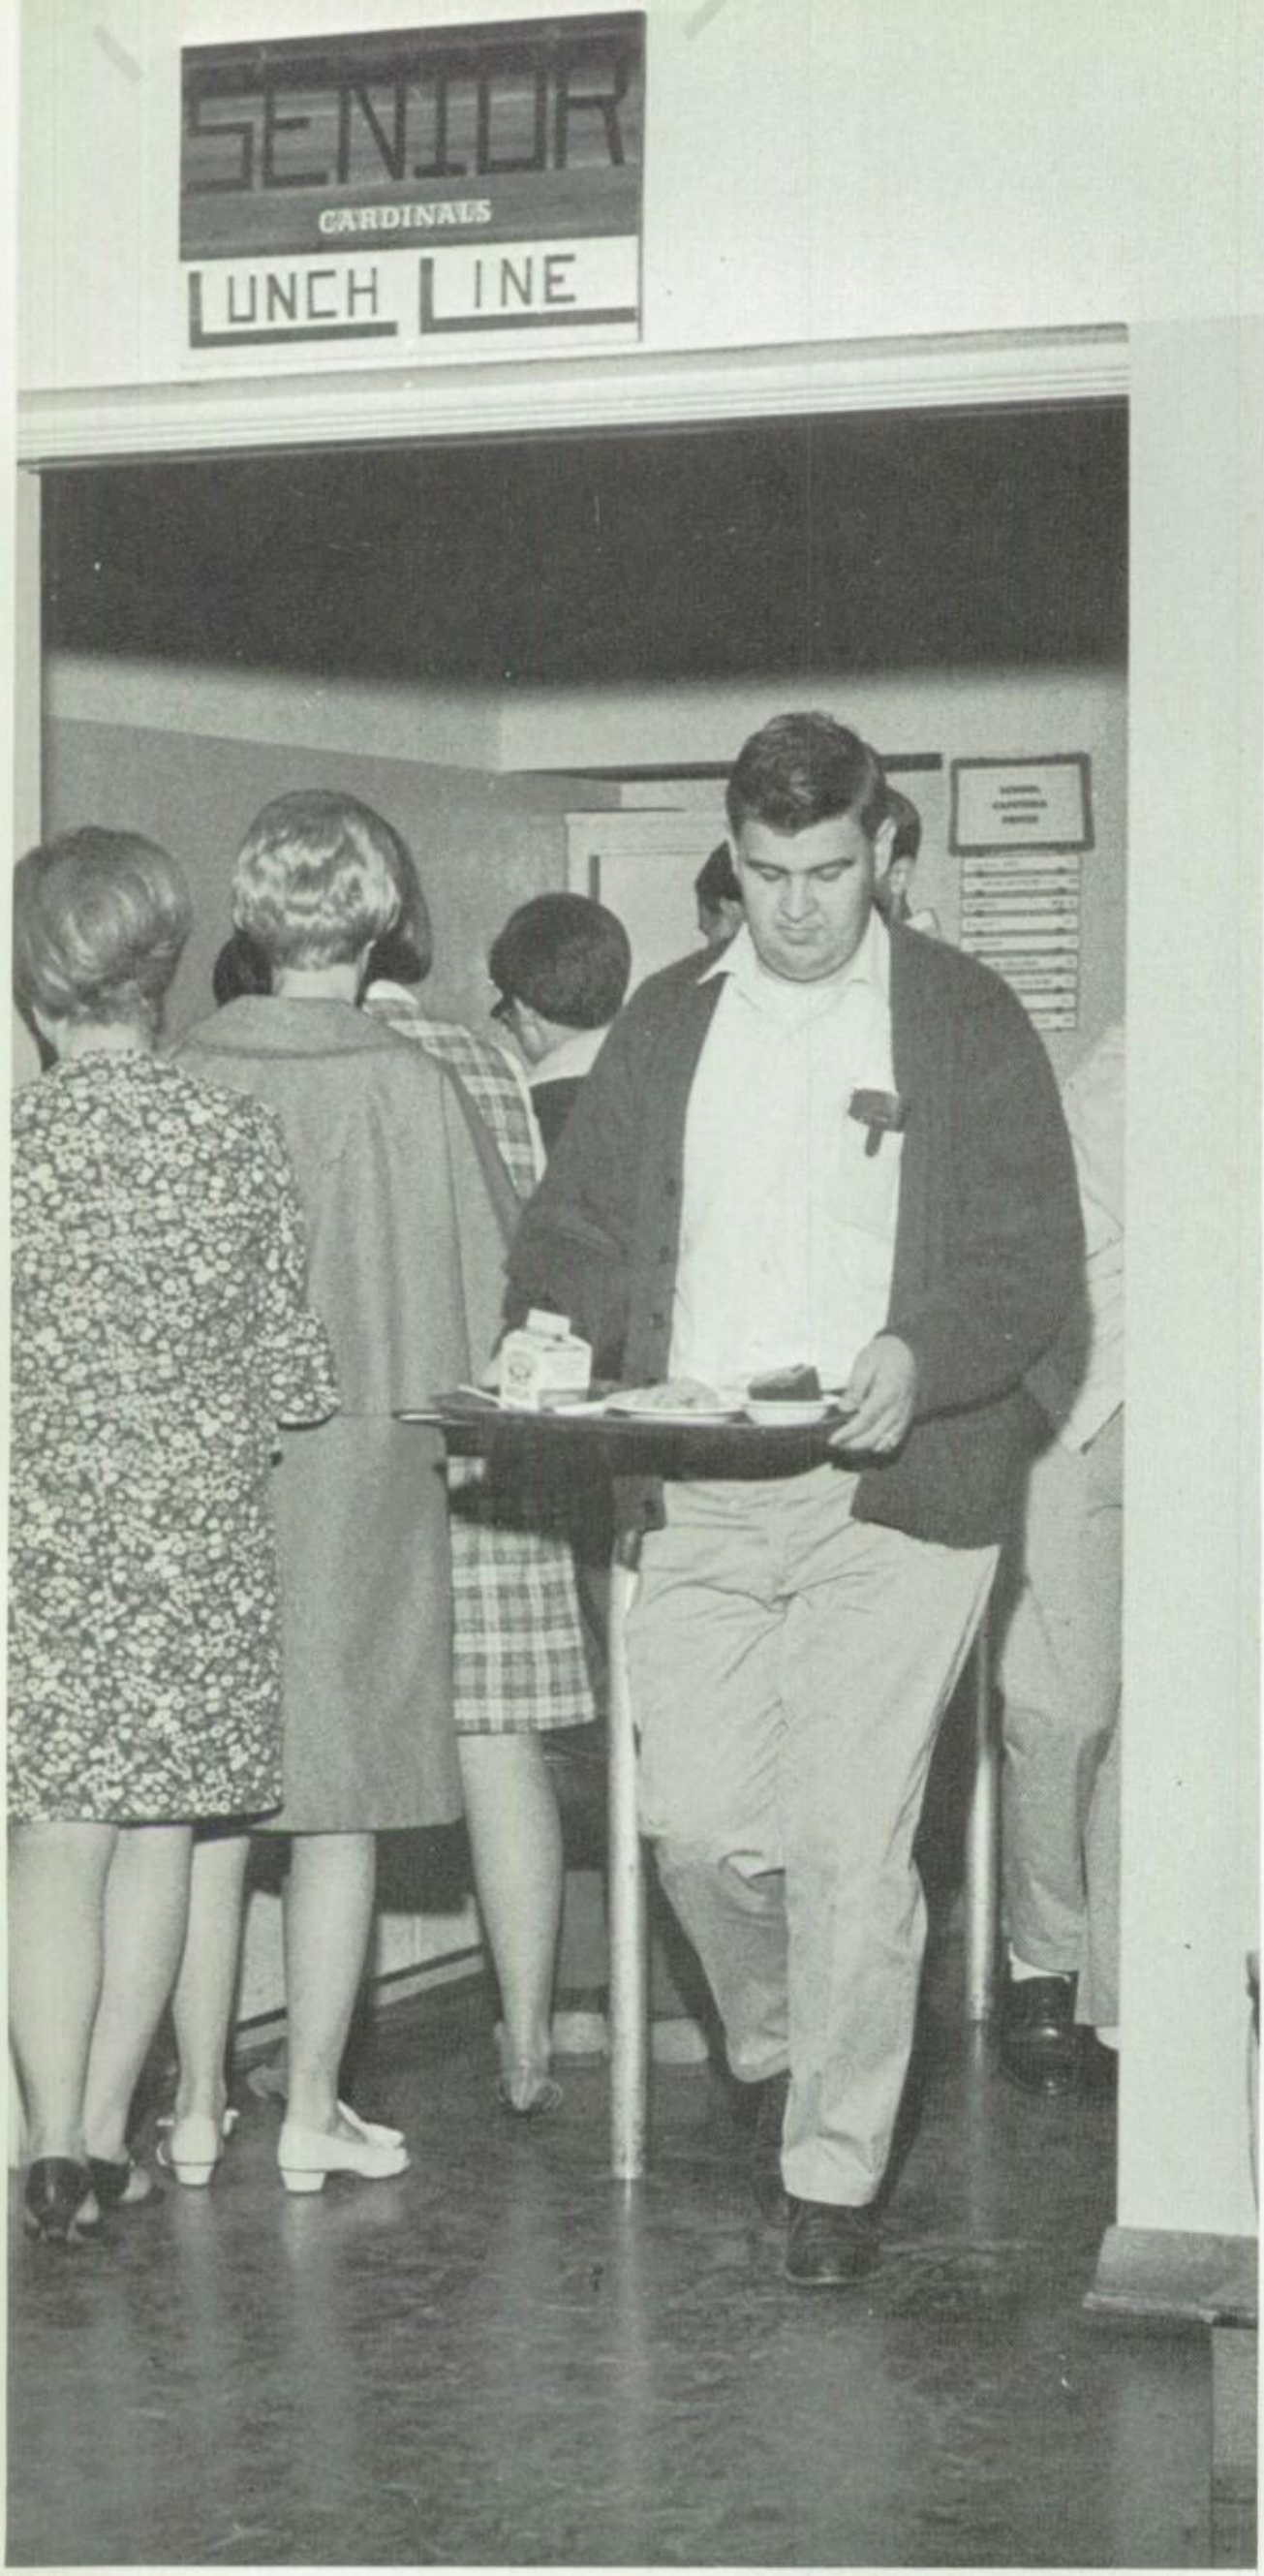
In Eighteen Days

It seemed as if only a few hours had passed and the short stay of our Amigos was over. Tears fell, kisses and good-byes were said, for their departure time was growing near. A piece of Hoover was leaving for Quito.

As the plane soared into the air, one feeling was left behind; the feeling that we all spoke the same language—the language of friendship.

The amigos have gone but their image will live on as we relive their visit through movies.

The magical kingdom of Disneyland will long be remembered in the hearts of our amigos.



Memories of Hoover will long be remembered as we look over our past years at Hockerville. Can you honestly forget our lunch lines, or the parking facilities provided? Would you dare forget the sound of the 2:30 bell, Kats Corner during class elections or the song and cheerleaders as they add their spirit to the football games?

Such things as the crowded halls, numerous tests, and extra-curricular activities held fond memories as we view the past years at Hoover. For these and other "unforgettables" the 1967 Dias Cardinales dedicates this and the following page.

Left: The Senior lunch line, commonly used by sophomores and juniors, served the same food as the other lines.

Mike and Jennifer survived the battle of Kats Corner.

Will Linger Long in Our Minds...

Two unknown Hooverites settled their differences peacefully.

Why look so depressed boys? Hoover will pull through.

Mr. Henzie always sparked the spirit by letting everyone know "he" was for Hoover.

Hey, Red! Hey, White! Hey, Hoover!

A quick glance at our senior finalists the afternoon before the big night revealed many surprises.

Let's Go!

What keeps spirit up? Why, rallies of course. What makes Hoover tops? Why, rallies of course. And what are a lot of fun? Rallies. Yes, our rallies were fun and spirited, but much planning and hard work went behind each RAH!

The song and cheerleaders, the Commissioners and the administration contributed to the success of spirit.

For years, Hoover students have enjoyed screaming and yelling and letting spirit escape from their systems. The all-enjoyable competition yells were bigger than ever. As usual, the seniors managed to bellow the loudest and win the yells.

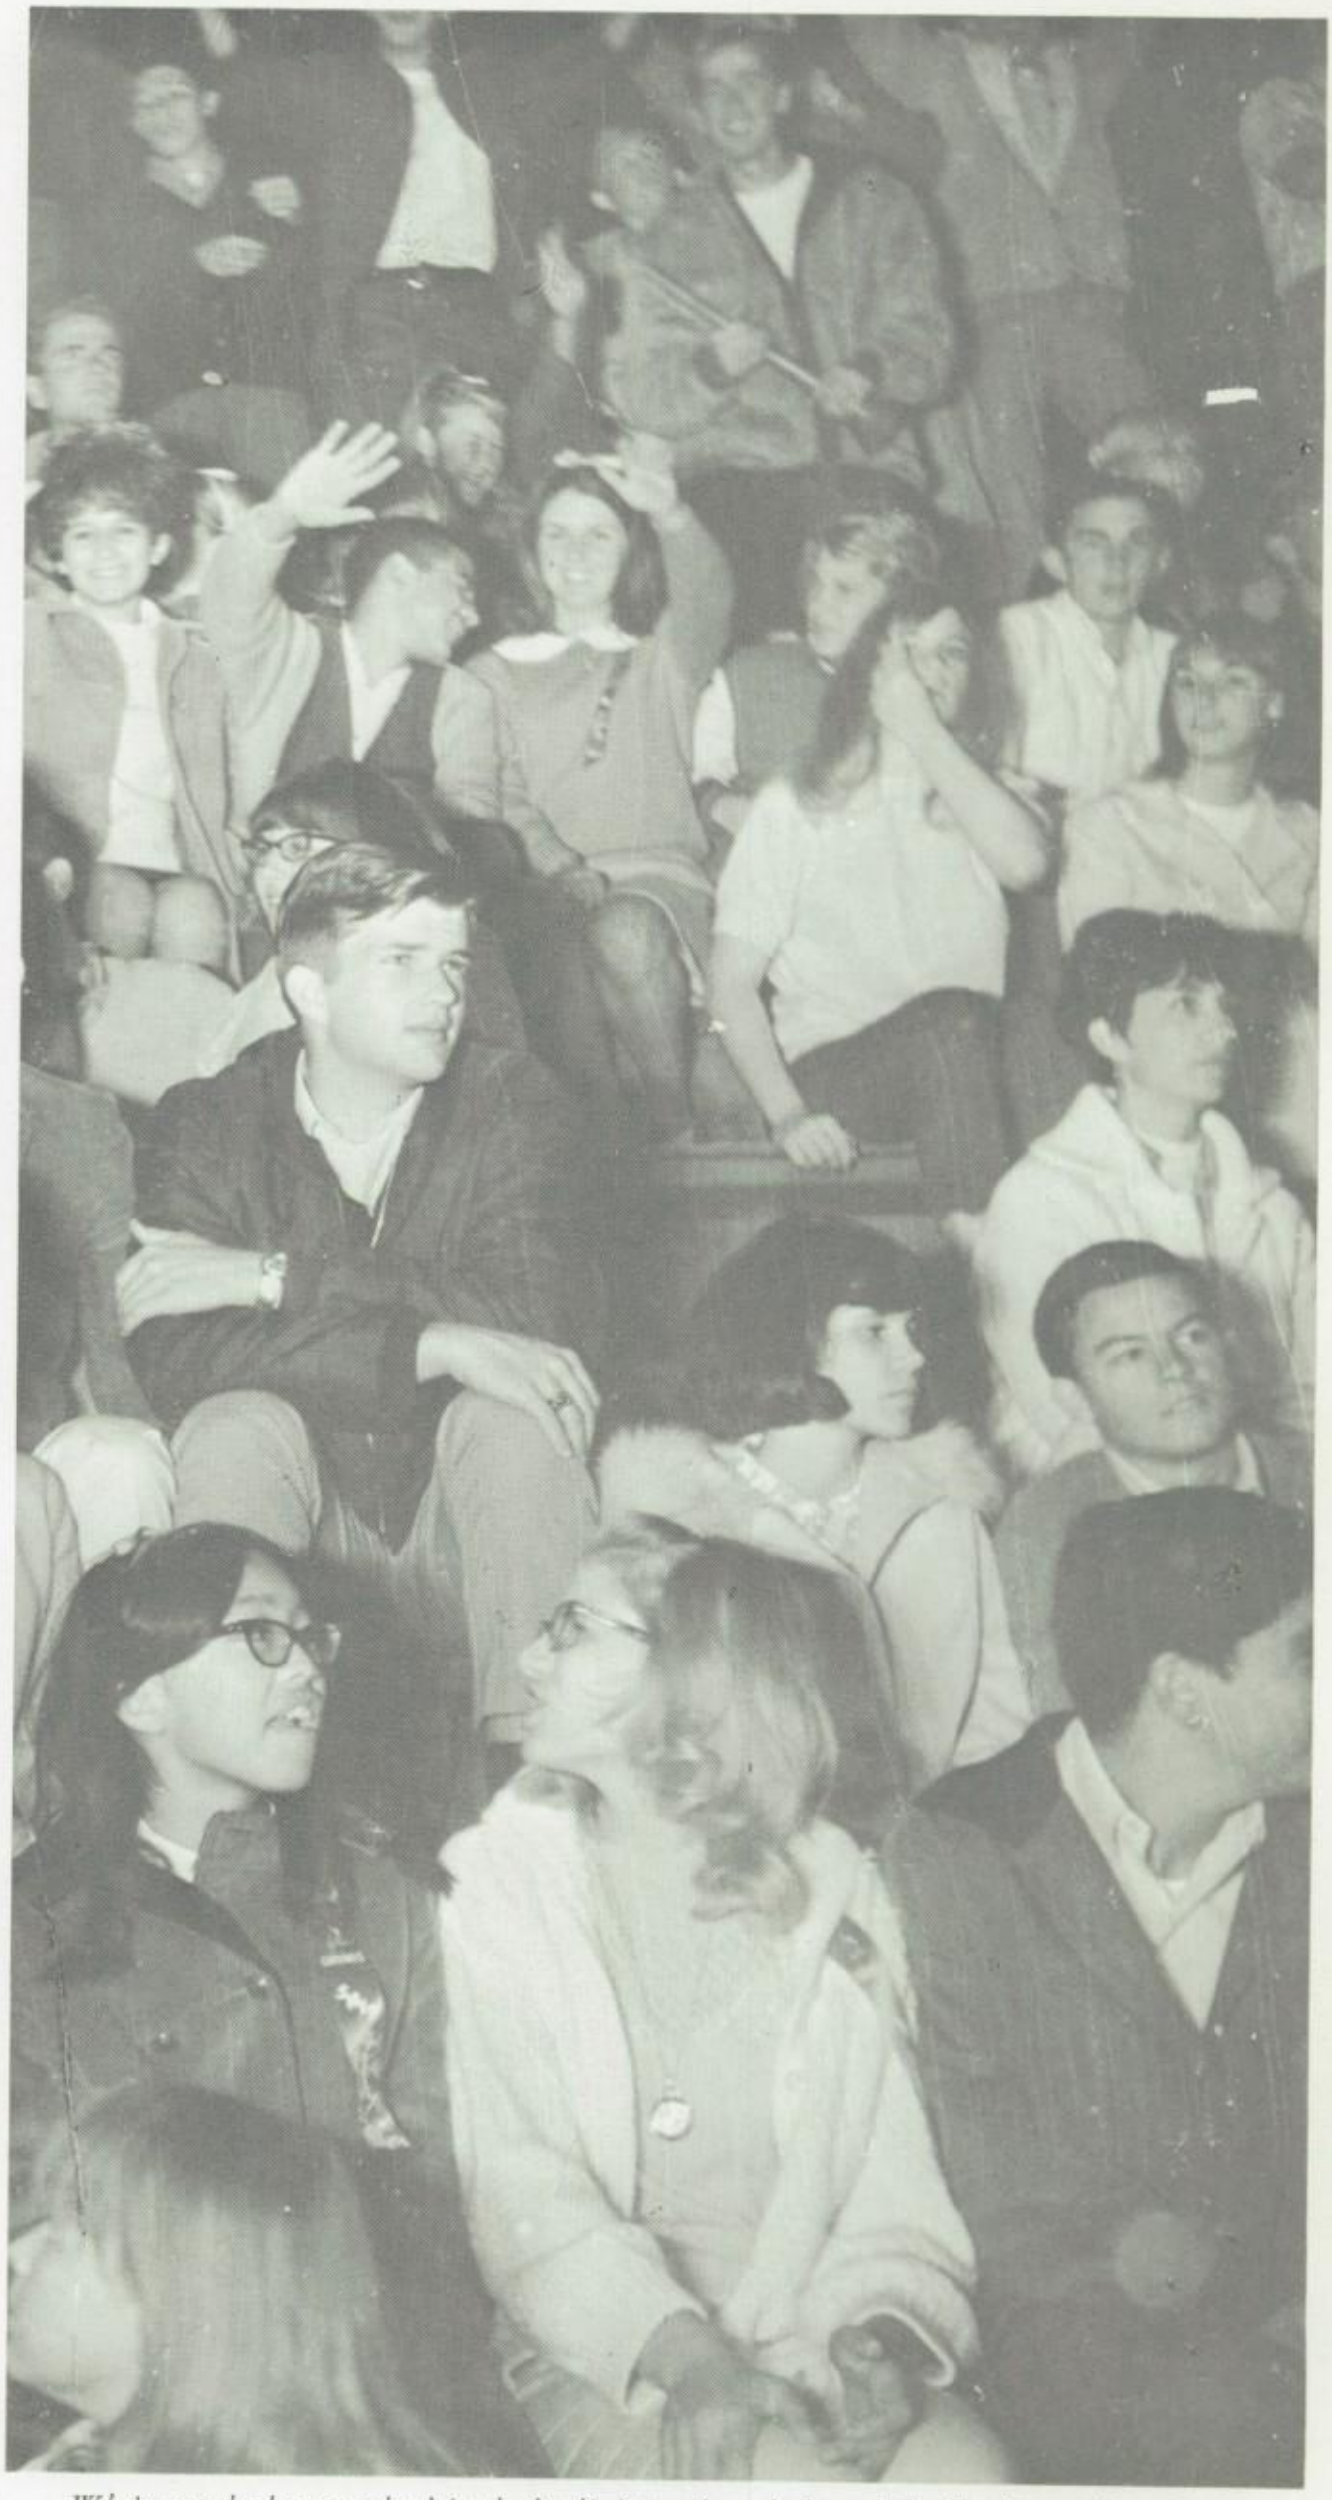
Let's Fight!

A special rally was held at Homecoming. The floats were presented to the student body the afternoon of the "big game."

Lunch time also became the scene for spirit. Rallies were held in the lunch area and the energetic song and cheerleaders and peppy pep band sprinkled Hoover with spirit.

Rallies were always a refreshing break from the hour to hour class work. Spirit exploded to express that Hoover is and always will be tops.

Let's Win!



Who's got the bestest school in the land? Just ask anybody and they'll tell you Hoover.

Leaving for school at 7:30 in the morning is a heck of a way to start the day.

Meeting your steady before school inevitably led to being late for second period.

Now it begins, day after day, the familiar routine of each school day. It started with that sound, the one you cursed each morning — your friend and mine the alarm. The glorious sound was heard anywhere from 6:00 to 7:00, but for some unknown reason no matter how early it went off you found yourself in a hurry with only minutes to spare. You arrived at school in time to run to your locker and get to your first period class. You would have made it, too, except for the condition your locker was in, which led to the fall of every book, notebook, etc. in your locker. Naturally you arrived tardy to your first class and spent 30 minutes after school that night (that was your second tardy that week resulting in 30 minutes after school instead of only 15 minutes).

Class began and suddenly it dawned on you your boyfriend was in this class. You looked up and there he was . . . the correspondence between you two began and anything valuable in the lesson for that day was a complete loss as far as the both of you were concerned. The day progresses and the daily routine entails tests, homework, running to classes and don't forget lunch. The senior lunch time provided the start of your cafeteria lunch and in-between a constant chatter you both manage to find time to eat. The half hour goes by unbelievably fast and soon both of you are on your way to the next class of the day. 2:30 arrives at last and you both leave Hoover completely exhausted and ready for homework??

Let's see, I have a test I didn't study for, homework I didn't do, and no lunch money.

Help! Catch that book!? Oh! Look out for my lunch!*

The Hoover High football season was termed the best in three years. Outstanding team and individual efforts drove the Hoover gridders to a second in Eastern League play with six wins, two losses, and one tie. The redbirds opened their season by bouncing the Kearny Komets 26 to 24.

The second game of the year with an injury ridden Hoover squad was an upset with a disappointing non-league loss to the Helix Highlanders. Not to be discouraged, the Cardinals came back the next week to crush the Lincoln Hornets 21 to 16. John Morstad's running and Mike Williams' aerials made the first Hoover win over the Hornets in three years.

On the ground, Steve Stoffregen supplied plenty of blocking for Morstad's running. A typical game was against Clairemont where he threw key blocks on an amazing 72 yard punt return by Morstad to put Hoover on the scoreboard late in the second quarter. This blocking and running duo proved to be almost invincible in later games.

November 21 saw Hoover meet their arch rivals, the Crawford Colts. Dominating the entire game, the Cardinals rolled over the Colts 25 to 14. Although bowing to Morse and losing their chances for the C.I.F. finals by tying St. Augustine, the 1966 football season can truly be termed one to remember for all Hoover students.

Coaches Russ Leslie and Roy Engle, as well as the team, celebrated a Hoover victory.

Five Hoover Players Named to All City Team

John Morstad scored over 100 points, was placed on the All City Championship Team and the Breitbard Foundation named him Eastern League Back of the year. Dennis Broselle and Steve Stoffregen were also named to the All City offensive team, and Jan Zettle and Russ Shaw, two more outstanding players, were placed on the defensive team. Given All City honorable mention were Mike Williams and Gary Flisher.

Every student should be proud of the great performance that all the 1966 Hoover Gridders made this season.

Mike Williams used the run option around the right end against the Helix Highlanders.

Morstad pushed through the middle to make it first and ten against the Crawford Colts.

Efforts like this boosted the team's morale.

Coaches John Finan and Walter Baranski conferred with their quarterback, Dan Downy.

This year's Junior Varsity football team, hampered by inexperience and tough opponents, ended up with a 2 and 8 season. Although going through vigorous training with coaches John Finan and Walter Baranski, the 1966 Junior Varsity was a small match for the other Eastern League teams; however, each team member tried his best to make the varsity team next year.

Topnotch players on the Junior Varsity this year were Wes Daw and Richard Ambrust, both linemen. Other prospects for next year's varsity team were Tom Chase and Tom Schilling.

With the returning varsity lettermen from this year, and these potential new varsity players, next year's varsity team will hopefully be one of the best.

Second Half of Season Blocked All Chances

Basketball, traditionally a dedicated Hoover sport, was no less this year. Striving in the best spirit of the game, Hoover players put forth one gigantic effort against the other Eastern League teams and ended up with a 13/14 season. Coached by Hal Metrovich, new at Hoover this year, the cagers' efforts were prominent and truly typical of athletic sportsmanship.

Starting off the season with a great show of skill, the Hoover cagers won five straight and at this point, entered the Kiwanis Tournament. Winning two and losing two in the tourney, Hoover cagers strived on to meet competition in the USD Tournament. A three and one record here lifted Hoover's spirits to head onward in the rest of the season.

Losing 11 out of 14 games, Hoover sank to a fifth place in Eastern League.

Coaches' Confidence Spirited

During half-time break at USD Tournament, Coach Hal Mitrovich inspired the team to victory over Hilltop.

Coach Hal Mitrovich, hailing from Saint Augustine, coached the Hoover Cagers in his first year at Hoover. He developed many of the players' talents and skills that are so important in this sport. Several team members showed outstanding efforts this year. Among these were Martin Lorentz, Larry Mousley, and Dave McDonald. Martin Lorentz, playing forward for most of the season, did a great job and helped Hoover to win the close ones. Dave McDonald, center, was a consistent shooter pulling down the rebounds and scoring in the clutch. Larry Mousley setting the pace for the team, seemed to never tire, after driving other teams to exhaustion. Dan Miller, playing on a leg broken during the football season and not fully healed, did well all season. To top everything off he sprained it again during basketball season. Many other players did a great job this year besides the ones mentioned. The typical Hoover spirit was there at every game both in the stands and on the court, and it certainly made for a good time and a great season. With a strong junior varsity sending players up, and varsity men returning, Coach Mitrovich sees a bright future for next year's team. They certainly should be in there trying with all their might for the Eastern League title for 1968.

Looking for an opening, this Cardinal passed for a later tally.

Cardinals warmed up at the beginning of each game to ward off cramps in later play.

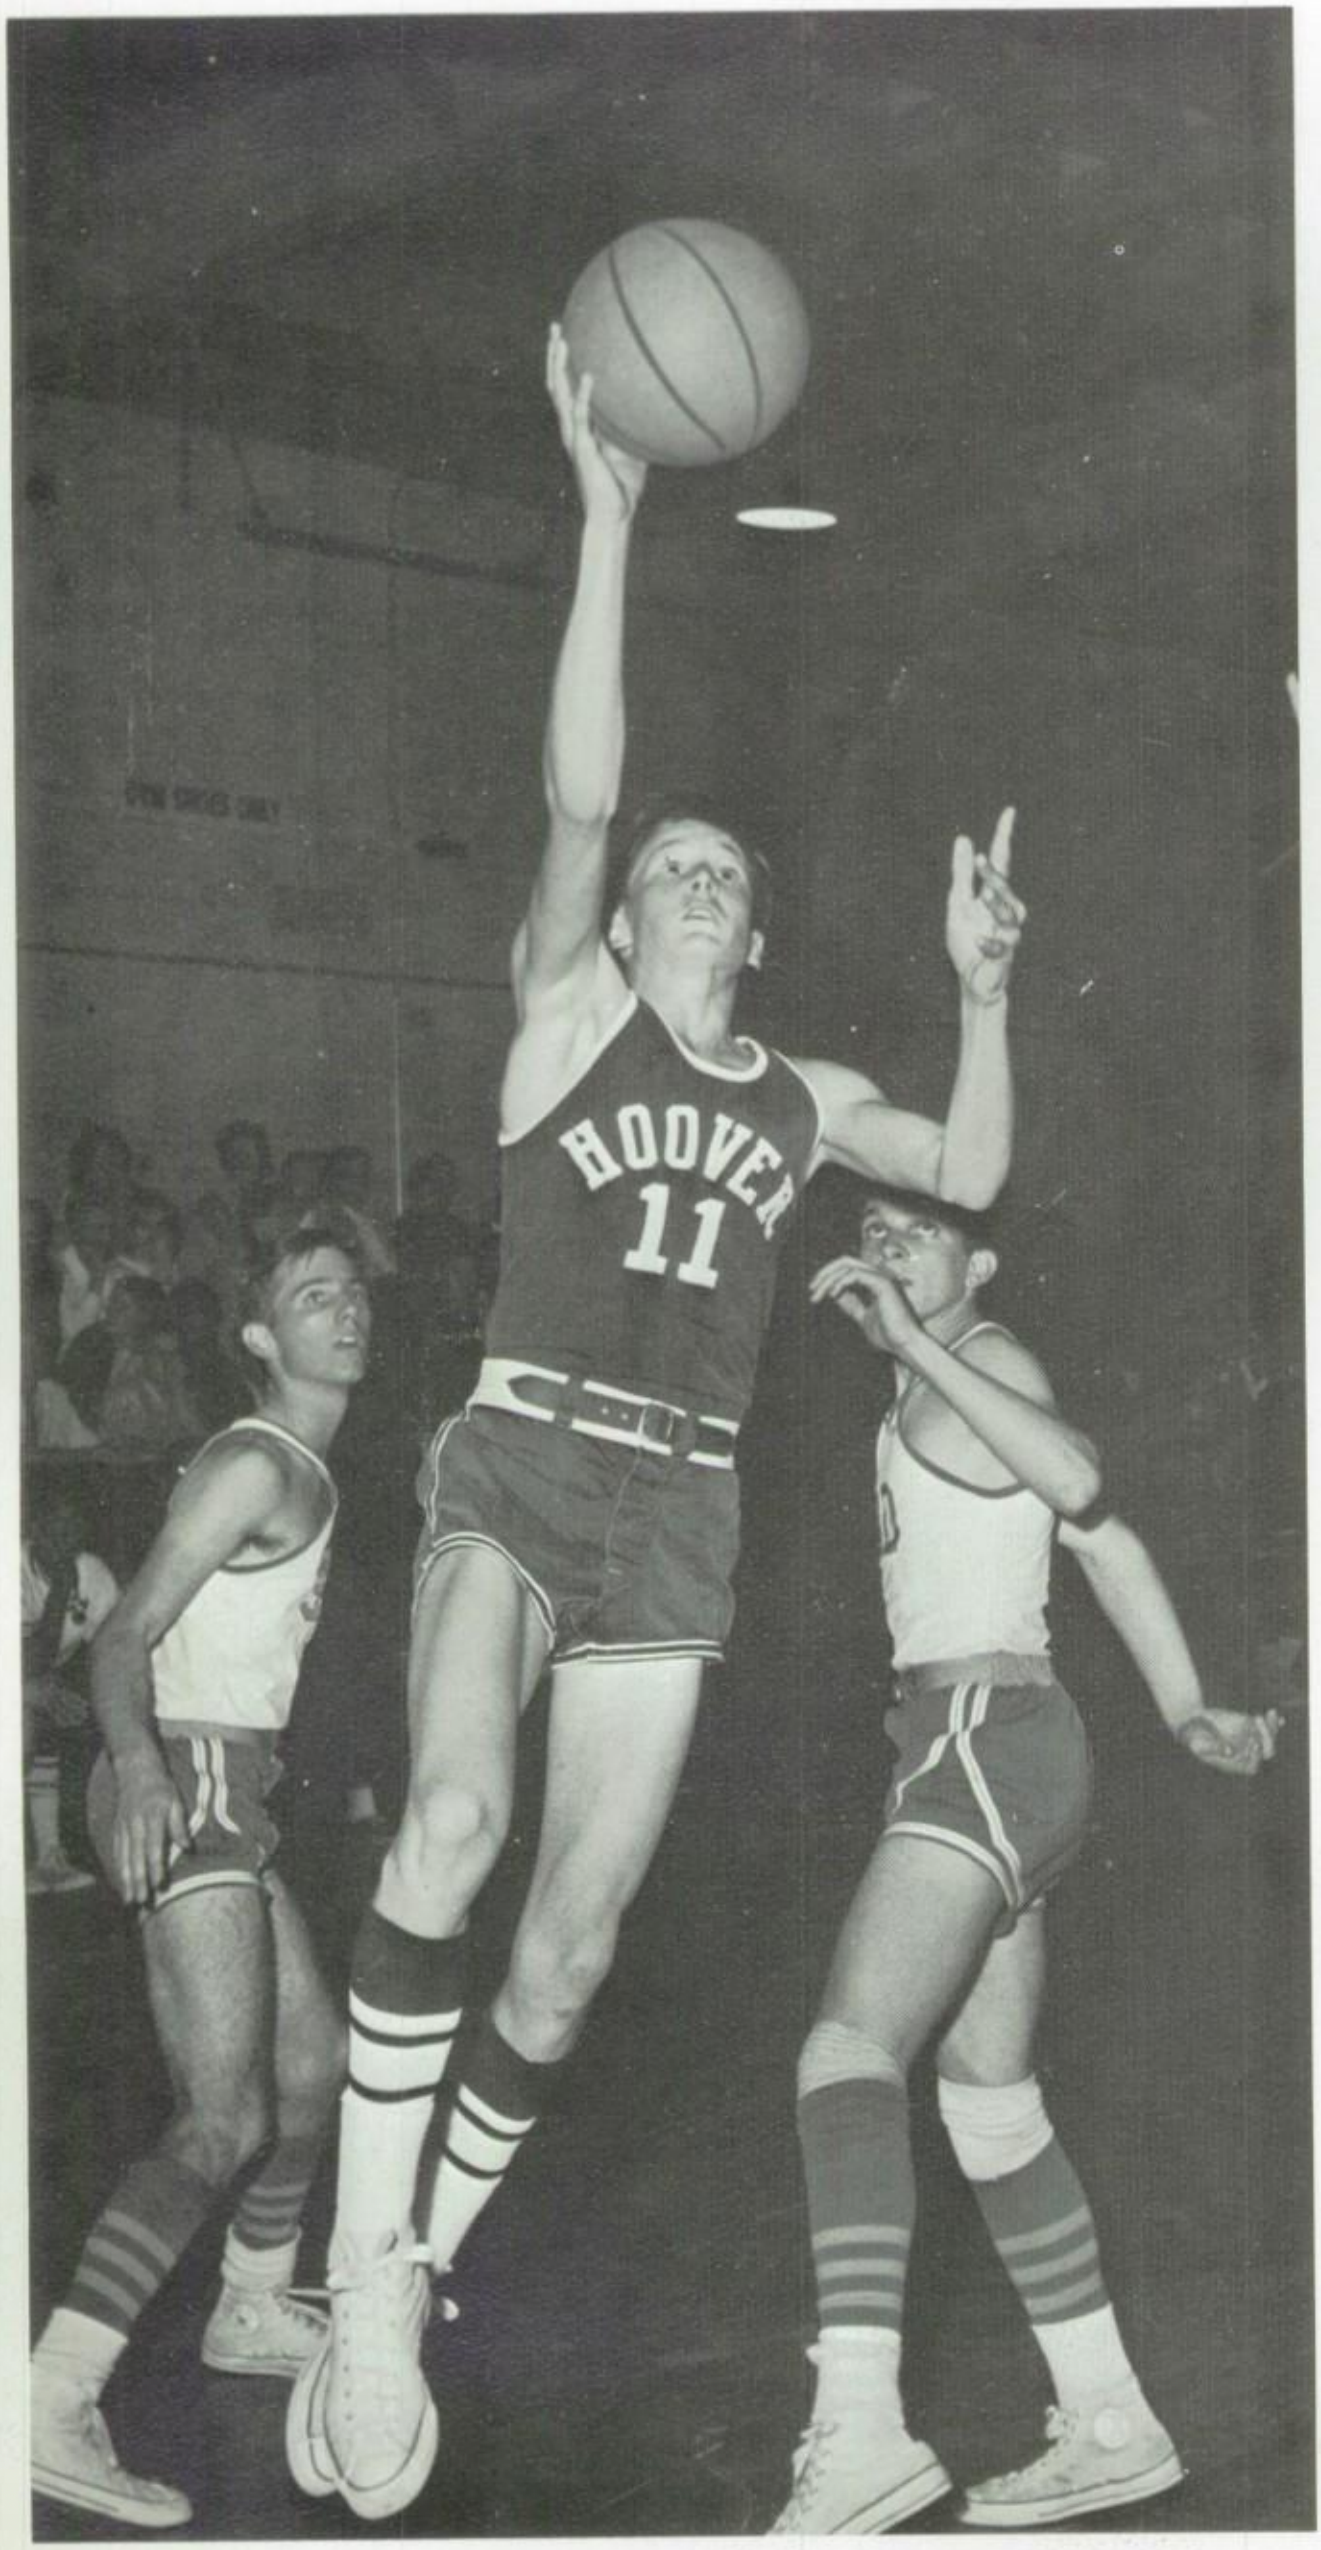
The junior varsity basketball team did an amazing job this year against all the city and county teams they played. The team stayed strong all year, ending the season with 18 wins and 4 losses. Several strong players emerged this year as possibilities for next year's varsity squad. Lloyd Burrows, a junior, was considered strong man on the team. He ripped down key rebounds, and scored in the clutch. John Havens led scoring this year with 28 points against Morse, his best game. Reg Hetzel and Tim Skelly were the most outstanding sophomores on the team.

With these outstanding team members, along with many others, the next year's varsity team should be in contention for the varsity championships. Sophomores and juniors should be proud of the performanance by members of their class.



Bewildered Saints players looked on as Tim Skelly broke for the basket.

Varsity

Hoover High hurdlers, James King and Russ Shaw, run close in meet against Morse at Hoover field.

Hoover's thinclads, starting out to a more than average season, were played at practice sessions by rainy weather. Working hard, however, the team's morale strengthened after each meet.

Leading the Hoover squad in high hurdles this year was James King, and also Russ Shaw. James King also held the title of second in the county in the low hurdles. In shot put, outstanding efforts were shown by Jan Zettel and Lloyd Burrows. A common sight by Jan Zettel was a 45 foot put. Also showing great achievements this year was Dave Kresler in the pole vault who was consistently placing first, second in all meets with jumps recorded at twelve feet. Ed Robinson, running the 440 yd. at 52.2 seconds, was outstanding on Hoover's thinclad team.

Respected on the team, and held in high esteem by everyone, was Rich Thompson who had a long jump distance of 21 feet.

Next year's track team, with more returning letterman, should be superior to this year's, providing we have more cooperation with the weather.

Rick Thompson, long jumper, jumped 21 feet 2 inches for a first place against Saints.

Mike Martinez, with a sprained right leg, ran for victory against Saints.

Meets

Ed Robinson, outstanding Hoover 440 runner, consistently placed as in this race against Morse.

Dave Kresser, pole vaulter, cleared the mark at 12 feet in the Crauford meet.

Lloyd Burrows, shot putter, put for an outstanding score against Morse.

Frank Wilson, junior varsity long-jumper, strove for more footage in the Hoover meet against Saints.

Rain played havoc with the Hoover track schedule this season. An unusually wet April made it difficult to have important league and county meets. Almost all tracks in San Diego are dirt, thus making for long periods of waiting time for fields to dry out enough for events. Since Hoover's field was affected by the weather, meets were postponed here. It looks like things will be restored to normal by the league finals, so many records should be broken.

Hoover's track team had been split into "A," "B," and "C" in previous years, but this year it was changed to just varsity and junior varsity. This way it gave more chance for good competition and also the coaches were more able to pick talent for the finals.

Although having a rather disappointing season this year, the thinclads should be out in strength for next year's meets.

Hoover's "Hamburgers" Harried to

Members of the Hoover squad were in the home stretch at Morley Field.

Each varsity harrier of the 1966-67 cross country team put in an average of sixty hours practice time and 255 miles of running. This averages out to a little more than six thousand miles for the team as a whole.

The team had great potential, but with the fourth and fifth runners of last year's team not returning and the first and second runners out with injuries, our actual team was handicapped.

Winning three and losing five, and placing fourth in the Eastern League, can only be attributed to a great effort put out by the Hoover Harriers.

Cross country coach, Kenneth Peeters, often referring to "hamburger" team members, remarked that next year's cross country team, with four or five returning lettermen, should be superior to this year's team.

Fourth Place in Eastern League

Our Junior Varsity got in some important practice during the league finals at Morley Field.

League

Hoover's gymnastic team, coached by Charles McIntire, in his first year at this school, placed third in Eastern League and fourth in the City Finals. Hoover has always been strong in the rope climb, and this year was no exception with Steve Todd and Wayne Garret both going to CIF. An interesting battle between these boys took place over the year, with Wayne leading Steve for most of the season. In the finals, however, Steve gave that extra effort and came in second with Wayne following at third.

Dave Kresser, always valuable in free exercise, boosted team morale as team captain this year.

Although only finishing third in the league, Coach McIntire believes some good talent has evolved and he holds high hopes for next year's team.

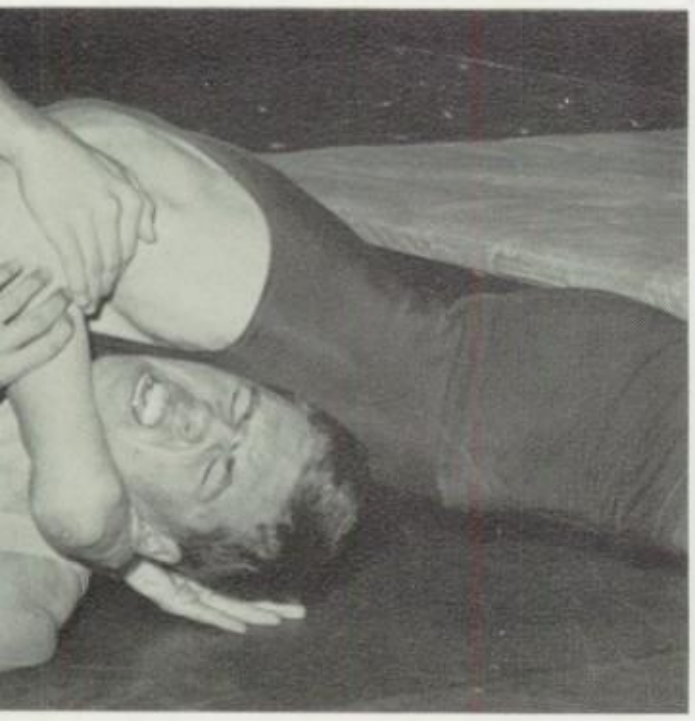
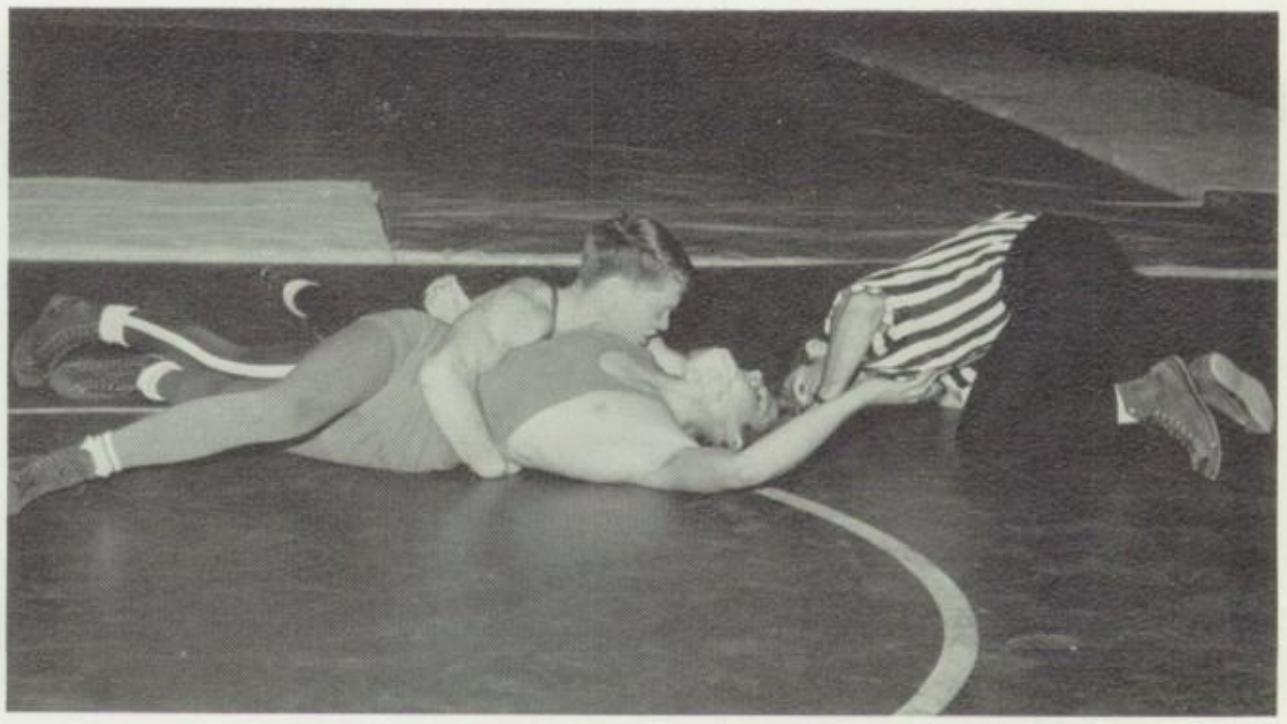
Wrestling, a sport requiring strength, agility, and stamina, was offered at Hoover again this year. Seniors, juniors, and sophomores were all seen on the varsity and junior varsity squads, grappling for Hoover wins. Long track workouts, and hours of mat practice helped each member to do his best in the sport that is as old as the Roman Empire.

Fourth in Eastern League



this Hoover wrestler pressed for a later pin.



Mark Shelton, a 136 pound junior, grappled his opponents to an easy pin against Clairemont. The referee checked to make sure the pin was legally held for three seconds.

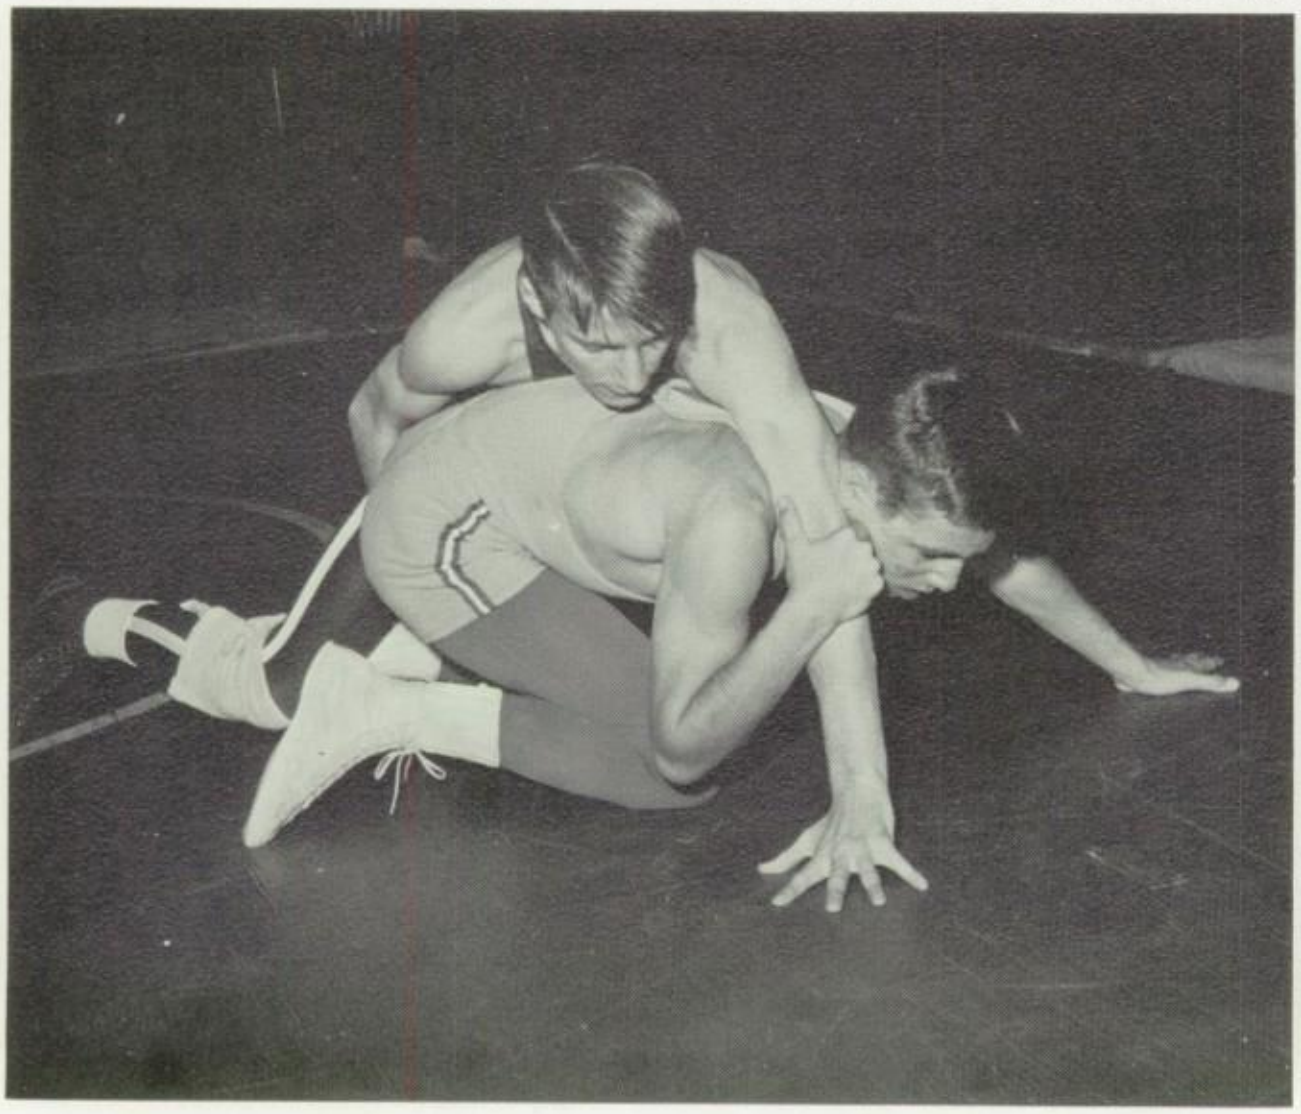
This year's wrestling team, under the guidance of Coach Robert Warner, had a rather disappointing season. Although weak in several weight classes, several team members did a fantastic job and helped Hoover to win some meets. Tom Browning, grappling in the heavyweight class, did a consistently good job and made quite a few points during the course of the season. Doug Thorpe, team captain, was considered by teammates as the best man on the team. Doug seemed to be tireless and set the pace for the team.

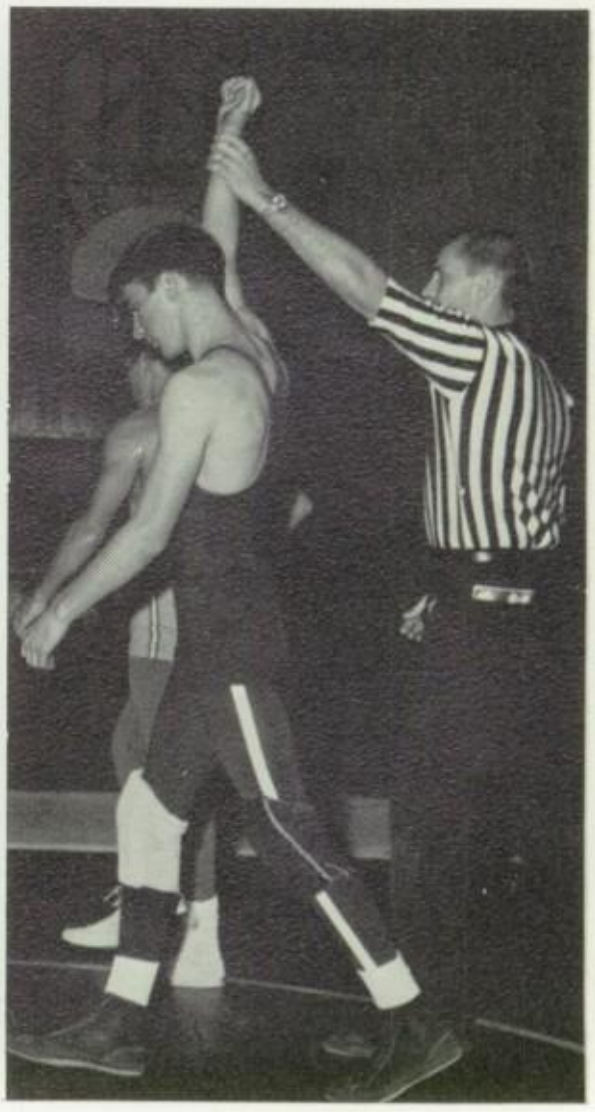
The team worked out approximately three hours every day, getting their holds and separate styles down. These workouts included track to build up endurance for the tough meets. The season lasted two months, and by the end some good talent had emerged for next year's team. Mark Shelton, a junior, did a fine job this year, and should have an excellent senior year on the team.

Next year's team, with an abundance of returning lettermen, should outgrapple the majority of opponents in the Eastern League.

Larry Barrett attempted to cradle his opponent in this league play against Saints, and was successful.



The referee announced this Hoover win by Larry Barrett.



Hoover Swimmers Stroked Toward

Hoover participated in the National City Relays with city and county schools. Hoover placed 11th overall.

Dan Shafer and Bob Brennecke showed the starting style for the 100 yard backstroke.

Aquanauts Active In Season

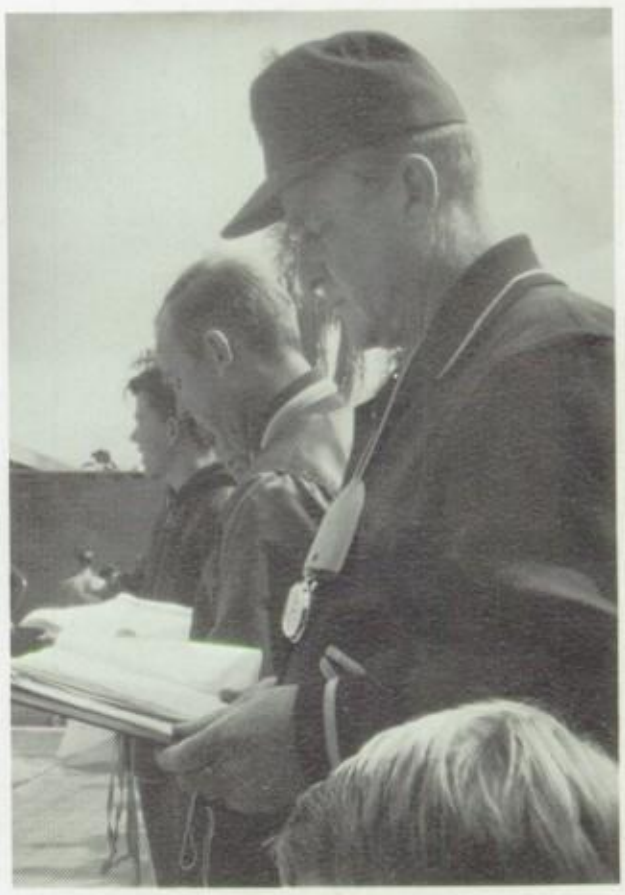
As of this writing, the Hoover swimming team has been doing well. With the St. Augustine and Morse games to go, the team could easily get a second place in the Eastern League.

Greg Sutton, a two year letterman, was team captain for this year's team. He is strong in every stroke, but the backstroke and freestyle are his specialty. Les Walker and Mike Parkhurst, returning lettermen, did a fine job this season with Walker in the 100-yard butterfly and Parkhurst in freestyle events. Jim Morrow, a sophomore, strong in every event from free to butterfly, took loads of first places in almost every meet.

With many excellent sophomores and juniors on this year's team, next year's team should do well against all city and county schools.

Victory in League Meets

Darryl Rapp finished the first 50 yards of the butterfly relay with a few feet to spare.



Coach Finan re-checked lineup for "A" relay.

Netters Finished Third in Eastern League

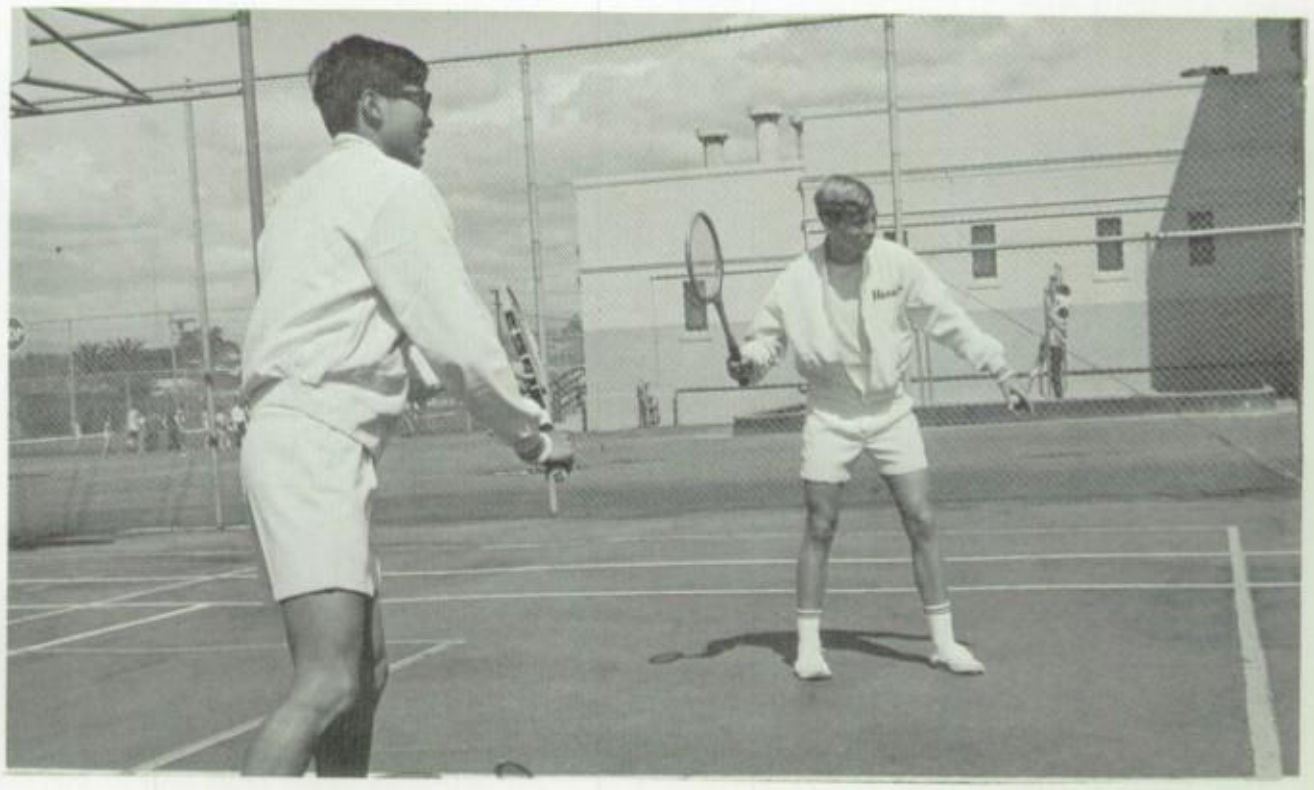
Ed Ng, senior on the 1967 tennis team, awaits arrival of ball from opponent in match against Crawford.

The 1967 edition of the Hoover tennis team finished a strong third in the Eastern League with 6 wins and 4 losses. Senior contributions were made by the first doubles team of Ed Ng and Steve Van Bibber. Also contributing were Dennis Hurlbert, George Smith, and Cliff Konold.

Sophomore standout Gary Amador and several returning junior lettermen indicate a bright future for Coach Ralph Whitehead's netters next year.

Ed Ng and Dennis Hurlbert participated in the Eastern League finals.



Duffers Faced Disappointing Season

Sophs Termed Team Hopefuls

Golf, one of the most popular sports nationally, was represented on campus by the Cardinal Golf Team. Although somewhat obscured by the primary interscholastic sports, the team afforded much satisfaction to its interested followers.

The duffers, plagued by inexperience, could manage only a single victory this year, losing several matches by as close as three strokes. Several Redbird Golfers turned in outstanding rounds in the low seventies during the season; however, the Cards couldn't manage to get enough good rounds together simultaneously.

With only one returning letterman from last year's squad Coach Hub Foote termed this a building year. After a summer of diligent practice Sophomores Mixe Hoxel, Richard Stamos, George Kellogg, John Murphy, Rick Slaughter, David Richardson, John Adams, Greg Young, and Junior Dennis Naughton will be on hand next year to bring golf honors to Hoover.

Improved Team's Standings

Second in Eastern League at Press Time. CIF for Sure!

This year's varsity baseball team was blessed with not only an outstanding team, but also a new stadium. A vital part of this year's progress can be termed due to the Ted Williams field. Now, with a regulation field, a much easier plan can be made to step over the other Eastern League teams.

This year's outstanding players were Pat Roark, Ron Barnhart and Andy Morgan. Great games were also played by John Morstad and Paul Bruner. Dana Baltzer, Hoover's nimble shortstop, added sparkle to Hoover's already talented diamond men. With a record of 8-4 and two more games to go, then CIF following, it is hard to foresee the outcome.

One of Hoover's toughest opponents this year was San Diego, to which Hoover lost three games; however, besides Crawford, Hoover was the only team to beat Saint Augustine.

Hoover player Mike Ball was safe for easy single in winning game against Saint Augustine.

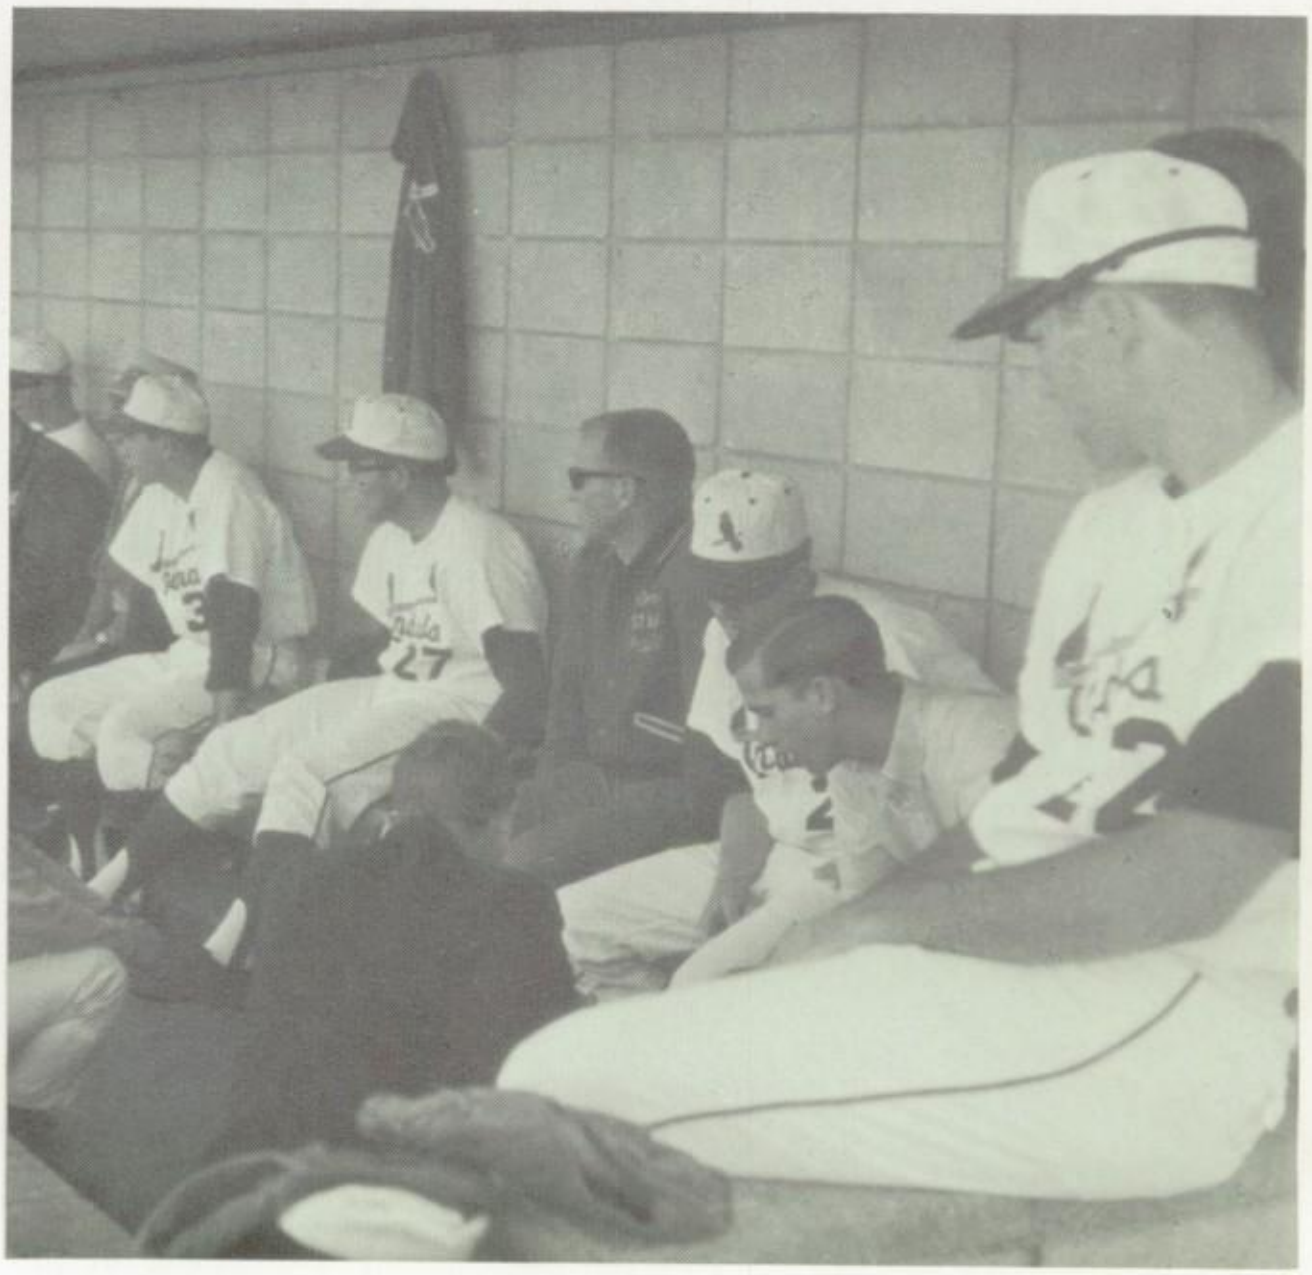
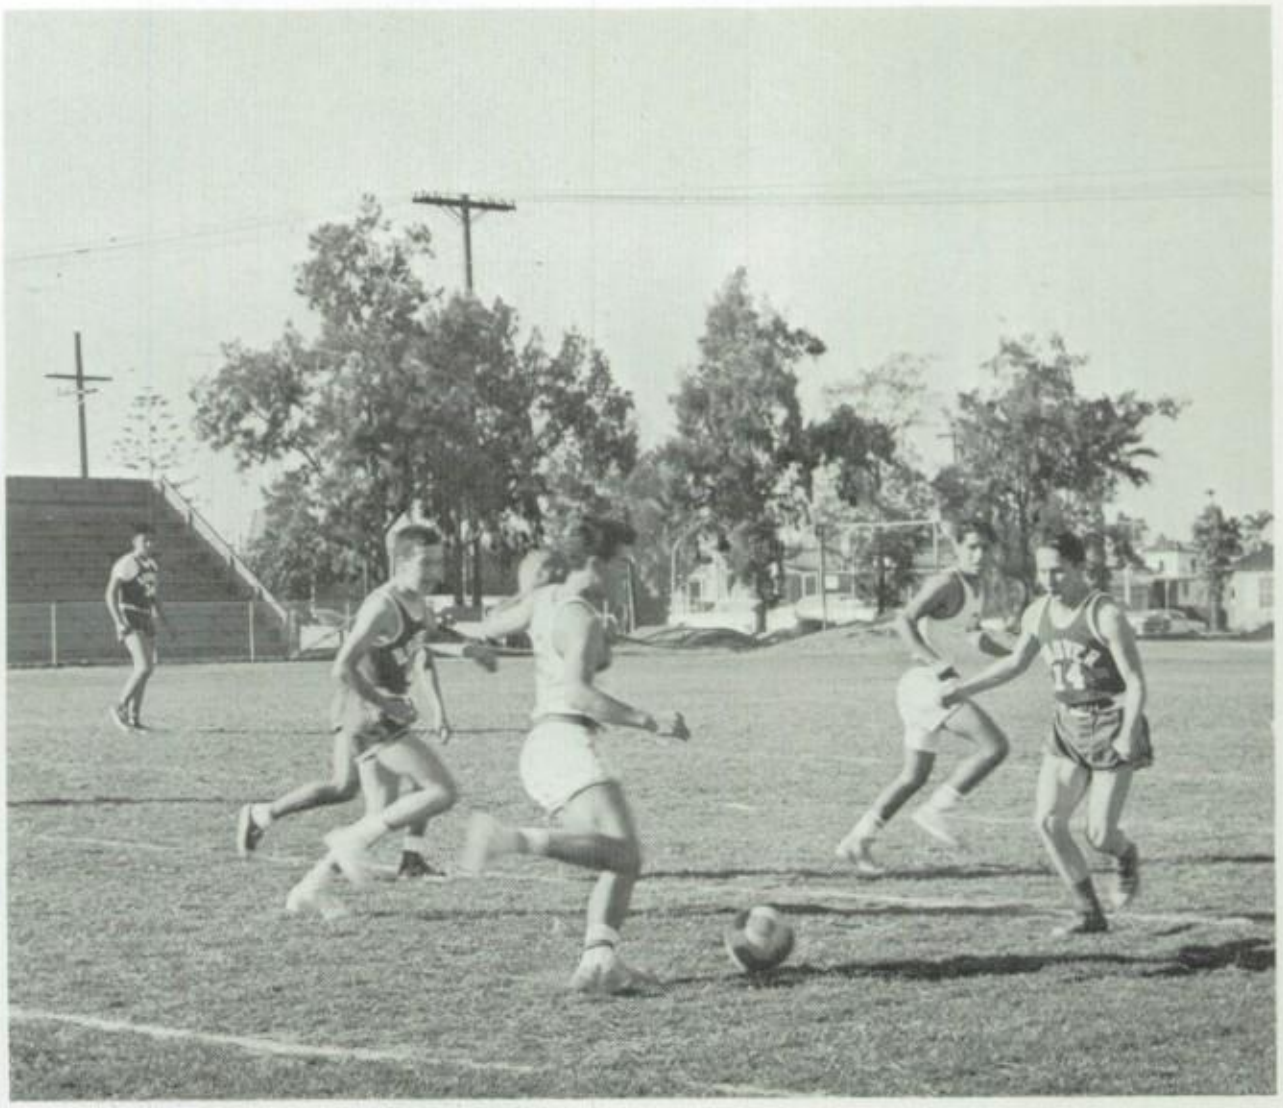
Patiently awaiting the results of an umpire's decision, Hoover players prepare to man the field.



This year's junior varsity baseball team did extremely well in contributing to the success of the JV teams in general. As of this writing, Hoover is 12-2 for the Eastern League and 15-4 overall. The team played 3 games with Crawford, winning 2 of them with scores of 1-0 and 5-2. Hoover also topped Saint Augustine in 2 out of 3 games, the scores being 1-0 and 2-0. More games were played away from home this year due to the varsity domination of the new field. With one game remaining in Eastern League play, the team, winning it, could take a first. The last game is against Morse, a tough opponent, but Coach Warner is optimistic on the outcome.

There were several outstanding players on this year's team, guiding it to such a fine season. The squad did not lack any talent in the pitching department with Jeff Broderick and Randy Casey both pitching perfect seasons. Other excellent players were Bruce Steele, Chuck Johnson, Al Messenger, and Dale Ambler.

Hoover players stunned gallery by controlling the ball for the best part of the game against the Amigos.



During the heat of action, this Hoover student prepared to boot the ball as Ecuadorian student positioned himself for attempted block.

Hoover Showed Visitors American Life

"Ooh it's sticking to my fingers, but it feels nice and gooshy!" Each of the 19 candy-makers immediately became involved in the tasty taffy pull at Lori Freed's house. After several unsuccessful attempts at producing edible taffy the cooks ate what they could, wrapped some up for their favorite teachers, and joined in a few wild games of Twist.

The Christmas get-together at Annette Bellmer's house was originally scheduled as a simple potluck dinner but turned into a wild party with a few rounds of Twist and some twenty people running around barefoot because a couple comics stole all the shoes.

American Field Service

Everyone on campus this year knew of the American Field Service mainly because it sponsored two outgoing exchange students, Gulsun Turug from Turkey and Graciella Waen from Argentina. The club not only sponsored the girls but also made arrangements for them including their receptions and their Senior rings.

Activities were a big part of the A.F.S. In addition to the usual fund raising activities, the group had a variety of parties and "get-togethers" including a Christmas Potluck, a taffy-pull, and a dinner party. The club members also planned a trip to Disneyland on April 8 to show the two exchange students the famous American tourist attraction.

The A.F.S. again sponsored their traditional assembly at which Gulsun and Graciella showed slides and told of their native land, customs and their impression of the U.S.A.

Dear Hoover:

It was certainly difficult for me in the first moment: the English, the sistem of choosing the subjects—In my school in Argentina, I could never choose my subjects, every year I had to do over eleven, that are set by the government, and that were sometimes hard: like Philosophy or psicology. But the most amazing and delightful thing to me was the coeducational sistem, which we didn't have at my "secondary school." I shall always rember your crowded halls, your enormous rooms, your patio, because you're now, and you'll always be for me one of the most colorful times of my life. Becoming one of your students, and living with the Freed family, I understood that people here and in my country are not so different from one another. I shall never forget you, and like we say in our Flower "No-me-ol-vides," "Forget-me-not."

Sincerely,

Gülsün Turuç

Dear Hoover:

At the beginning of the year I had difficulties with your language and getting use to everything. But after a while, everything became better and then my real enjoyable year began. Between school activities, club meetings had been my favorite activities. Besides this at football and basketball games I had most enjoyable times. At the out of school I had too much fun with papering house, ice sliding, and surprise parties which we didn't have in Turkey. At those time I understood that American teenagers weren't different than the teenagers in Turkey. Living with the Sroufe family gave me the chance to understand enjoyable American Family Life. Specially, my year at Hoover will bring me the best memories of understanding and friendship among the students of the world.

Sincerely,

Graciela Inés Waen

Reporter Laurie Singer and Joanne Barrett often found themselves in the position of taking orders and advice from sometimes overpowering but always helpful editors-in-chief, Monte Broaded and John Gaughen.

Meeting deadlines and hard work kept the students of the 1966-'67 Cardinal staff on their toes. Under the supervision of their new advisor, Mr. Harry Watson, the staff encountered many of the same difficulties as in previous years. These included such items as reporting current events, interviewing personalities for feature articles, advertising, and writing.

Knowing that serious problems would arise if deadlines were not met, the staff often found it necessary to work overtime. They succeeded, nonetheless, in reaching at least 1,300 members of the student body on every one of their thirteen regular issues. With an all out effort on the part of every member, the staff also succeeded in producing three excellent special issues — the six page Homecoming edition, the eight page Christmas edition, and the doubly special Senior edition.

The staff donated extra time to compete in several journalism contests; the Journalism Day at UCLA, the write-off at San Diego State.

Able, Ambitious Journalists

Exchange editor Shari Johnson, business editor Madeline Moriyama, and advertising editor Sherry Kezele were frequently seen working side-by-side in order to meet impending deadlines.

Editorial editor April Screnci and reporter Sheila Wolshin always knew where to find answers to problems about future newspaper copy. Advisor Mr. Harry Watson provided ideas to help solve their difficulties and get them on their way to complete their article.

Meeting seventh period in room 110 helped the Cardinal Staff gain valuable insight and knowledge concerning journalism and the production of a newspaper. Finding that teamwork was one of the best ways to produce a top-notch newspaper, the class periods made communications between staff members possible.

Produced Quality Newspaper

Reporter Pat Jones, assistant news editor Judy Novack, art editor Myrna Mackinster, copy editor Paul Marx, and news editor Joe Cromwell discovered putting their heads together provided needed answers.

Fast thought and quick action on the part of photographer and feature editor Lynn Mayfield caught sports editors Don Snowden and Brian Nash in a moment of relaxation as they took a break from their usual job of reporting the weekly sports events.

Working together to solve problems could not be overemphasized. In the Club Room Copy Editor Kathy Dunn discussed the difficulties of writing eye-catching picture captions with Senior Editors Georgia Taylor and Wendy Coates and Student Life Editors' Charlyne McKain and Sandi McKinnon. Grammatical exactness was a small fraction of the copy editor's responsibility. She also had to be certain that captions explained exactly what was happening in each picture. Editors had to delve deep into their imaginations to assure that the running heads and copy blocks were both informative and intriguing.

Imagination and Drive Required

The best way to learn about any school function was to talk to persons directly involved, as Academic Editor Ida Harb and Assistant Janice Nash soon discovered. They were responsible for scheduling pictures of the administration with a professional photographer, and obtaining information about administrative and clerical duties. Photographer Mike Palcic often got successful candids during interviews.

Twenty creative minds of Hoover's yearbook staff were chosen by Mr. Jappe on the basis of their grade point average, teacher recommendations, and dependability, as described by fellow students. They had to be reliable, for each had his own specific function in the class, and there was often no one to cover for him if he missed a picture appointment, was late for interviews, or failed to cover an important school activity. Students learned the art of persuasion when dealing with teachers and clubs, learned to plan ahead, learned to be brave in attempting new picture plans, and learned to distinguish between the impossible and the difficult.

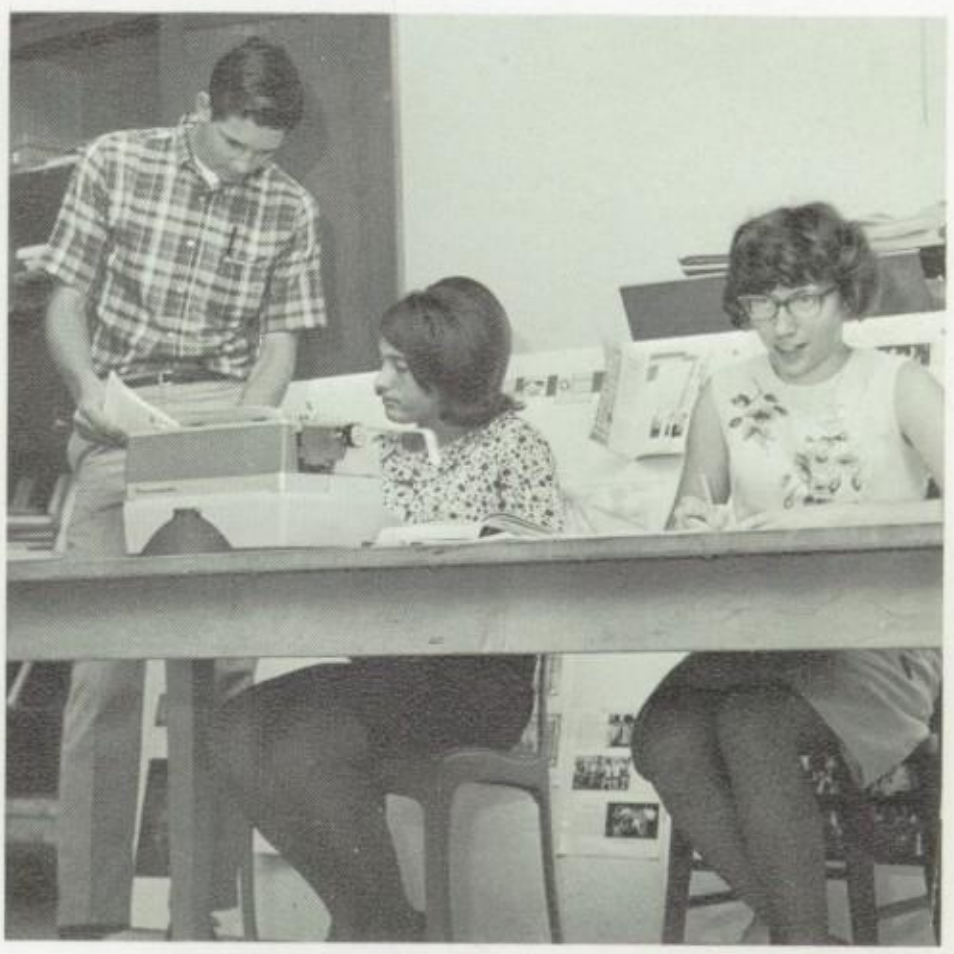
This year's staff wanted the yearbook to symbolize 1966-67 only, hence the theme "Generation '67." Everything is new—basic layout plans, action club candids, and the modified colors of the contemporary cover design. The goal was for the book to tell future readers how Hooverites dressed, danced, studied, lived! Obviously this required more time and effort, 20% more time was spent than in 1966, which means about 5,000 hours during the year. According to our Time Card record system 106¾ hours were spent planning picture locations and arrangements during the first quarter, besides the 143 hours of actual photography, and 193½ hours writing supplementary captions and copy. Although far from being perfect, the staff did try hard, and after many long hours and much tedious effort, the 1967 DIAS CARDINALES was produced.

Mary Byrne, whose job was coordinating the scheduling of pictures between the editors and photographers, tried to pick up something about layouts as Art Editor Lynn Morrell explained how the reader's eye travels across a page, and the best way to arrange pictures accordingly. Sports Editor Grahame Marshall and Sports-Photographer Bob Hartnak have been trying to organize a page so that a football candid retained dominance, and still fulfilled requirements of the basic page plan as established by the art editors.

Advisor Fred Jappe was frequently consulted concerning the appropriateness of photos and copy, but only offered suggestions, which were usually accepted, but occasionally disregarded. Here Underclass Editors Hattie Bryant and Milly Stassis conferred with him about a unique location for Sophomore Class Officers. As Editor-in-Chief, Don Hall coordinated all material and enforced deadlines.

to Construct a Unique Yearbook

Becoming informed of the function, size, and meeting habits of each club was one of the first responsibilities of Organizations Editors Robin Sexton and Sandy Sroufe. This year we tried to discover the new aspects of each organization, what specific activities they were involved in, and what club members thought of their clubs. This was accomplished through interviews, and questionnaires sent to the sponsors.



As one of her many secretarial duties, Shelley Morin typed a letter for Business Editor Lory Rising, whose job was making connections between yearbook staff and faculty, handling financial matters, and controlling time cards. Art Editor Jan Adamczyk stared off into space in search of a novel idea for division pages. Her main function was constructing imaginative art work.

Director Challenged Vocal Response

"New blood breeds new ideas" was certainly true in our music department. Mr. Robert Cooper, an instructor new to Hoover this year, chose more familiar music with which students could identify, such as "Ave Maria" and "The Little Drummer Boy." His selections were also noted for their variety in tempo, style, and the period from which they originated. Partially due to Mr. Cooper was the closer association of the entire Fine Arts Department; for instance, the choir employed much brass and percussion for emphasis, and the Ensemble frequently used a string quartet accompaniment.

The Ensemble learned a collection of Spanish songs to fit any occasion for use at the churches, P.T.A.'s, and Kiwanis Clubs, for which they sang.

Hoover's vocal organizations performed exceptionally well in the city and county festivals in which all high school groups were judged and critiqued.

Hours of practice, an outstanding spirit, plus talent made this year's Ensemble in great demand. They gave ten community concerts during the two weeks before Christmas alone. But the strain of rehearsals and performances didn't lessen their love of music and joy of singing as a harmonious group.

Close attention to the advice and instructions of the conductor helped the violinists, as well as the other students, gain valuable knowledge concerning their part in the selected piece. Whether playing the melody of the first violin, or the harmony of the second, the musician had a difficult time-consuming job to accomplish, which required fifteen minutes of home practice in addition to the class time.

Motivated Musicians Created

Playing the lowest tones in the orchestra, the bass section formed the foundation upon which the rest of the music was built. The important function of the bass section, that of holding the entire orchestra together, was seldom realized by the student audience.

"Alright, let's start from the beginning. This time, perfection. O.K.? . . ."

To the average person, practicing hours a week would seem tiring. But Les Walker, president of orchestra, said that anyone with a genuine interest in music didn't mind the length of time and extra amount of work required. The earliest orchestras in Greece and Italy were used as aids to choruses until the 17th Century when it became an independent branch of music. In the 20th Century at Hoover the orchestra was again used as a supplement to the choirs in several numbers. The musical selections were traditional sophisticated numbers, but they were executed in a vivacious manner which made them appreciable to the student audience. A few examples were Tschaikowsky's Nutcracker Suite, von Weber's Oberson Overture, and Kodaly's Intermezzo. The type of instruments was moderately changed to include more violins, a harpsichord, and drums for emphasis. An old idea that was expanded this year was student solos and quintets. As in previous years, Hoover took honors at the District and Regional Festivals.

Many hours of tuning, playing scales, and rehearsing for the upcoming performance were invested by the students during the fourth-period class, as well as two hours on Wednesday evening and one hour after school on Friday.

Symphonic Tones

During the many rehearsals Mr. Gary Stollsteimer listened carefully detecting the "off notes" which hindered the perfection of the selected pieces of music.

Sixteen "hand-picked" musicians donated an additional 75 minutes weekly for the extra rehearsal of the "Stage Band." Playing more varied selections, usually the "Big Band" sounds of the 30's and 40's, this elite group no longer called themselves a "Pep Band." Their instruments were varied; the high winds, a drum and bass were eliminated and a piano; guitar, and more trumpets and saxophones were added to achieve the desired sound.

Perfecting the precision of Hoover's marching band rested on the shoulders of drum majorette Nancy Bell. Nancy not only had to lead the band, (signaling them when to march) but also had to discipline the band members when they got out of line.

New uniforms sparked the appearance of this year's band, on stage as well as off. Costing approximately eighty-five dollars apiece, the eighty-one new uniforms varied from past uniforms, in that silver buttons and tails were added to the coats, while new marlborough plumes were added to the hats. The dominant color of the jackets was changed from white to red. All unnecessary buckles and braid were removed for simplicity's sake. The band members were now able to wear their uniforms while performing on stage.

Practice and effort on the part of fifty-six musicians contributed heavily to the band's improvement. Class-time practice would seem sufficient for a band, but Hoover's members strived for perfection. The drum section began practicing the marching cadence in early September. Weekly each section spent two hours after school practicing their parts. Upcoming band festivals were an incentive which made our musicians strive even harder to obtain their goals.

Hooverites? Not yet, but they will be. These are only three of the hundreds of elementary school students whose lives were protected through the Key Club's Bicycle Rodeos.

Boys who wanted to join one of the most influential service clubs at Hoover had to submit a letter of application at the beginning of the year and were then voted in by the officers and two other senior members. They immediately became involved with the East San Diego Kiwanis Club which sponsored them and assisted the Kiwanis by selling tickets for their charity pancake breakfast and selling programs at their basketball games. Other services the Key Club performed included donating toys and clothes and physical labor at the Tijuana Orphanage and holding bicycle safety checks at various elementary schools. Their meetings were more formal than most clubs, being held in the evenings and occasionally including dinner at the Campus Chuck Wagon. At these meetings outstanding community leaders were called in to speak; for example, policemen and the referee from a national football league.

But Not Our Only Business

Honorary Ecivres had to relax occasionally. One enjoyable way was having dinner meetings at the homes of various members. Much work was actually accomplished at this meeting held early in the year at Paul Salerno's house, but there were moments of "amusement."

The Ecivres began functioning as a school and community service club during the summer by helping the attendance office with typing and filing. They were asked to assist in any needed area, such as measuring commencement gowns and guiding visitors at P.T.A. receptions and the election conventions. During Christmas vacation they sang at the Casa Blanca Rest Home.

Traditionally their main project was selling pep ribbons, the profits from which were used to purchase several volumes on critical literature for Hoover's library and movie film for the basketball team. They made donations to the Salvation Army, and supported the A.F.S., homecoming activities, and our scholarship fund. They bought two novels for Sam Hinton, the folksinger starring in the assembly they sponsored. Mr. Hinton effectively explained the history of the songs he sang as he accompanied himself on the guitar, harmonica, and Irish penny whistle.

Cardinal Co-ed representative Monica Gonzales announced the decisions of the council meeting to her classmates. Another of her important duties was to report all of their questions and comments to the cabinet.

Cardinal Co-Eds were active this year arranging their traditional activities more successfully than ever. The Dad and Daughter Banquet permitted some 120 girls and their spirited dates to have an exhilarating and meaningful evening.

There was a large gain on the annual money-making projects. More than $110.00 were received from the Homecoming Pennant and Mum Sales and $36.01 from the Christmas Mailboxes. Community services included collecting and distributing toys for needy children in Hoover's district through the Salvation Army.

All interested co-eds were invited to a council meeting at which Mrs. Ruffa was present to clarify controversial matters which had arisen at previous meetings such as dress regulations, dance curfews, and a flag corps.

Determined Dames Demanded

256 inquisitive sophomores and 149 maternal upper classmen gathered one evening early in the school year to observe a Do's and Don'ts Fashion Show, to obtain facts about the extra-curricular activities, and to get acquainted with many of the better half of Hoover's population.

Anxious spring cabinet chairmen were: Becky Slovacek, Irene Johnson, Marcia Huys, Linda Heckler, Bonnie Lockrem, and Jerry Waldram.

Spirited Cardinal Co-ed officers spent extra hours preparing plans to present to the representatives. Pictured were: Bobbi Forcier, Treasurer; Marcia Huys, Corresponding Secretary; Bonita Ponder, President; Marjie Moody, Vice President; and Sheri Fron, Recording Secretary.

Success in Each Activity

Mary Ann

The duet of Lenora Groves and Mr. Groves supported the theme of this year's father-daughter banquet, "Dad and Daughter Duet." Other accessories to the theme were decorations in the form of music notes, the traditional candle lighting service when the girls made pledges to their fathers, and a dancing contest involving dances from the 30's and 40's.

Spring fashions were modeled by female Hooverites at the Dirndl Day fashion contest held in the cafeteria for girls who created their own dresses. Miss Dirndl was chosen from about 50 contestants.

Fall cabinet members, Irene Johnson, Rose Reinicke, Esther Honig, Donna Jones, Madeline Moriyama, Nancy Penuelos, and Becky Slovacek were assembled in front of the bulletin board in which Girl-of-the-Month award recipients were displayed.

Hoover's spirit was both seen and heard this year. The long cheering voices and the gay red and white banners would not have been the same if it were not for the effort and hard work of the dedicated students who formed the Booster Club, the Art Committees, and the Downbeat Club. These spirited groups laid the ground work for the 1966-67 spirit when they began painting banners during the summer. Although making banners and decorating the stadium would seem to be their only jobs the groups did several other outstanding things, including sponsoring the "Pep Bus," and decorating and serving at the Sports Banquets.

In addition, one final measure was taken to insure the strong Hoover spirit, the Downbeat Club meetings. Composed of the song and cheerleaders, the cardinal birds, the Commissioner of School Spirit, and the Booster Club President, the club met to decide what steps were to be taken when a problem concerning spirit arose.

Putting up banners was a big job which usually took more than two hands. The Booster Club officers Secretary, Lynn Mason; Treasurer, Laurie Singer; President, Annette Bellmer; Art Chairman, Kathy Buono; and Vice President, Mary Kiley found that the more hands working together the easier the job became.

Fellowship

Jr. Y-Teens: Myrna Gutierrez, Kathy Buono, Milly Stassis, Betsy McGlohn, Linda Maxie, Kathie Scott, Cindy Covell, Jebbie Peterson, Debbie Baskerville.

Jr. Y-Teens after school business meetings were held bi-monthly in the room of their sponsor, Mrs. Cook. The attendance average was between twenty-five to thirty members. Shown here were: Mintie Bowman, Holly Knapp, Susan Gill, Beverly Nagelsmit, Michele Strey, Janet Brown, Christine Gommel, and Janet Gilbert.

The lack of organization and informality which characterized the Senior Y-Teens enabled them to enjoy themselves without being concerned with innumerable regulations and ceremonies. Their only activities were two sales, a Christmas dinner-dance, and a graduation breakfast, but long-lasting friendships were developed among its members through simple fun.

Activities and active members contributed to the larger membership of the Junior Y-Teens. In addition to the regular business meetings held after school, the co-eds planned various community services. A tea prepared for the occupants of a rest home and a picnic for orphans were two activities which added satisfaction to the life of each Y-Teen. The serious side of the Jr. Y-Teens was offset by joint meetings held with Key Clubs of other schools.

Enthusiastically participating in the evenings business activities were: Sandy Sroufe, Gulsun Turug, Lynn Engelkraut, Becky Peterson, Josephine Minard, and Sherry Sundstrom. Sr. Y-Teens held their meetings at the Y.W.C.A.'s Seminole Center.

Drama, Diction, and Deliberation Prevailed

Several of Hoover's topnotch orators, Kathi Hoffer, Paul Salerno, Lynn Love, Charlie Riendeau, Cindy Covell, Eric Feller, Tom Harrisburgh, Sharon Ely, and Paul Allen, were shown as they eagerly awaited the results of the city speech tournament at Lincoln high. As a reward for their outstanding deliveries they were presented a first place trophy.

Lynn Love, as Anne, called Peter, played by Jeff Simmerman, the most "insufferable" boy she had ever met. Her mother, Georgia Taylor, tried unsuccessfully to quell the argument. Mr. Frank, portrayed by Charlie Riendeau, understood that they were only having fun and refrained from interrupting them.

Senators and Thespians Entertained Themselves and Their Audiences

"Elizabeth Taylor as Virginia Wolfe" was portrayed by a future senator at the first initiation in the fall. To become a Senator interested persons had to be invited to join and then went through a "silent" period during which no talking was permitted for twenty-eight hours, and then were formally initiated by blood-thirsty senior members. Other amusements during the year were a Christmas party to which alumni were invited and a dinner in the spring. The thirty-six members of this year's club participated in various tournaments to secure honors for Hoover. The contests included the city and county Interpretation Festivals, a debate Tournament, and the Master's Tournament for all speakers who obtained excellent or superiors in previous contests. The club had contests among its own members and at the end of the year awarded trophies to the best senior male and female orators, best voice of a boy and girl, and most inspirational speaker.

Membership in Thespians was also elite and could only be obtained by earning twenty-five points. Two essential feats were trying out and appearing in a large production. Working behind the scenes, ushering, and selling tickets were services used to gain points. A new idea this year was having interested students present a complete play in front of several English classes. During the year the members held a wild initiation, attended "Lord of the Flies" and "Formio and the Merchant," enjoyed a dinner, and frolicked at a picnic.

C.S.F.—Stiff Requirements

To qualify for the C.S.F. students must have had a semester average of 3.3 in academic subjects. In spite of the stringent requirements 136 students obtained fall membership and 86 spring membership. Thirty-four students achieved further honors when they met the requirements for life membership, four semesters of membership. In addition to the traditional pins and carnations received at an assembly, Life Members wore gold tassels and cords during commencement. Additional prestige was given to sixteen Hooverites who maintained membership throughout high school.

Christmas caroling, coloring Easter eggs for an orphanage, and revising their constitution were new firsts initiated by this year's C.S.F.

Bringing pleasure and cheer to others as well as satisfaction to themselves, the senior members of the C.S.F. spent an evening of their Christmas vacation caroling.

Checking out books, carrying passes for counselors, compiling the absentee lists, and processing new books were just a portion of the jobs done by our office and library monitors. They were a necessity to the smooth functioning of the school procedures. While working with the counselors, librarians and secretaries, the monitors took advantage of their advisor's experience in carrying out their duties. They not only gained valuable experience but also were given credit for their assistance. Our monitors enjoyed themselves while working. Finding forgotten notes and homework assignments in books and coming in contact with a variety of people were only a few situations which highlighted the day's work for Hoover's monitors.

Was Gained While Assisting Hoover

Ducateers

Twenty money-minded girls served Hoover by participating in the Ducateers. Selling tickets for school functions, the girls benefited from their experience with money. The girls gave not only their lunch periods but also free time after school and evenings. Evening selling had one advantage; the girls were admitted to the games free after the ticket window had closed.

The club also had private sales which was sold to raise money for their treasury. This money was used to help finance their year-end trip to Disneyland.

Future Teachers

Each meeting of the Future Teachers was designed to give the student valuable knowledge concerning the choice of a teaching career. All business was left in the hands of the executive committee therefore eliminating boring business meetings and leaving more time for more important matters. The two monthly meetings were composed of various speakers and field trips including touring the campuses of City College, SDSC, UCSD. Various sales were used to raise money for the $50 book scholarship which was given to the most outstanding senior who did the most for the club.

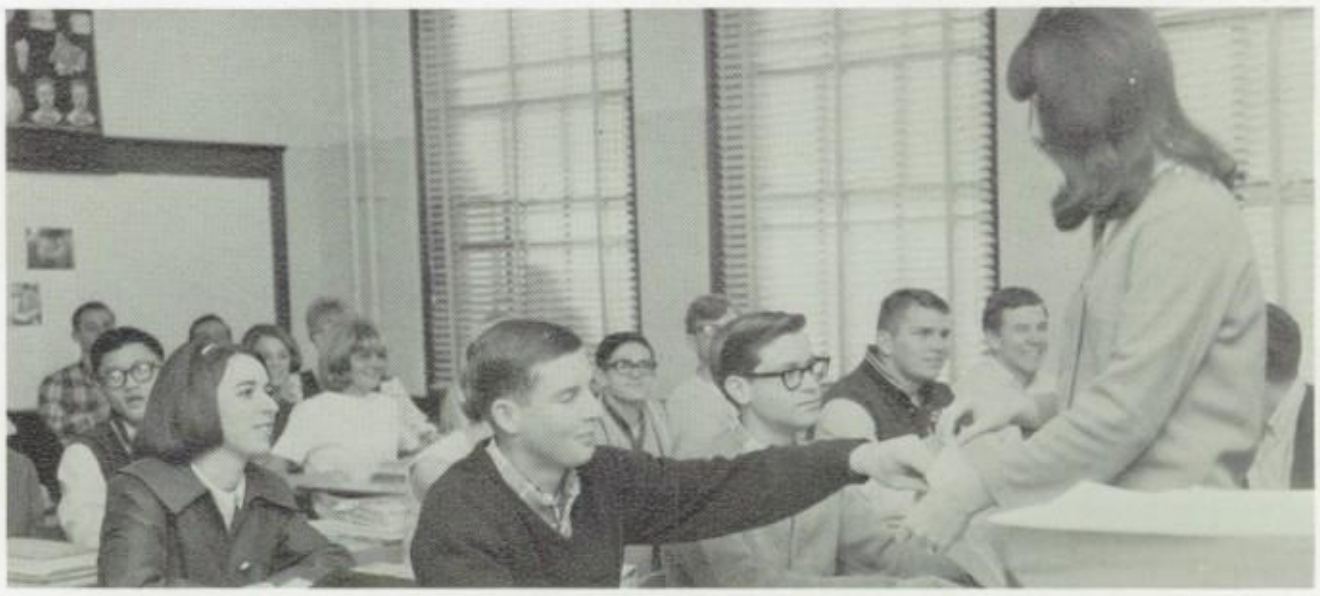
Volunteers

Viet Nam being the logical destitute area to send supplies at this time, the Red Cross Council filled health chests with school and health items purchased with the funds collected in the fall. Besides sponsoring the annual Red Cross drive and donating gifts, the council also promoted volunteer services for various organizations, including hospital work, the Teen-Aid program, the Back Yard Swim program, and Project Headstart. Most council members have participated in some of these projects and urged students to do so.



Elected Red Cross representatives collected coins from their class members during the annual Red Cross drive, this year held November of last year. Monetary contributions were more practical than gifts of clothing, etc.

Language Fostered

Ravished by a seemingly endless day, the hungry Hooverite could never resist the delectable delicacies sold after school. Sales, a highly profitable money-making activity, increased many club treasuries. Looking for more interesting and better selling items, clubs tried everything from Batman suckers to fortune cookies, but they always knew that they could sell the old reliable fudge and brownies.

International Understanding

Latin Club Created From Classroom Scholars

Formalities and rigid membership requirements were not observed by the Latin club, but it did have an extremely large number of enthusiastic members. Actually, anyone who took Latin could participate in club activities, and all members enthusiastically shared their individual talents for the success of sucker sales and parties. The annual end-of-the-year beach party was enjoyed by all.

Organizational problems were discussed in the monthly meetings of the Latin Club held during regular class sessions in the club room. President Alan Truitt led this discussion.

Latin American Culture Depicted at all Activities

Established for students to become familiar with our Latin neighbors to the South, the Pan American Club utilized films on Latin America at their after-school meetings and once had a peace corps worker from Ecuador speak to them. They involved themselves enthusiastically with Operation Amigos, selling "Saludos, Amigos" pep ribbons and hosting the farewell dinner held in the Amigos' honor. Their other services included two cookie sales, one in February of Valentine cookies. Parties included ice-skating in Mission Valley and a Christmas caroling party at which they journeyed through East San Diego singing Christmas hymns in both English and Spanish.

The movies viewed at this meeting were of the Amigos and their American families during their tours around San Diego. The film for these motion pictures was purchased by the Pan American Club from the profits of the pep ribbon sale.

Mr. Richard Wooley not only offered advice but also helped the stage crew members, Joe Schmardel, Mike West, Steve Currier, and Mark Molahan, in arranging scenery for the drama production, The Diary of Anne Frank.

Stage crew members were considered lucky—they were often excused from classes. Seldom was the hidden work considered when this judgment was made. In addition to the time spent when excused from classes, the boys spent an hour during second period, afternoons, nights, and even Saturdays setting up equipment needed for assemblies, rallies, plays, dances, and other programs. A quarterly average of twenty-five hours of overtime was spent to fulfill the duties of their job.

Clubs--

Hoover High's Handy Stage and P. A. Crews: Audible Audio.

Imagine how dull a football game would have been if you couldn't have heard the announcer, band, and cheerleaders. Without the conscious effort and skillful knowledge of the public address system crew, all would have been silent, not only at football games but also at basketball games and meetings in the cafeteria. In addition to setting up and taking down the equipment, the crew had to be ready and alert to any electrical difficulties which might have occurred. The two biggest problems the crew had to tackle were transporting the cumbersome microphones, amplifiers, and speakers; and tracking down broken wires. The crew received a great compensation for their job—getting into the games free.

Although setting up the sound equipment for the basketball games was a big job, the members of the public address crew, Chuck Branch, Richard Raynor, Terry Smith, and Bill Russell, always fulfilled their responsibility successfully.

Tuesday sessions under the supervision of sponsor Mr. Lowe, enabled the members of the chess club to further their skills and appreciation of this game. The meetings served two purposes; that of entertainment and challenging the mind. Members of the club often appeared to be in a deep trance while contemplating their next move. Engrossed in games were Al Shappard, Carl Dementer, Terry Tibbetts and John Justice.

One for Every Student's Interest

Inter-Club Council

Probably the Inter-Club Council could have won the award for the club with the least number of meetings. Promoting understanding between the co-curricular and extra curricular clubs and the administration, the fifteen members of the Inter-Club Council met only when problems arose. During the first meeting, Rosylyn Bornstein, Commissioner of Sales and Organizations conveyed to each club representative the guidelines specified by the administration that the clubs must follow.

Science Club-Casual

Including only eight members, the Science Club was one of Hoover's most informal organizations. Their after-school meetings in Mr. Nordstrom's room included drinking cokes and conversing casually with each other. Previous to vacation they enjoyed pizzas at their meeting to celebrate the Christmas season. The social services of the club included sucker sales, an Easter Egg Hunt, planting the Amigo Friendship Tree, and a giant end-of-the-year bash. In accordance with the scientific purpose of the club, the members took a field trip to the John Hopkins Nuclear Laboratory at U.C.S.D.

Hoover's Clubs Required Energy

Barbara Johnson demonstrated her powerful serve which helped her to dominate the first position on Hoover's tennis team. Competing with the various Eastern League schools, the team managed to either win or tie all matches excepting the one against Crawford. Playing singles were Barbara Johnson, Lynn McCreery, Robin Sexton, and Monica Gonzales. The first doubles teams were Pat Bilicki and Ida Harb followed by Carol Ganger and Sherri Forbes.

Class basketball teams challenged each other to compete against rival schools.

Seventh periods and after school gave gymnasts time to practice their skills.

Badminton players carefully watched to see skills demonstrated by expert players.

Obtaining a high scoring position in the team series contest was possible only if each member was as engrossed with rolling strikes as Chris Lovelace, president of the bowling club, was here. Skip Shaputnic, right, was determined to chalk up some points to raise his position. Enjoying a moment of relaxation were Lucy Britton, Allen Jones, Jeff Haslett, and Hal Dietz. Cheryl May

Did you know that for every hour you run you burn 800 calories? Playing tennis usurps 400 and doing calisthenics 300. Evidently a few feminine Hooverites were wise to these astonishing facts. Vibrant girls with an active interest in sports and a desire to be involved in constructive, worthwhile activities, and a strong figure consciousness depict those 67 who participated in Girls' Athletic Association.

After the false starts of previous years a solid Lettermen's Club was finally established at Hoover. Two preparatory meetings were held to approve a constitution and set exclusive membership requirements. To become a member lettermen must be voted in by a majority. An immediate project was sponsoring the Harlem Travelers, the proceeds from which were used to provide an adequate P.A. system in the boys' gym.

It was a fight to the death between "Wee Three," composed of sophomore girls, the "Aztec Spaztecs," and the "Brooklyn Killers." Of course the "BFD's" were not to be easily subdued. Team members united efforts in vieing for the highest score during the season on a single game and a three game series. But in the Boys' and Girls' High Game and High Series each individual was on his own. Significative trophies were awarded the winners of each category.

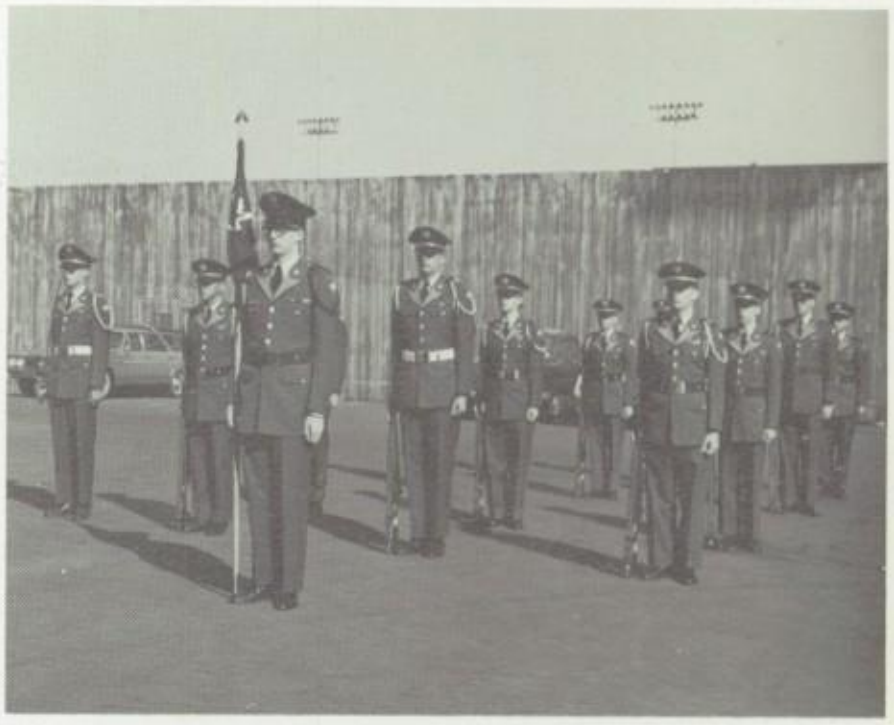
Reserve Officer Training Corps Prepared Students to Meet Responsibilities of Future Military Life



Known as the Silver Blades these cadets practiced everyday after school, so as to perfect their appearances when they marched in parades

Established to prepare boys for army offices, Hoover's Reserve Officers' Training Corps functioned just like a military unit. Ranks were given, from Private E-1 to Lieutenant Colonel, with those of higher rank leading the others in drill and classroom instruction. There were only two qualified instructors this year. To gain this distinction one had to have six hours of instruction under the direction of a colonel at the Education Center. Cadets were taught things they will use later in the army, such as First Aid, map reading, how to use weapons safely, and the importance of one's personal appearance and hygiene. The most important thing they learned was discipline, taught by a punishment of extra duty or lowered rank as the result of insubordination or any regulation violation.

The groups that practiced outside of class were the Silver Blades, the Rifle Team, the Drum and Bugle Corps, and the Color Guard. The Color Guard performed at many civic ceremonies, for instance, the La Mesa Post Office Dedication, as well as all high school functions. Of course they raised the flag every morning and took it down again in the afternoons.

Almost 150 people were at this R.O.T.C. potluck held in the armory for all cadets and their parents. The program included dancing and the final election and announcement of the queens.

Very often students were placed in the position of teaching their classmates. These two cadets were demonstrating the build of an M-1 rifle.

Army calisthenics were a new addition to the ROTC training program. Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays the cadets could be seen exercising vigorously.

Although a chain can only be as strong as its weakest link, the Senior Cabinet of 1966-67 successfully managed to strengthen its weak links to form a united and worthwhile group, devoting its time and effort to providing appreciated activities for the Senior Class.

Inspired by President Forrest Chu, a fortune cookie sale early in the year proved to be a new and ingenious method for increasing the treasury. Through the efforts of the Cabinet the Senior Parking Lot was restored, benefiting several members of the Senior Class. A new "first" this year was the battle of the Cabinets, Senior vs. Junior Cabinet basketball game.

Led the Way

The culmination of efforts of the Cabinet members resulted in well attended activities of high caliber during the spring semester. Held at the Scottish Rite Masonic Temple, the Senior Prom proved to surpass the expectations of the class. The Senior Dinner, Vespers, and Commencement each became cherished and memorable events.

Despite a slow start, this year's Senior Cabinet proved to be one of the finest Hoover High Seniors have been fortunate to have. It was through them that our ideas were made realizations, and our realizations were made memories.

California Girls' and Boys' State representatives from Hoover, Paul Salerno, Bonita Ponder, and Dennis Low, discuss their experiences at the programs, sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary.

State Representatives and Senior Counselors-

Miss Beavan and Mr. Allen Guided the Class of 1967

It is not conceivable that many people would be willing to accept the responsibility of programming more than eight hundred students for a schedule of classes acceptable to both the student and the school. And yet, Miss Jo Anne Beavan, left, and Mr. Wendall Allen, right, fulfilled this job for three consecutive years while acting as guidance counselors for the class of 1967. The thanks of those graduates have been earned by these counselors through three rugged years of high school educational planning for each student.

Miss Beavan was also an attendance coordinator as well as the sponsor of the Cardinal Co-Eds, which encompasses the entire female portion of our student body. Mr. Allen acted as Hoover's testing coordinator and was sponsor of the Key Club. These duties, together with the daily answering of urgent transfer requests or scholarship recommendations, kept Miss Beavan and Mr. Allen high on the list of extra-busy and extra-active faculty members.

Their assistance in planning programs and answering questions, and the extra-curricular sponsoring of school organizations has helped to make Hoover years pleasant and memorable. Their efforts and interest will long be appreciated.

Sacramento: Political Scene

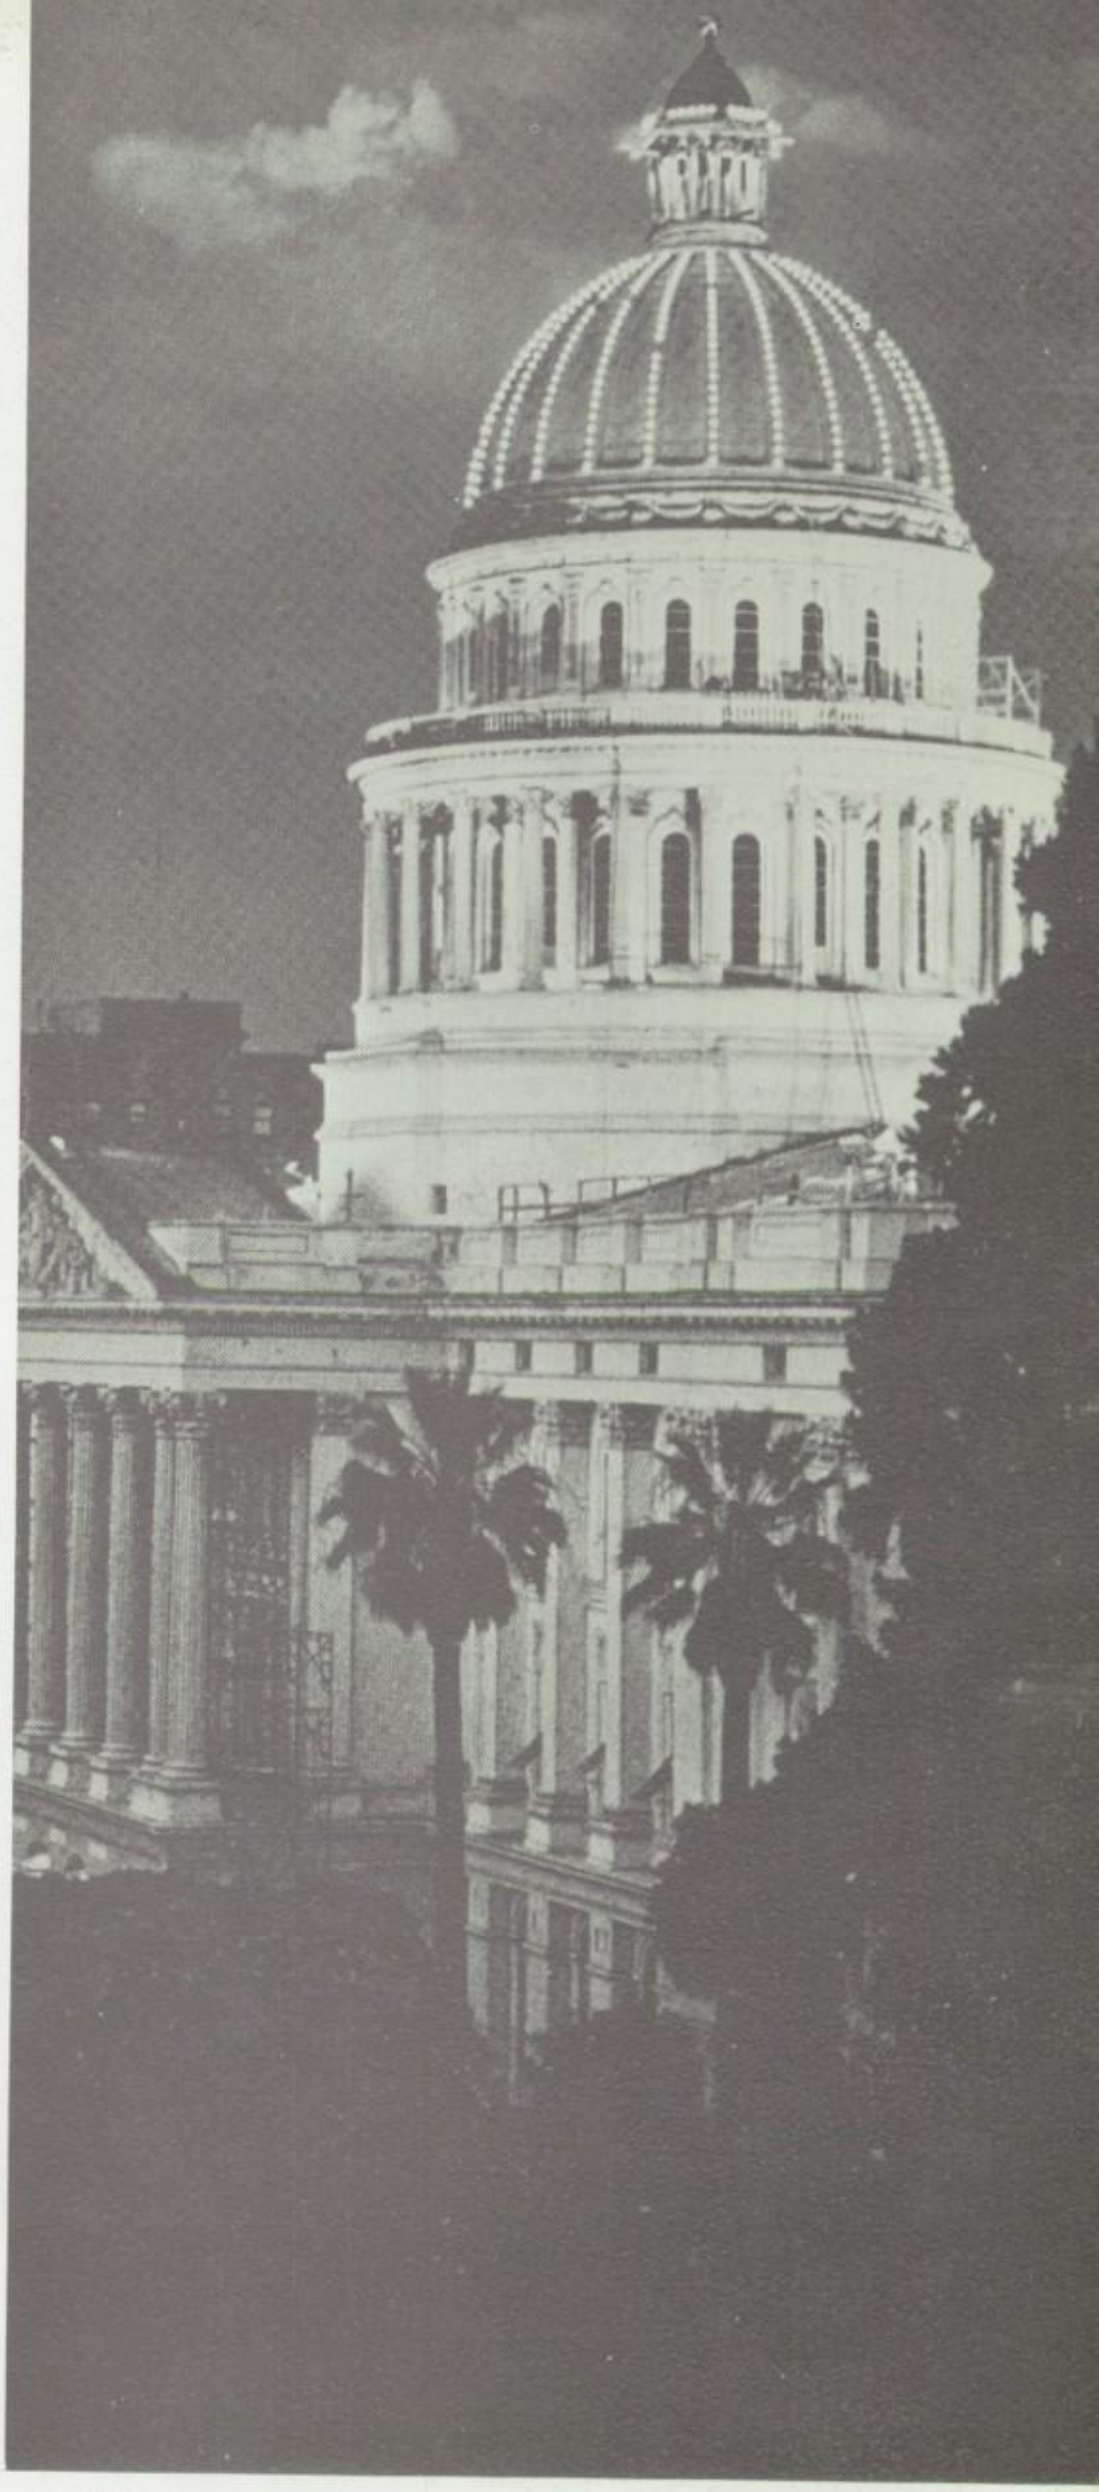
In 1776, the need of the people was basic: a government strong enough to unite the states, yet controlled by the states. The laws of our fore-fathers provided us with a firm groundwork for the codes, regulations, and procedures of our political society. With this in mind, California's Boys' and Girls' States were initiated. The established purpose was to enable as many students as possible to experience the governmental workings. Traditionally, these students have been ASB officers and class leaders, which essentially enables every high school student to benefit from their experiences.

As Hoover representatives, Paul Salerno and Dennis Low attended the convention and each served in high state positions. Dennis was elected to serve as State Assemblyman, and Paul acted as State Senator.

Bonita Ponder was chosen to represent Hoover at Girls' State and she took an active part in establishing governmental systems at the University of California campus at Davis.

Highlighting the week's activities was a trip to the state capitol in Sacramento. As each representative left his state, the challenge was made and the responsibility accepted " . . . to constantly endeavor to promote and perpetuate true brotherhood and democracy to which all humanity is entitled."

Honors Are Deserved



The State Capitol has been the location of constant movement and changes since California became a state. Here you will note that the dome and immediate surroundings were changed to accommodate our more modern times. The changes made on the Capitol were parallel to the dynamic movement of our government.

36 Awarded Life Membership in CSF

Outstanding records of both scholarship and citizenship has earned these students the honor of being selected as life members of the California Scholarship Federation. To be a member of CSF any time throughout high school is both an honor and privilege attainable only by having the required high grades and good citizenship. Because Physical Education is excluded, academic ability is the most important determining factor in acquiring membership. In order to become a life member, one must have qualified at least four semesters, which proves their ability and achievement. Life membership in the California Scholarship Federation opens the door for scholarships and additional benefits. Success and accomplishment is sure to be attained by the dedication of these students.

One of the largest groups of CSF life members in Hoover history is comprised of: Lynn Love, Jo Ann Miller, Forrest Chu, Paul Anderson, Annette Bellmer, Georgia Taylor, Stephen Potts, Kathi Hoffer, Cliff Sherr, Paul Marx, Vicki Miller, Yvonne Roos. Seated in the back are: Charles McLauchlan, Nancy Graham, John Gaughen, Gary Mastny, Dennis Low, Pat McAuliff, Wayne Garris, Linda Lowe, Emily Lu, Paul Salerno, Cheryl Effron, Bonita Ponder, Jean Berghausen, and Kathy Dunn. Not pictured life members are: Janice Adamczyk, John Adams, Yvonne Eberle, Allen Jones, Edward Ng, Kathleen Rudd, Susan Ryan, Susan Severtson, Neil Strachan, and Steve Van Bibber. These thirty-six students are to be commended for their fine performance.

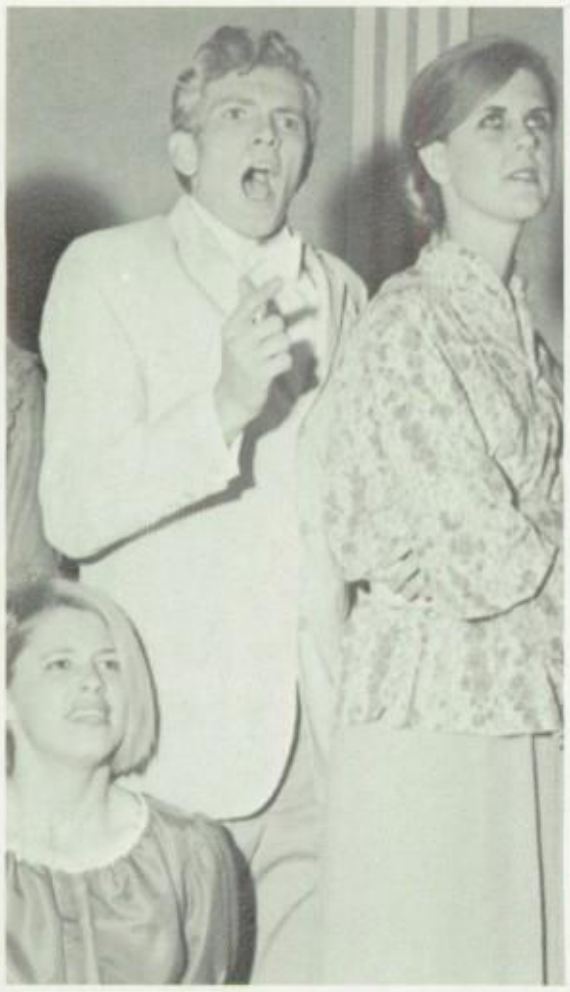
'67 Senior Play was Hit



"About Cordy's wedding, if anybody asks me. .

"The Happiest Millionaire" transferred its entire audience to the Philadelphia of 1917 into the home of Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, a millionaire who lived in a warm, wonderful world of his own creation. Based on the true story of the Drexel Biddle family, the play acquainted Hoover students with a boisterous millionaire who enjoyed boxing and opera singing, and allowed them to share the rollicking adventures of his rather unusual family life. The conflict of the plot developed as a result of the romance between Anthony's daughter, Cordy, and the mother-dominated heir of a multi-millionaire, Angier Duke.

The three-day run of the play in April was the culmination of almost seven weeks of dedicated work by a cast of Hoover seniors, their directors, and dozens of "behind-the-scene" workers.

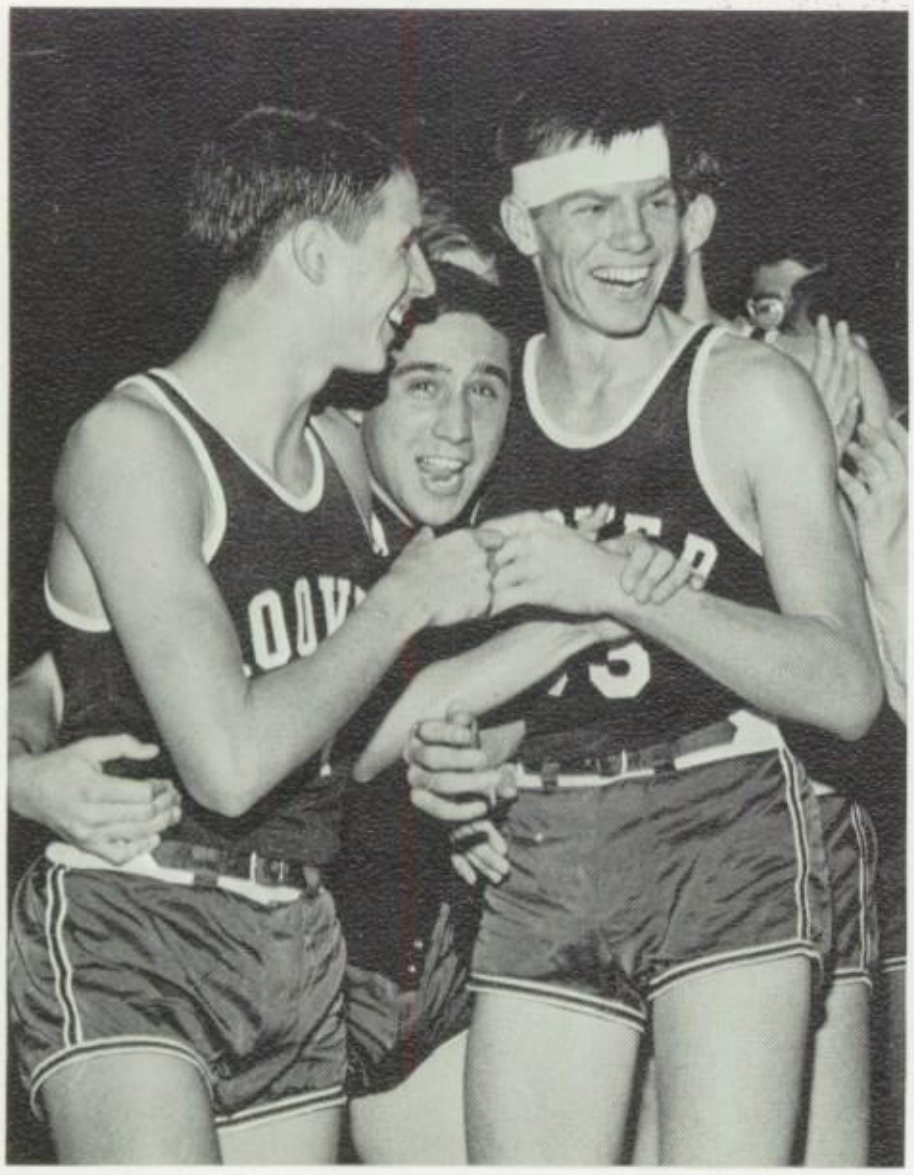
"They've built it into a great big feud between the families!"

Happy with Gators and Boxing

The happy cast of "Millionaire"

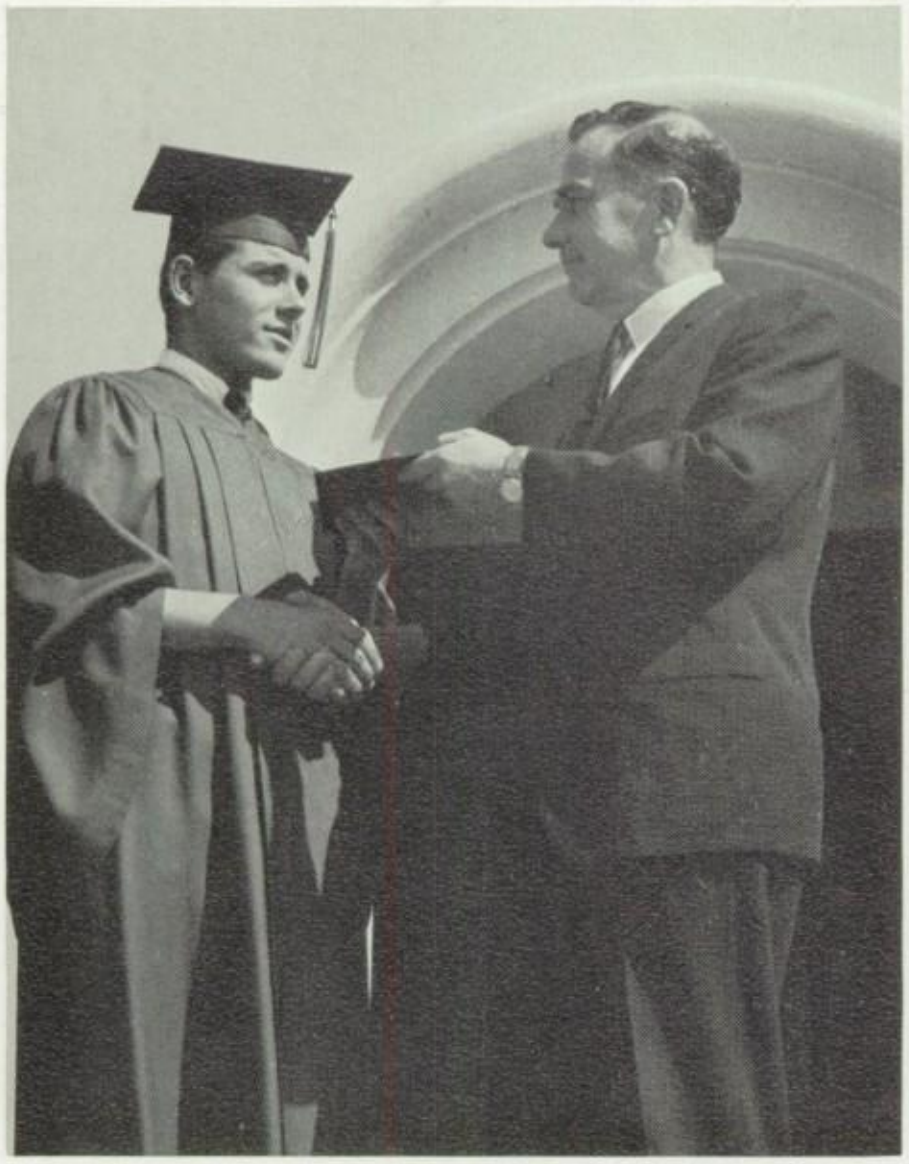
The Road Ahead Is

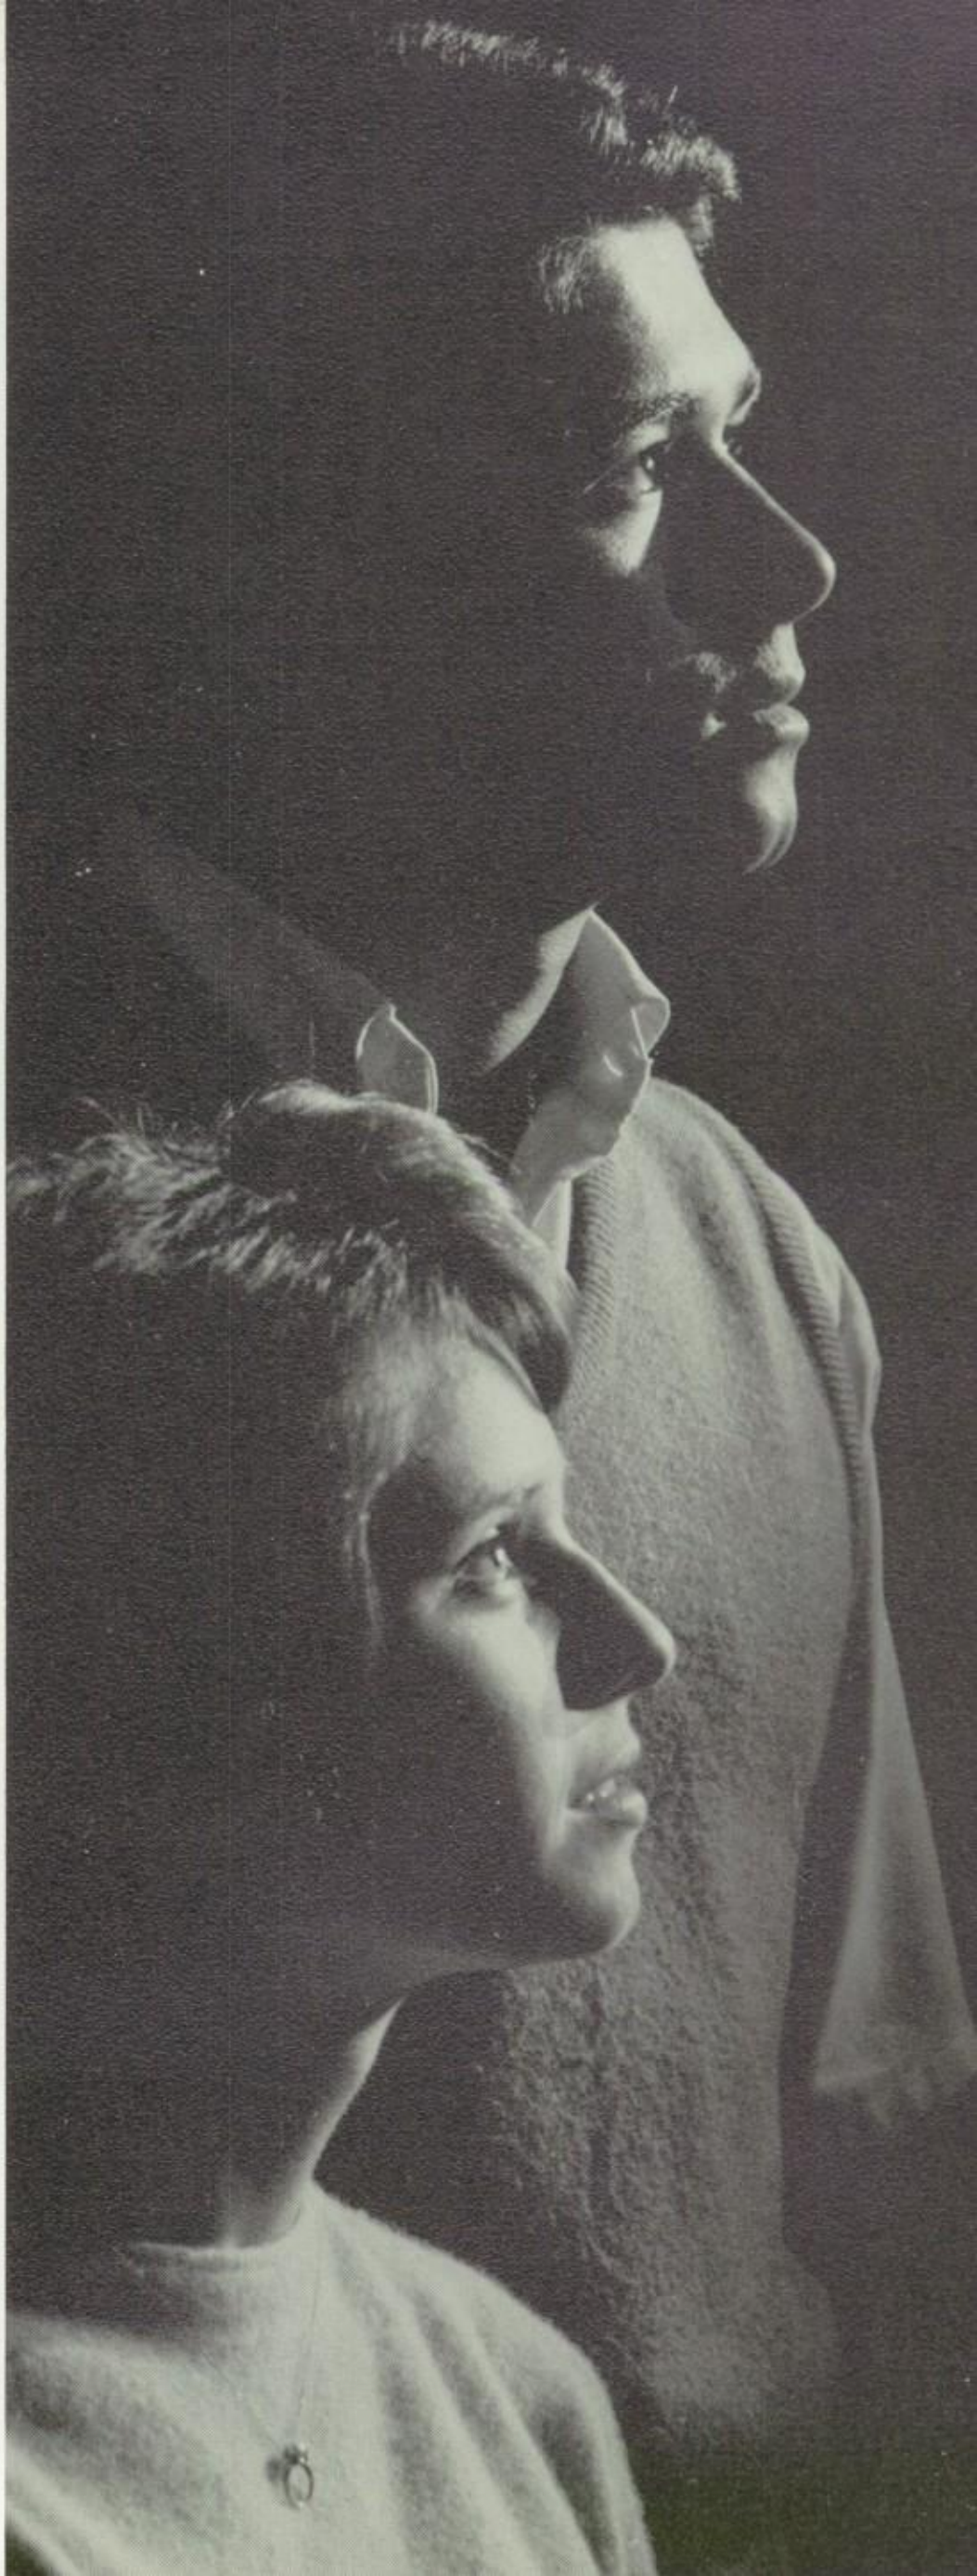
Many things face each of us as we view the road ahead. Our high school education has prepared us for easier travel on that road, but our success will depend on individual effort coupled with valuable knowledge already gained. Life's road will have moments of sorrow and unhappiness in the death of a friend, or the failure of a plan. It will have times of joy and happiness, when the beauty of the world and the peace of satisfaction are ours.



Paved with Sorrow and Happiness...

...Defeat, Accomplishment and Hope--





It Is Yours to Travel

Dear Barb,
Even though I haven't known you long, it's been terrific— (your home wonderful) taste in friends! Lots of happiness Love Christy Jerry

Our road will have times of great accomplishment, perhaps through college graduation or a long awaited position. But just as there will be the satisfying moments of accomplishment, our road will have the stony disappointment of defeat. Defeat, perhaps, through a goal never attained or a plan never tried. There is a full life ahead of us, and one aspect on the road will always make it easier. Hope.

Yes, the road ahead is paved with sorrow and happiness; defeat, accomplishment, and hope—it is yours to travel.

Generation on the Go....

Juniors hit it big for 1967 with the numerous sales and activities organized by the Junior Class Officers. The record breaking sale marked only the beginning. Cookies, baked by Junior coeds for the Junior Class' first sale, raised a total of $47.50, the largest amount made on any sale of this type in Hoover's history. The money from such sales went to supplement the Junior Class treasury and enabled the officers to highlight and elaborate on the various activities planned throughout the year.

Romance and fantasy were only part of the enchantment of this year's Junior Prom. Held on the eve of May 12th, it was well titled the "Twelfth of Never." The efforts of the Junior Class Officers well deserve to be remembered as a vital force responsible for the great success of Hoover '67.

What does it take to win first place? Over three thousand paper flowers and hundreds of enthusiastic Juniors knew the answer because they won in the competition for the best float, a new feature event for this year's Homecoming. Approximately six thousand paper napkins and fifteen cans of red spray paint went into the winning construction. Much of the sticky red stuff was sprayed on the hard working Juniors themselves, but this was just part of the fun to be found at a typical float-building session.

Imagination, make-up, and the Junior Cabinet made it possible for this new breed of the Pepsi generation to bounce back into the gay Roaring 20's on Junior Fun Night. Every part of the Boys' Gym vibrated as shoeless Juniors danced the Charleston to today's modern beat. These and other memorable events supported by the Junior Class Officers and the Cabinet remain to be cherished by the Junior Class—generation '67.

Mrs. Theresa Volz—Advisor

6,978,012 paper napkins were used to make the flowers for the winning Junior Class Float . . . would you believe 6,003? The top flower is Hattie Bryant, chairman of this project.

The Sophomore Cabinet is composed of Larry Lundeen in charge of Publicity; Charine Raynes, Activities; Sherrill Hider, Vice President; Trudy Companiotte, Secretary; Barbara Hatalson, Sales; and Tim Skelley, President. These cabinet members and officers meet with their committees to plan all sophomore activities.

Class of '69...

Tim Skelley—President

Sherrill Hider—Vice President

Trudy Companiotte—Secretary

Loose change and chocolate-smeared grins . . . sounded like the makings of a Sophomore class sale. $19.66 worth of cupcakes were sold by enthusiastic Sophomores at their first 10th grade sale. It scarcely took fifteen minutes for Hoover students and faculty to devour 400 of these various flavored goodies, which were baked by Sophomore co-eds' own secret recipes.

1967 Sophomores made the scene with their '66 Sophomore Class Float. Topping the Seniors, the Sophs took second place with their pastel petaled creation.

More Sophomores registered to vote than any other class. Their elected class Officers and Cabinet were responsible for many Sophomore activities throughout this past year. Among the class projects planned was an assembly with a Marine Officer as speaker, and a clothes drive for needy Viet Namese children.

The Sophomores were as much a part of Hoover as the Juniors and Seniors.

A Class With Class

Mrs. Elayne Morris—Advisor

What is High School like? . . . Wondering Sophomores were to find out as they stepped into the new dimension of exciting fun and hard work that came with being a Hoover student in 1967.
